The Republican.

LITCHFIELD: THURSDAY, JUNE 29, 1848.

V. B. PALMER, Is our Agent to receive, and forward Subscriptions, and Advertisements, to the Republican, at his Office, in the following places:

DEMOCRATIC TICKET. FOR PRESIDENT, LEWIS CASS, of Michigan. FOR VICE-PRESIDENT, WM. O. BUTLER, of Kentucky.

"IF WE ARE NOT STRUCK WITH JUDICIAL BLINDNESS, WE SHALL CLING TO THIS CONSTITUTION AS THE MARINER CLINGS TO THE LAST PLANK, WHEN NIGHT AND THE TEMPEST CLOSE AROUND HIM!"—Lewis Cass.

The Barnburners' Convention. This strange, pie-bald, ring-straked, and speckled body assembled at Utica in the State of New-York, on the 22d of June, and nominated MARTIN VAN BUREN for President, and HENRY DODGE for Vice President.

The proceedings of the Convention were a complete fit simile of Bedlam. The Convention seemed to be actuated by no well defined principles.—A disorganizing spirit seemed to pervade the whole assembly.

We envy not the men, who, upon such an absurd and frivolous pretext, can sow the seeds of disaffection, disunion, and disorganization. We have but a poor opinion of that man's political integrity, who, after having once been made President by a great and generous party, can now suffer himself to become the tool of a miserable faction of political fanatics, for the express purpose of defeating our unexceptionable Candidates, without assigning any valid reason for such absurd and inconsistent conduct.

The gross ignorance of that Convention is apparent from the fact, that they had the unblushing effrontery to declare, that General Cass would not receive the votes of one solitary State in the Union!

We shall see whether such a ridiculous prediction will be verified or not. The Barnburners need not think that they are strong enough to prevent the election of Generals Cass and Butler. If they set so little value upon their votes, as madly to throw them away upon Van Buren and Dodge, it is their own look out, and not ours.

All these difficulties have originated from this insane Wilnot proviso humbug, which contemplates making the President complete master of the National Treasury, with power to draw therefrom enormous sums of money, to purchase the freedom of such a number of slaves as he may see fit to designate. That would, indeed, be grasping the "purse and the sword" with a vengeance.

It is astonishing, that in this enlightened age, any man who claims to be an intelligent freeman, can be found, so blinded, so reckless, and so desperate, as to join issue with a faction that would sweep away every land-mark of virtuous liberty, and plunge their country into the inextricable gulf of chaos and confusion.

Magnanimous.—When Mr. Buchanan, the great Statesman of Pennsylvania, first heard of the nomination of Generals Cass and Butler, his enthusiasm knew no bounds, and he exclaimed, in perfect ecstasy—"Now, boys, let us strip off our coats, and go to work with energy for the nominees!"

Not less ardent of feeling was manifested by Vice President Dallas, on hearing the same cheering intelligence. He exhorted his friends to "stand by the Candidates, in weal or woe—by all means, stand by them!"

The Voice of Maine.—The Eastern Argus says: "Every Democratic paper, throughout the length and breadth of Maine, hastened immediately, upon the receipt of the nomination, to unfurl their banners and fling them to the breeze. We tell our friends abroad, with perfect confidence, that they may rely on our delegates' pledge at the Baltimore Convention, and chalk Maine down GOOD FOR TEN THOUSAND!"

Andrew Jackson's Opinion of Wm. O. Butler.

The following letter was written by the late President Jackson, to a friend, who requested him to give his opinion in writing, concerning the true merits of General, (then Colonel) Butler:

HERMITAGE, Feb. 20, 1844. "My Dear Sir:—You ask me to give you my opinion of the military services of the then Captain, now Colonel Wm. O. Butler, of Kentucky, during the investment of New-Orleans by the British forces in 1814 and 1815.

"I wish I had strength sufficient to speak fully of merit of the services of Col. Butler on that occasion; this strength I have not. "Suffice it to say, that on all occasions, he displayed that heroic chivalry, and calmness of judgment in the midst of danger, which distinguish the valuable officer in the hour of battle.

"In a conspicuous manner were those noble qualities displayed by him, on the night of the 23d December, 1814, and on the 8th of January, 1815, as well as at all times during the presence of the British army at New Orleans. In short, he was to be found at all points where duty called.

"I hazard nothing in saying, that should our country again be engaged in war during the active age of Col. Butler, he would be one of the very best selections that could be made to command our army, and lead the eagles of our country on to victory and renown. He has sufficient energy to assume all responsibility necessary to success, and for his country's good.

52 Reasons in Favor of Cass.

- There are no three stronger friends in the United States, than the three most illustrious Generals, Cass, Butler, and Taylor. Gen. Cass should have the preference, for the next Presidential term, for the following reasons, viz: 1. His earlier display of equal bravery in the last war with Britain.

- 2. His seniority.
- 3. His superior statesmanship.
- 4. His unrivalled talents as a diplomatist.
- 5. His greater talents as an orator.
- 6. His sound, practical wisdom.
- 7. His temperance.
- 8. His consistency.
- 9. His urbanity.
- 10. His kindness.
- 11. His benevolence.
- 12. His liberality.
- 13. His charity.
- 14. His public spiritedness.
- 15. His plainness of manners.
- 16. His extensive intelligence.
- 17. His superior scholarship.
- 18. His firmness in friendship.
- 19. His decision of character.
- 20. His energy of mind.
- 21. His perseverance.
- 22. His mildness of temper.
- 23. His extraordinary self-possession.
- 24. His remarkable discrimination.
- 25. His sound morality.
- 26. His clear sense of justice.
- 27. His magnanimity.
- 28. His perfect knowledge of international law.
- 29. His unwearied and astonishing industry.
- 30. The deep interest which he takes in the welfare of the rising generation.
- 31. His love of piety, and of the institutions of the Christian religion.
- 32. The lively interest which he takes in internal improvements.
- 33. His sacred regard for national honor.
- 34. His profound respect for popular rights.
- 35. His perfect knowledge of the Constitution.
- 36. His profound regard for that great national palladium.
- 37. The great public services which he has rendered his country, in various important civil capacities:

- 38. As Governor of Michigan.
- 39. As Ambassador to Paris.
- 40. As Senator in Congress.
- 41. As having obtained for his country the freedom of the seas.
- 42. As having secured the respect of all great commercial nations.
- 43. As having won for himself a great and a good name, at home and abroad.
- 44. As having stood up firmly and unwaveringly for his country, during the recent Mexican war.
- 45. As having won the confidence and esteem of former Presidents—particularly, Madison, Monroe and Jackson.
- 46. As having added an inexhaustible fund to the literary treasures of his country.
- 47. As having maintained pure republican principles, without deviation, under all circumstances.
- 48. As being strongly in favor of universal education and universal liberty.
- 49. As being a great philanthropist, in the broadest sense of the term.
- 50. As having sustained without envy, his rival, Mr. Polk, for the Presidency.
- 51. As having lived thus far, so deeply in the affections of the mighty West, that he is there called FATHER—an appellation, which has never been bestowed upon any statesman before, since the days of WASHINGTON.

As having never sacrificed his political integrity, to suit the narrow policy of time-servers and selfish politicians.

We have said, that we could give more than fifty reasons why Lewis Cass should be the next President of the United States—and we have thus briefly set them forth, in a spirit of truth and candor.

Gen. Taylor and Gen. Cass.

The Pennsylvania, a sound and uncompromising Democratic paper, says—"General Taylor is nominated alone because of the victories he has won with his sword; and that, too, by a party which opposed the war in which he has earned his laurels, as infamous, and accursed of God or honor.

General Cass is nominated, not only because he has done good service to his country with his sword, but because he has enriched her literary and political annals with his pen, and defended the people in the halls of legislation. Presented by the Democracy who approve his principles, and are proud of his course, he became their candidate without causing a sacrifice, on either side, of consistency or honor.

General Cass is presented to the country as the candidate of the Nativists, who declare him to be favorable to their dangerous and contracted doctrines.

General Taylor is repeatedly admitted his painful and benighted inexperience and incapacity—his utter ignorance of all the great questions, and his utter want of sympathy with all not reared to the soldier's life. His letters, when written by himself, are awkward, ill-constructed, and without point.

Keep it before the People.—That the Whig National Convention adjourned without adopting any resolutions, without proclaiming any platform or principles whatever. Compare the course of the two National Conventions in this respect, and say which evinced a manly reliance upon the integrity and good sense of the people, and which betrayed a disposition to resort to trickery and deception for success.

Death of Mrs. Mitchell.—Private letters from the Rev. James Wilson, an exemplary Presbyterian clergyman in the county of Derry in Ireland, state that Mrs. Mitchell was so overcome with grief, on account of her husband's transportation, that she died, a few days afterwards. Her infant child also perished with her. Thus has an innocent family been destroyed by the cruel and merciless decision of a packed jury—the unhappy husband torn away at a time when his presence alone could have saved them. Such barbarous tyranny might well shame even the brute creation.

The Nativist Candidate.—General Taylor is the candidate of the Natives. They were among the first to nominate him for the Presidency, and are now his most ardent supporters.

The Peace Treaty on its Way!—A letter dated Washington, June 22, says:—"Lieutenant Gardiner, the bearer of despatches, containing the official announcement of the complete ratification of the Treaty, on the 30th ult., has arrived here.—He came over from Vera Cruz to New Orleans, on board the steamer Portland. It is understood, that Commissioner Sevier reached the city of Mexico, on the 3d inst., en route for home, with the ratified treaty."

Fire in Cincinnati!—A fire broke out in the large and splendid drug ware house of Mr. Allen, in Fifth street, near Main, Cincinnati, on the night of June 20th, and resulted in the entire destruction of that establishment. The loss is computed at $20,000. Only $8,000 on the property were insured.

A Voice from Ohio.—A correspondent of the Pennsylvania, at Columbus, a well informed and prominent Democrat, writes: "The nominations go off well; Cass and Butler will get a monstrous vote in the West, and if you do as well East as we do West, their election is certain."

There cannot be a more patriotic family in existence, than the Butler family. Gen. William O. Butler, the Democratic candidate for Vice President, has EIGHT brothers in the Mexican war, and he himself is at the head of the army. His father, Pierce Butler, is also there. Where is the family that can beat that?

In the State of New York alone, there are seventy Democratic presses that advocate the election of Cass and Butler, with all their might! and there is plenty of room for seventy more. Give the people light.

Thirteen children came near being poisoned to death in Cincinnati, Ohio, recently by a woman who gave them essence of henlock, which she mistook for liquorice.

Columbia's Pride and Glory.

There's news that goes through all the land, That sets our hearts in motion; It flies abroad from strand to strand, And o'er the rolling ocean. Come, freemen gather, as one together, For Cass, renowned in story; For he's the man to lead the van; Columbia's pride and glory. Come, freemen gather, around him gather, Come, freemen, late and early, For gallant Cass, a glorious mass Have vowed to conquer fairly.

The glorious West, with all her best, So brave, and true, and steady, For Cass will stand, in all their land, With hands and hearts aye ready. Come, freemen gather, &c.

The sturdy North, in pride of worth, Will round her hero rally; For Cass her son, they'll rush as one, From mountain, hill and valley. Come, freemen gather, &c.

The South, with glowing hearts of flame, All fired with love of glory, Declares for Cass, whose very name Adorns our country's story. Come, freemen gather, &c.

With stately mein, to crown the scene, Virginia wakes her legions, High-souled and brave, like wave on wave, She leads the Middle regions. Come, freemen gather, &c.

Now give your banners to the breeze! Their "Stripes and Stars" proud bearing! Let shouts ascend from all the seas, And lands, with sun-light gleaming! Come, freemen gather, &c.

Our flag unfurled, to all world, Bright victory proclaiming, In freedom waves o'er tyrants graves, Its glory none defaming. Come, freemen gather, &c.

Upon the land, with sword in hand, Brave Cass, our rights maintaining, A brighter hue upon it threw, Immortal honors gaining. Come, freemen gather, &c.

O'er Ocean's foam, afar from home, Our ships that banner bearing, Now proudly sail, with every gale, The light of freedom wearing. Come, freemen gather, &c.

Though Britain tried, a queen to ride, Proud mistress of the Ocean, By Cass she found her pride disowned, 'Twas but a Yankee notion. Come, freemen gather, &c.

And Butler's fame is all the same; In war an Eagle soaring; In peace he'll prove a gentle dove, In war a Lion roaring. Come, freemen gather as one together, For Cass, renowned in story; For he's the man to lead the van; Columbia's pride and glory. Come, freemen, late and early! For gallant Cass, a glorious mass Have vowed to conquer fairly.

Whig Report or Row Meeting.

On Friday afternoon last, a meeting was held in the Park, New York, for the purpose of receiving the report of the whig delegates from that city to the Philadelphia Convention. It was called by the delegates, but as the Courier & Enquirer, enjoined it upon all good and faithful whigs not to go, it was not as large as it would have been. Still some 3000 persons were present.
