> Report comes to Harper's Weekly from the restaurateurs of Chicago that one of the most distinctive of American institutions is in danger. "Pie, dear to Emerson and so many other good men, consumed thrice daily for generations throughout the length and breadth of the Great American Pic Belt, is no longer in demand at the lunch counter or the hotel table. The pudding, the biscuit, and the berry are slowly but surely taking its place in popular affection. The World's Fair did it, say the pie people. There were strange things to eat there, and visitors, leaving their good old fashioned ways, began to experiment. The insidious love of novelty having once taken possession of them, they were lost and few have returned to their old allegiance. Perhaps popcorn and soda water, corn bread and buckwheat cakes, will follow pie into oblivion. Who can tell? The outand a general line of kitchen look for the patriot is dark indeed in these latter days."

MRS. ST. ELTON.

UNE MORELLO was a plain woman, if you looked at her with her eyes closed; but little danger of her being pro-they were not. Her face was one that would naturally attract attention, but where the spell lay that drew one toward her so strangely, not three of her admirers could have told. Some were positive that it lay in the delicate intonations of her voice; others, that it was certainly in her face and manner: but it was rare that one mentioned her eyes. But there the fascination was wholly. Such wonderful power they possessed that her whole face seemed lighted with more than earthly beauty when her soul was speaking through her eyes. She was one that men raved over, went into ecstacies about, and go where she would, she drew lovers to her feet just as surely as the magnet draws the needle. It seemed to be nothing to her, positively nothing; and that fact had, perhaps, considerable to do with her crowd of admir-

Her cool indifference was quite enough to craze one; but there was such a heaven in the look she sometimes gave, that it quite compensated for her seeming coolness, and sent her suitors away more madly in love

It was not strange that Elton St. Elton followed the crowd, when their steps led to such an altar: indeed it would have been more strange had he taken another way. But he received no more real encouragement than the others. True, she now and then gave him rare smiles, and sometimes a rare look, when they were conversing, which made his pulses leap. By gaslight these little nothings satisfied him, and then, when her eyes were looking into his, and the spell of her presence was over him, he would have sworn that she loved him; but in the morning he awoke quite disenchanted, and, with his daylight eyes, it was easy to see how much he had to hope

But Elton St. Elton was not a man to be easly baffled. Strong-willed, and accustomed to ruling, he could ill brook defeat at woman's hands; and if for only his pride's sake, he would have striven hard to conquer; but now something more was at stake-he loved her. All the passion of his proud heart seemed to have gathered itself about this woman, and he had no more idea of letting her slip from his grasp, than the earth has of letting the moon slip off into space.

But he knew she did not love him yet. Her eyes never grew brighter at his coming; her cheeks never flushed at his earnest words; she was cool, calm, self-possessed always. He could not tell, either, whether she was aware of his devotion or not. She was so accustomed to receiving admiration that she took it naturally, as one takes the air they breathe, without thinking of compensation. If he had been sure that she had never loved, he would have thought his chances as good as others, but his own soul-if that was any criterion told him that such a calm as she seemed to have reached could only be attained through much suffering and storm. But if there was somewhere and, more, that he had also a right to in this world a form sacred to this hers. woman's heart, if there was a being on whom she looked with reverence and love, then Elton St. Elton meant to discover the fact. Suffer as he than he had intended it should. Colmight, it was surely better to know onel Brett turned to June and said and face the truth, than build his hopes upon the sand. He was thinking of these things, as he rode through the long avenue of oakes leading to the Morello estate, and as he sprang from his horse at the door, he said, half aloud:

"I could kill the man who should dare to come between us!"

In truth it might be dangerous business for a rival to stand upon the field beside him, for, being strong in his love, he might also be strong and deadly in his hate. Upon the steps—as if the Fates were

"Did I not tell you that he was jealous. Do go and hunt for him, for I am afraid of my life now," Colonel furthering his wishes for knowing of Brett answered, as June disappeared. She touched St. Elton's arm as he the future-he met a man in uniform, was standing in the door leading out a stranger who had just come out of June caught his arm. St. Elton felt the quiver of her hand, as she touched him. "Come back, St. Elton."

The clutch he had given her was like the grasp of a vise. "To von?"

"Yes." She covered her face. "Truly? It would not do to trifle with me now."

"Truly!" Colonel Brett laughed heartily when he knew that what he had said was true, and often tells June that if he had not stepped upon the stage when he did, St. Elton would never have proposed, and therefore she would never have been Mrs. Elton St. Elton.

The Cost of Religion. Both as a purchaser of materials and supplies, and as an employer the church has important relations to business. It is manifest, therefore, that the financial affairs of the church must be on a large scale, when all its interests are considered. Its expenditures foot up to an aggregate which is truly enormous. It takes $10,355,000 annually to pay the bills of the Protestant Episcopal Church; $23,863,000 to pay those of the Methodist Episcopal Church; nearly $14,000,000 for the expenses and contributions of the Presbyterian Church (northern): $11.-673,000 for those of the Regular Baptists, and $10,355,000 for those of the Congregational denomination, making an aggregate of $88,000,000 every year contributed by 10,768,000 members-an average of $8.16 per member. The grand total for all denominations could hardly be less than $150,000,000, and it might be many millions larger. Most of this is made up of voluntary contributions. The value of church buildings, lots and furniture in 1890 was about $680,000,-000. It is quite probable that it is now fully $800,000,000.-Dr. H. K. Carroll, in the Forum.

Not an Attractive Race. Tall, heavily, perhaps a little clumsily, built, with a complexion more like that of a Bordeaux monk mummy than of a frontiersman, fair haired and keen eyed, wearing a felt hat which shows clearly how often it has been used to lift hot kettles from the fire, a flannel shirt, stiff corded trousers, and home made veldt shoes, the average Boer looks a fine, uncouth lump of a man, serviceable, if not showy.

The Boer woman is dingy in coloring, clumsy, slovenly in person, rarely seen outside the mud hovel which forms the Transvaal farmhouse, or, when traveling, the tiny tilt of the wagon. Her only functions and interests in life consist of brewing coffee, baking bread, and rearing many children of so much the same pattern that inexpected maternal intelligence must be needed to distinguish the individual members of the brood.-Pall Mall

Advantages of Vaccination. The Rev. Henry Proctor, of Gloucester, England, recently bore this testimony to the advantages of vaccination: "I am now visiting over 100 smallpox patients from day to day -sixty in the hospital and over forty in their own houses in this parishand I believe I could undertake to go round from bed to bed and state almost without error which had been vaccinated and which not without any previous knowledge as to the facts, so marked is the difference in the effect of the disease in the two cases."

Paying Rent.

Commend me to the old lady in Rochester who sought novel and successful means of collecting her house rent last week. She was an old lady of ideas and a knowledge of human nature gleamed from a lifetime of experience with the world. She owned house and lot in Rochester, and the income from it was the substance upon which she depended for a life's necessities. It was rather an ostentatious house and lot, and the tenants were persons with a reputation to sustain, although apparently embarrassed for ready money. Two months' rent was due, and the agent was not able to collect.

The old lady said it was simple enough. She would collect it herself. Now, she wasn't a stylish nor an artistic old lady, but she was sturdy and imperturbable, and her proportions were ample and her spirit unfaltering. She rang the door bell at an early hour the other morning and inquired for the head of the family. The servant glowered at her and said he was not to be seen yet for two hours, because the family had not yet risen. The early caller was cheerful, and said she'd sit on the door steps and wait.

Finally she was granted an audience with her tenant, who put her off with smooth promises. "I'll just sit here and wait until you can pay it," replied the righteous collector, and she settled herself once more on the doorstep, took some knitting from her basket and prepared to spend the day. She made a quaint-looking picture, and all the neighbors wondered. When any one came within conversing distance and stared rudely at her she explained in a friendly way that she was waiting till the tenants paid their rent. She looked truthful, and no one doubted her, and her plan worked like a charm. The rent was paid long before sundown, and she ambled home more than ever convinced that nothing is impossible. - Philadelphia Press.

Gold Discoveries in India. Two interesting discoveries of gold have just been made in India. At Chota Nagpore, the Superintendent of Geological Survey and some other officials, who were prospecting, have struck a reef that is said to be remarkable for richness, "every piece containing gold visible to the naked eye. Arrangements are now being made lo test the real nature of the reef. The other discovery was still more recently at the village of Alnavar, in the Bombay Presidency, just behind the Portuguese settlement of Goa, and a Mahommeden, named Haji Esmail Mirza Baghdadi, who has had experience in gold mining, is credited with having made the happy hit-by accident, of course, in accordance with precedent. At any rate, he bought the ground, and obtained a prospecting license from the Government. He took some of the quartz to the Mysore Goldfields, had it examined, and found that it contained a "very paying quantity" of gold to the ton. Two shafts have been sunk to a depth of fifty feet, and Haji Esmail is floating a company with a capital of 2 lakhs of rupees. -Pall Mall Gazette.

The World's Interest in South Africa.

Placed in the center of the southern hemisphere, many thousands of miles from any other civilized community, and with a civilized population still extremely small in proportion to its vast area, South Africa has only just begun to excite the curiosity and interest of mankind. Twenty years ago even England seldom thought of her remote colony, except when some Kafir war compelled the despatch of imperial troops; and the rest of the script, world scarcely noted its existence. Now the discovery of extraordinary mineral wealth, a passionate struggle of races, and the possibility that the clashing interests of great Nations may come to mingle in that struggle, have drawn all eyes to the southern extremity of the African continenta continent the greater part of which was unexplored fifty years ago, and which even twenty-five years ago was an object of indifference to those European Powers which have of late been so eagerly striving for a share in it. - Century.

The Paper Match.

The latest novelty in the Broadway shops is the paper match, for it seem the time honored scheme of rolling up a piece of paper and using it for a lighter has been utilized by an inventor in the manufacture of matches. The invention promises to revolutionize match manufacturing, and is par ticularly timely because the wood for this paper is constantly growing scarcer and more costly. The new matches are considerably cheaper than wooden matches and weigh much less. The sticks of these matches consist of paper rolled together on the bias. The paper is rather strong and porous, and when immerged in a solution of wax, stearine and similar substance will easily stick together and burn with bright, smokeless and odorous flame. -New York Advertiser.

Bees and Clover. A striking instance of the practical usefulness of a knowledge of entomology was cited in a paper read at a recent meeting of men of science in Philadelphia. Red clover was imported into a British colony from the mother country, but to the great disappointment of the farmers it did not thrive. Then the entomologists told the farmers what the matter was; they had neglected to import bumblebees with the clover. The bumblebee, with its long proboseis, was the only insect that could reach the honey in the red clover heads, and therefore the only one that would fertilize the flowers. -Youth's Companion.

SUNDAY'S DISCOURSE BY THE NOTED DIVINE.

Subject: "Causes of Failures in Life."

TEXT: "Men shall clap their hands at him and shall hiss him out of his place."

—Job xxvii., 23. This allusion seems to be dramatic. The Bible more than once makes such allusions, Paul says: "We are made a theatre or spec-tacle to angels and to men." It is evident theatregoers were known in Job's time, be-cause he describes an actor hissed off the stage. The impersonator comes on the boards and, either through lack of study of he part he is to take or inaptness or other incapacity, the audience is offended and ex-presses its disapprobation and disgust by "Men shall clap their hands at him and shall hiss him out of his place."

My text suggests that each one of us is put on the stage of this world to take some put on the stage of this world to take some part. What hardship and suffering and discipline great actors have undergone year after year that they might be perfected in their parts you have often read. But we, put on the stage of this life to represent charity and faith and humility and helpfulness—what little preparents. little preparation we have made, although we have three galleries of spectators, earth and heaven and hell! Have we not been more attentive to the part taken by others than to the part taken by ourselves, and, while we needed to be looking at home and concentrating on our own duty, we have been criticising the other performers, and saying, "that was too high," or "too low," or "too feeble," or "too extravagant," or "too tame," or "too demonstrative," while we ourselves were making a dead failure and preparing to be ignominiously hissed off the stage? Each one is assigned a place, no supernumeraries hanging around the drama of life to take this or that or the other part, s they may be called upon. No one can take our place. We can take no other place. Neither can we put off our character; no change of apparel can make us any one else than that which we eternally Many make a failure of their part in the drama of life through dissipation. They have enough intellectual equipment and good address and geniality unbounded. But they have a wine closet that contains all the forces for their social and business and noral overthrow. So far back as the year 359, King Edgar of England made a law that dulger might be reminded to stop before he got to the bottom. But there are no pins projecting from the sides of the modern wine cup or beer mug, and the first point at which millions stop is at the gravity bottom of their own grave. Dr. Sax. of France, has discovered something which all drinkers ought to know. He has found out that alcohol in every shape, whether of wine or brandy or beer, contains parasitic life called bacillus potumaniæ. By a powerful microscope these living things are discovered, and when you take strong drink you take them. when you take strong drink you take them into the stomach and then into your blood, and getting into the crimson canals of life, they go into every tissue of your body, and your entire organism is taken possession of by these noxious infinitesimals. When in delirium tremens, a man sees every form of reptilian life, it seems it is only these parates of the brain in exaggerated size. not a hallucination that the victim is suffer ing from. He only sees in the room what is actually crawling and rioting in his own brain. Every time you take strong drink brain. Every time you take strong drink you swallow these maggots, and every time the imbiber of alcohol in any shape feels vertigo or rheumatism or nausea it is only the jubilee of these maggots. Efforts are being made for the discovery of some germicide that can kill the parasites of alcoholism, but he only thing that will ever extirpate them tinence, to which I would before God swear

America is a fruitful country, and we raise large crops of wheat and corn and oats, but the largest crop we raise in this country is the crop of drunkards. With sickle made out of the sharp edges of the broken glass of bottle and demijohn they are cut down, and there are whole swathes of them, whole windrows of them, and it takes all the hospitals and penitentiaries and gravevards and cemeteries to hold this harvest of hell. Some of you are going down under this evil, and the never dying worm vest of field. Some of you are going down under this evil, and the never dying worm of alcoholism has wound around you one of the slow of this one fully grown. The neighbors often noticed how tired sho looked, and old acquaintances have another coil around your tongue, terrawhile put a coil around your tongue, without complaint she waited and toiled ter awhile put a coil around your tongue, and a coil around your brain, and a coil around your lung, and a coil around your foot, and a coil around your heart, and some day this never dying worm will, with one spring, tighten all the coils at once, and in the last twist of that awful convolution you will cry out, "Oh, my God!" and be gone.
The greatest of dramatists in the tragedy of "The Tempest" sends staggering across the stage Stephano, the drunken butler; but across the stage of human life strong drink sends kingly and queenly and princely na-tures staggering forward against the footlights of conspicuity and then staggering back into failure till the world is impatient for their disappearance, and human and di-abolic voices join in hissing them off the stage.

Many also make a failure in the drama of hany also make a radius in the drains of life through indolence. They are always making calculations how little they can do for the compensations they get. There are more lazy ministers, lawyers, doctors, merchants, artists and farmers than have ever chants, arrisis and farmers than have ever been counted upon. The community is full of laggards and shirkers. I can tell it from the way they crawl along the street, from their tardiness in meeting engagements, from the lethargies that seem to hang to the foot when they lift it, to the hand when they put it out, to the words when they speak.

Two young men in a store. In the morning the one goes to his post the last minute or one minute behind. The other is ten minutes before the time and has his hat and coat hung up and is at his post waiting for duty. The one is ever and anon in the afternoon looking at his watch to see if it is no most time to shut up. The other stays half an hour after he might go, and when asked why, says he wanted to look over some enwhy, says he wanted to look over some entries he had made to be sure he was right, or to put up some goods that had been left out of place. The one is very touchy about doing work not exactly belonging to him. The other is glad to help the other clerks in their work. The first will be a prolonged nothing, and he will be poorer at sixty years of age than at twenty. The other will be a merchant prince. Indolence is the cause of more failures in all occupations than you have ever suspected. People are too lazy to do what they can do, and want to undertake that which they cannot do. In the drama take that which they cannot do. In the drama of life they don't want to be a common soldier, carrying a halberd across the stage, or a falconer, or a mere attendant, and so they lounge about the scenestiil they shall be called to be something great. After awhile, called to be something great. After awhile, by some accident of prosperity or circumstances, they get into the place for which they have no qualification. And very soon, if the man be a merchant, he isgoing around asking his creditors to compromise for ten cents on the dollar. Or, if a clergyman, he is making tirades against the ingratitude of churches. Or, if an attorney, by unskillful management he loses a case by which widows and or hans are robbed of their portion. Or. and orphans are robbed of their portion. Or, if a physician, he by malpractice gives his patient rapid transit from this world to the next. Our incompetent friend would have made a passable horse doctor, but he wanted to be professor of anatomy in a university. He could have sold enough confectionery to have supported his family, but he wanted to have a sugar refinery like the Havemeyers He could have mended shoes, but he wanted to amend the constitution of the United States. Toward the end of life these people are out of patience, out of money, out of friends, out of everything. They go to the poorhouse, or keep out of it by running in debt to all the grocery and dry goods stores that will trust them. People begin to wonder when the curtain will drop on the scene. After awhile, leaving nothing but their com-pliments to pay doctor, unlertaker, and Gabriel Grubb, the gravedigger, they disapothers fail in the drama of life through demonstrated selfishness. They make all the rivers empty into their sea, all the roads of emolument end at their door, and they emolument end at their door, and they gather all the plumes of honor for their brow. They help no one, encourage on one, rescue no one. "How big a pile of money can I get?" and "How much of the world can I absorb?" are the chief questions. They feel about the common people as the Turks felt toward the Asapi, or common soldiers. considering them of no use except to fill up the ditches with their dead bodies while the other troops walked over them to take the fort. After awhile this prince of worldly success is sick. The only interest society his illness is the effect that his possible cease may have on the money markets. Af-ter awhile he dies. Great newspaper capi-tals announce how he started with nothing and ended with everything. Although for sake of appearance some people put hand-kerchiefs to the eye, there is not one genuine tear shed. The heirs sit up all night when he lies in state, discussing what the old fellow has probably done with his money. It takes all the livery stables within fwo which makes the hearers fear that if the un-scrupulous financier does come up in the general rising he will try to get a "corner" general rising he will try to get a "corner" on tombstones and graveyard fences. All good men are glad that the moral nuisance has been removed. The Wall street speculators are glad because there is more room for themselves. The heirs are glad because they get possession of the long delayed inheritance. Dropping every feather of all his plumes, every certificate of all his stock, every bond of all his investments, every dollar of all his fortune, he departs, and all the rolling of "Dead March" in "Saul," and all the pageantry of his interment, and all the rolling of "Dead Maren" in "Saul," and all the pageantry of his interment, and all the exquiteness of sarcophagus, and all the ex-travagance of epitaphology, cannot hide the fact that my text has come again to tremendous fulfillment, "Men shall clap their hand at him and shall hiss him out of his place." You see the clapping come before the hiss. The world cheers before it damns. So it is said the deadly asp tickles before its stings. Going up, is he? Hurrah! Stand back and let his galloping horses dash by, a whirlwind of plated harness and tinkling headgear and arched neck. Drink deep of his madeira and cognac. Boast of how well you know him All hats off as he passes. Bask for days and years in the sunlight of his prosperity. Going down is he? Pretend to be nearsighted o that you cannot see him as he walks past When men ask you if you know him, and hesitate as though you were trying to call up a dim memory and say, "Well, y-e-s yes, I believe I once did know him, but have not seen him for a long while.' Cross a different ferry from the one where you used to meet him lest he you used to meet him lest he ask for financial help. When you started life, he spoke a good word for you at the bank. Talk down his credit now that his bank. Talk down his cream now that his fortunes are collapsing. He put his name on two of your notes. Tell him that you have changed your mind about such things, and that you never indorse. After awhile his matters come to a dead halt, and an assignment or suspension or sheriff's sale takes place. You say: "He ought to have stopped to be a support of the made too." sooner. Just as I expected. He made too big a splash in the world. Glad the balloon has burst. Ha, ha!" Applause when he went up, sibilant derision when he came down. "Men shall clap their hands at him and hiss him out of his place." So, high up and the crags, the eagle flutters dust into the eyes of the roebuck, which then with eyes blinded, goes tumbling over the preci-pice, the great antiers crashing on the rocks. Now, compare some of these goings out of life with the departure of men and women who in the drama of life take the part that God assigned them and then went away honored of men and applauded of the Lord Almighty. It is about fifty years ago that in a comparatively small apartment of the city a newly married pair set up a home. The first guest invited to that residence was the Lord Jesus Christ, and the Bible given the bride on the day of her esposual was the guide of that household. Days of sunshine were fol-lowed by days of shadow. Did you ever me that for fifty years had no vi cissitude? The young woman who left her father's house for her young husband's home started out with a parental benediction and good advice she will never forget. Her mother said to her the day before the marriage, "Now, my child, you are going away from us. Of course, as long as your father and I live you will feel that you can come to us at any time. But your home will be elsewhere. From long experience I find it is best to serve God. It is very bright with you now, my child, and you may think you can get along without religion, but the day will come when you will want God, and my advice is, establish a family altar, and, if need be, conduct the worship yourself." The counsel was taken, and that young wife consecrated every room in the house to Years passed on and there were in that home hilarities, but they were good and healthful, and sorrows, but they were com-forted. Marriages as bright as orange blossoms could make them, and burrials in which all hearts were riven. They have a family lot in the cemetery, but all the place is illuminated with stories of resurrection that lived have grown up, and they are all Christians, the father and mother leading the way and the children following. What care the mother took of wardrode and education, character and manners! How hard she sometimes worked! When the head of the household was unfortunate in business, she sewed until her fingers were numb and bleeding at the tips. And what close calcu-lation of economies, and what ingenuity in refitting the garments of the elder children for the younger, and only God kept account of that mother's sideaches and headaches and heartaches and the tremulous prayers by the side of the sick child's cradle and by and endured and accomplished all these vears. The children are out in the worldan honor to themselves and their parents After awhile the mother's last sickness comes. Children and grandchildren, summoned from afar, come soitly into the room one by one, for she is too weak to see more one by one, for sne is too weak to see more than one at a time. She runs her dying fingers lovingly through their hair and tells them not to cry, and that she is going now, but they will meet again in a little while in a better world, and then kisses them goodby and says to each, "God bless and keep you, my dear child." The day of the obsequies comes, and the officiating clergyman tells the story of wifely and motherly endurance, and many hearts on earth and in heaven echo the sentiment, and as she is carried off the stage of this mor: all life there are cries of "Faithful unto death," "She hath done what she could," while overpowering all the voices of earth and heaven is the plaudit of he God who watched her from first to last saying, "Well done, good and faithful servant; thou hast been faithful over a few hings, I will make thee ruler over many things; enter thou into the joy of thy Lord!"

But what became of the father of that ousehold? He started as a young man in usiness and had a small income, and having got a little ahead sickness in the family swept it all away. He went through all the business panies of forty years, met many losses, and suffered many betrayals, but kept right on trusting in God, whether business was good or poor, setting his children a good example, and giving them the best of ounsel, and never a prayer did he offer for il those years but they were mentioned in t. He is old now and realizes it cannot be long before he must quit all these scenes. But he is going to leave his children an inheritance of prayer and Christian principles which all the defalcations of earth can never touch, and as he goes out of the world the church of God blesses him and the poor ring his doorbell to see if he is any better, and his grave is surrounded by a multi-tude who went on foot and stood there before the procession of carriages came up, and some say, "There will be no one to take his place," and others say, "Who will pity me now?" and others remark, "He shall be held in everlasting remembrance." And as the drama of his life closes, all the vociferation and braves and encores that ever shook the amphitheaters of earthly spectacle were tame and feeble compared with the

TO TREAT A CRACKED HOOF. A crack extending from the top of he hoof of a horse down the side should be treated in this way. A V shaped cut should be made from the top of the hoof at the coronet down to the horn, about one inch, meeting at the crack. If possible, a wire should be passed through the edges of the crack and drawn tight, so as to close the opening as much as possible. The horn above the V-shaped mark should be rasped thin and a bandage kept over it always wet with water. As the crack goes down the new horn above will be closed, and in time the new growth will reach to the bottom, leaving a solid hoof. It is exceedingly injurious to the hoof to apply tar to it, as is often done. The tar contains an acid, which damages the horn, while it hardens the hoof and prevents the absorption of water, which the horn needs to preserve its elasticity and tenacity .-- New York Times.

HOME MADE EARTH SCRAPER.

Iron shovels or scrapers for removing earth are somewhat expensive. A good substitute can be made at home, after the plan shown in the accompanying illustration. It should be of hard wood, and the edge in front should be covered with sheet iron, after which an old piece of crosscut saw may be fastened beneath the edge and turned up at the sides, as shown in the sketch. The iron straps to which the chain is attached should go around the back as well as the sides of the scraper, to give strength. Such an implement is exceedingly handy on the farm for leveling off ridges and filling depressions, and for scraping up into heaps the manure that becomes scattered over the barnyard .- American Agri-

THE FUTURE OF THE HORSE.

There is a class of writers that are determined to attend the funeral of the horse interests whether or not. The horse with them is to become absolete in consequence of the bicycle, electricity, etc. This sort of argument looks well and may appear conclusive on paper. But Licycles or electricity will not draw the plow or do the farm work that horses are now used for doing. Nor will they do the practical work for which horses are used in the cities and towns. Every farm will always have its horses. The streets of every city will always be crowded with cles and electricity taken the places of whether it will increase or decrease horses. On what lines have the bicypurposes. That this makes a consider able hole in the demand we admit, but so far as the street cars are concerned. they never made a demand for a class of horses that were purposely bred for the purpose. The street car horses were usually good horses, but they were scrub horses. As to the bicycle taking the place of the driving horse, this sort of demand was never as dependable as that for the work horse was. There is room in this country to-day for 10,000,000 first-class horses. and the demand will make itself felt more and more when times become better, until it is supplied. There are 2,000,000 farms on which there should be better horses and on which the farmers will eventually see that a good team means money in their pockets. There is a "slew" of good-for-nothing horses in the cities and towns, too, and replacing them with better horses. would mean that the work of teams would be more quickly, more easily and consequently more profitably done, and some time, in the natural progress of things, they will be replaced. It is nonsense to talk about the bicycle or electricity making the horse useless. They can do nothing of the kind .- The Silver Knight.

FARM AND GARDEN NOTES.

Great strides are being made toward educating the owners of cows in the theory and practice of correct feeding, as well as in the skill and science of breeding, the results of which are continually manifested in the class of butter breeds of cattle offered for sale by practical diarymen.

It is notably the case with dairymen to complain that cows are not paying simply because they are not giving over the same large profits they had done in previous years. While this is no criterion of the real basis of prosperity, it is no doubt a feature of very great disappointment to hundreds of dairymen with large capital invested in that business.

Guinea fowls are quite useful where there are many enemies to poultry, such as hawks, snakes, and rats, for they are ever on the alert to detect danger and give the alarm quickly, and in such shrill and constant tones that the enemy generally leaves before the or comes upon the scene with for its gamey flavor, while their eggs, though small, are exceedingly rich, up for the lack of size.

Parsnips With Cream-Scrape three large parsnips, slice them half an inch thick and two inches long, and beil them in salted boiling water until they are tender. Then drain off the water, add two tablespoonfuls of butter and half a cupful of cream; season them palatably with white pepper and

The Days Long Drawn Out.

Do you know that the day, which now only twenty-four hours long, slowly increasing in length, and that it will eventually be twenty-five twenty-six or even 100 hours in length! This statement, strange as it may sound to one who has never read the results of observations made on that score, says the St. Louis Republic, is believed to be true in every respect. Not only will the earth's motion slow up until the day will be one, two and three times as long as it is at present, but this pace-slackening process will increase with time, until the day will eventually be a week or even a month in length. The "retarding medium," which the astronomers speak of as be ing the cause of this phenomena, is not fully understood at present. Professor Ball says that it is the friction of the tides which is responsible for the most of it. He urges that the time will come when the day will be a full year in length. Others among the in vestigators along this line declare that it will be absolutely impossible for the day-lengthening process to increase beyond one lunar month. This certainly looks plausible if we consider the tides as being the cause of the trouble. However, Professor Ball, who has long been astronomer royal of Ireland and the greatest British authority on astronomy, knows just about whereof he speaks, and if he says the day must eventually lengthen a year, we had better prepare for the nightless season without asking any questions. The editor has never seen a word from Professor Ball as to what will be the final outcome of this day-lengthening process-as to horses? On street cars and for drawing after the one-year-day period has been reached. Evidently the process will continue, and the next day will be a fraction longer and finally the earth's rotation will cease altogether. Some argue that when that time arrives the earth will take a sudden tilt to the west, and from that time forward the revolution will be in the opposite di-

A Monster Sawfish. One of the most wenderful catches ever made with the rod and reel was accomplished by Mr. N. M. George, of Danbury, Conn., on Friday last. He was fishing for tarpon at the Head, a few miles down the river, with A. F. Gonzales as guide, when he got a strike. It did not take long to ascertain that the game was even bigger than the silver king, and Mr. George settled down to give the fellow battle. The fish soon came to the surface. He was a monster sawfish and he slashed his saw about in the water at a great rate. Mr. George handled the fish most skilfully and proved that he is a thorough expert in the use of rod and reel. The battle lasted one hour and twenty minutes, when the sawfish was brought to the gaff and killed. He measured fourteen feet eight inches in length, and weighed 625 pounds. His saw was forty inches in length and five in width, and his flippers measured fifty-six inches. This gives Mr. George the record on the Caloosahatchee for the largest sawfish ever caught with rod and reel. Mr. George says he doesn't care to tackle another, and this is the conclusion of all the noted experts who have ever played a sawfish. This may read like a great fish story to people who know little of the great fishing on the Caloosahatchee River, but the facts as given are absolutely correct. The gentlemen who came here from all parts of the world to catch tarpon are genuine sportsmen. and would scorn to have an incorrect record made of any of their catches, which are all made with rods and reels.

A WOMAN'S GREAT UNDERTAKING.

Mrs. Leland Stanford has shown that a woman's word is as good as her bond. When the endowment fund of $2,500,000 bequeathed by her husband to the University of California was released by the recent decision of the Supreme Court of the United States, she announced her intention to pay over this entire amount within sixty days. Financiers and lawvers both laughed at the idea, and declared that she would never be able to do this. However, the court's decision was announced on the 2d day of March, and on the 3d day of May interest bearing securities to the full amount were delivered to the trustees of the university. But Mrs. Stanford's generosity does not stop here. The three great ranches which formed part of the university endowment are unproductive at present, under the management of men, and Mrs. Stanford has undertaken to make them profitable. Doubtless she will do so, and thus demonstrate afresh what a woman can do when she is in earnest. -Atlanta Constitution.

THE CZARINA'S ETIQUETTE. The Tsaritza of Russia has decreed that several obsolete forms of Russian court etiquette are to be revived, and the result will probably be the introduction of several striking and picturesque customs. Her Imperial Majesty has also ordained that all ladies received by her shall kiss her hand, presentations being made after the English fashion. This is rather a blow to the Russian ladies, who infinitely preferred Dowager Empress Maria Feodorowna's gracious manner of dis pensing with the more ceremonious hand kiss and bestowing a friendly shake instead. While all the ladies, however, and most of the men, hasten to perform the revived mode of greeting with as much grace as possible, the French Ambassador, Count Montebello, and a few others have declined to accede to the innovation, and while the Tsaritza offers her hand to the Count to kiss he contents himself with ignoring her intention and giving it a respectful but firm shake instead, bowing politely, but not particularly deep. The motive of the act is, needless to add, not disrespectful, but is endowed by some with a political significance, and held to testify to the terms on which France stands with her ally. To the feminine mind, all the same, it would seem more natural if the Ambassador concurred with Her Majesty's wishes on the subject, and more in keeping with the bearing of a gallant Frenchman. - Chicago Times-

An Epicurean Cat.

There is a huge cat in the vicinity of Fulton Market that has an abnormal appetite for oysters. This cat is a feline monster, and weighs nearly twenty-one pounds. He makes his home on oyster boat No. 4, and is well known to both dealers and patrons of the market. He lives on oysters while the lusicious bivalves are in season, and during the summer months he boards in the country at a cost of $3.50 a month, which his proud owner, Edward Simmons, willingly pays. The cat is known by the name of Tom. He is a black and white cat | and has a companion named Jim, that also has a peculiar partiality for oysters, though his daily menu is not quite so exclusive as Tom's. Jim has coat of gray and black. They are both good foragers, and help themselves to the bivalves whenever they are hungry. This they do by putting their paws into the pails full of oysters that are constantly standing around. They usually pick out the largest and finest specimens, which they swallow with appreciative smacks.-New York Sun.

Take Care of Your Watch. The mechanism of the human body reminds one very much of the mechanical construction of a fine watch, the wheels, cogs and screws answering to the muscles, and the delicate springs are what may be likened to the nerves. One cannot move without the other, and yet the action of each is sepa-rate and distinct. So it is with the nerves and muscles of the human body. The ailments of the muscles are distinct from the allment or the nerves, and, like the mechanism of a watch, if exposed to sudden change of heat and cold, they get out of order and for the time are useless. Especially is this so at this season of the year, when from exposure, negligence or west of legligence or want of care, the nerves are attacked and neuralgia in its worst form sets in. But like oil to the works of a watch so is St. Jacobs Oll to the nerves thus deranged. The Blue and the Gray.

Both men and women are apt to feel a little blue, when the gray hairs begin to show. It's a very natural feeling. In the normal condition of things gray hairs belong to advanced age. They have no business whitening the head of man or woman, who has not begun to go down the slope of life. As a matter of fact, the hair turns gray regardless of age, or of life's seasons; sometimes it is whitened by sickness, but more often from lack of care. When the hair fades or turns gray there's no need to resort to hair dyes. The normal color of the hair is restored and retained by the use of with Mr. Chas. E. Johnson, manager gents' furnishing goods department, "The Fair," Seventh and Franklin avenues, St. Louis, he said: "Several years ago I was troubled with an aggravated case of Dyspepsia, and of course the first thing I did was consult a physician, As I had always enjoyed the best of health I was worried a good deal over this, my first illness-that is, the first I could remember since the ailments common to childhood-and my only desire was to get well as speedily as I could. I took regularly all the medicines as my doctor prescribed them. I must say that in a short time I felt all right, thought I was cured, and stopped taking the medicine. But it wasn't long before I was feeling as badly as ever, and again I had recourse to the doctor. This kept up for some time; until at last I made up my mind I would quit doctoring and try some of the remedies I saw advertised from day to day Well, this was worse than ever, and in most cases I didn't even get temporary relief. So I didn't know what to do and made up my mind that I would have to pass the remainder of my days in suffering. Well, to cut a long story short. I had read so much of Ripans Tabules that I concluded I would give them a good trial. It said, 'one would give relief,' and I thought if one could give relief a whole lot might cure me, I purchased two boxes from a druggist for one dollar, and when I had finished them I was feeling better than I had for years. I continued to use them, and to-day believe I am a well man. Once in a great while I do
