Poetical.

We publish the following for its poetical sentiment, and not because we consider it accurate blank verse, which is no easy task to write; and to do it well, certainly requires the highest order of genius. We observe, by way of friendly suggestion to our fair correspondent, that blank verse should be accurately measured, even though the lines do not rhyme.— For instance:
Of Man's first disobedience, and the fruit Of that forbidden tree, whose mortal taste Brought death into the world and all our woe, have the same metrical accuracy as the following lines:
Ye nymphs of Solyma! begin the song!
To heavenly themes sublimer strains belong.
Milton chose blank verse; but Pope preferred rhyme.
A careful perusal of Milton's Paradise Lost, Thompson's Seasons, Young's Night Thoughts, and the poetical portions of Shakespeare, will naturally impart to M. S. S. great facilities for writing blank verse as it should be done. She need not be discouraged, if she do not succeed in her first efforts to scale the Aonian Mount.

Lines.

Written on the Death of a Young Lady, Who Died at the South, in April, in her 20th Year.

When age with palsied limb and furrowed brow Is gathered to the tomb, we know that such Is Nature's laws—that when the corn is fully ripe,
'Tis gathered—so with Age. But when the young
And beautiful, just in the rosy morn of life, Is snatched away, we feel a gloom—a sadness Creeping through our veins—a dreary desolation
And a chilling dread. The lovely form of Her who was wont to cheer all with her happy Smiles and kindly greetings, now slumbers in The narrow silent tomb. But four short Months have fled, since first she was in Bridal robes arrayed, with hope for life's long Journey, and many years on earth of peace and Quietude. Kind, loving friends surrounded her;
And faint would they have let her made her exit
As she did, if aught within their power Could have allayed the pangs of sickness, And saved her from the pangs of death.
But she has gone, and shall we mourn?
Methinks her gentle voice is whispering in my Ears, saying—Mourn not for me—I once Anticipated length of days. Hope whispered Of a cloudless future, gilded with happiness And joy. But I received a summons to Depart, to exchange my earthly bridal robes, For those prepared by Christ.

In other days we oft have met,
And down by the rippling stream, Until the golden sun has set,
Have we oft told of Hope's bright dream.
Thy grave lies in a Southern clime, Far, far from thy native mountain, Yet Heaven's pure joys, I trust, are thine, Which flow from Christ's own fountain.
M. S. S.
Salisbury, June 1, 1849.

Lake Song.

BY H. WARD.
Summer's light is beaming Sweetly o'er the lake,
Like a mirror gleaming, Scarcely its ripples wake.
O'er its water's gliding, Swells the snowy sail;
While the boat is riding Smoothly in the gale.
Groves around are smiling,
In their brightest green, Songs of birds beguiling All the woodland scene.
Hours of rapture winging Swift their rosy flight, On their pinions bringing Stores of pure delight.
Banish care and sorrow;
Pleasure fills the sail; Clouds may rise to-morrow, Storms may sweep the vale.
Mists may wrap the mountain In a veil of gloom, Torrents swell the fountain;
Roses cease to bloom.
But remembrance ever
Will those hours recall; Time can wrap them never In Oblivion's pall.

A Gossip's Story, how raised.— Mother Hopkins told me that she heard Green's wife say that John Harris' wife told her that Granny Howe heard the Widow Barnes say that Captain Weed's wife thought Col. Haven's wife believed that Miss Lamb reckoned that Sam Dunham's wife had told Spaulding's wife that she heard John Mudgett's wife say that old mother Goose told her that Mrs. Annanias heard Granny Cone say that she had no doubt it was a fact. Now who can disbelieve it?

Miscellaneous.

The Guerilla Foray.

AN INCIDENT OF THE MEXICAN WAR.

THE noon-day sun was pouring down his burning rays, as a party of thirty men rode out of the Garitta de Belan, and galloped rapidly along the causeway leading to the little village of San Angel. They were dressed in the uniform of mounted riflemen, and were mounted on full-blood American horses. They were evidently upon 'pass' as no officer was with them, and bound up upon some jolly excursion into the country.
They had reached the cross-road leading from the town of Tuebaya to Penyan, when a single horseman was observed advancing towards them from the Penyan side, his form raised in his stirrups, and his whole demeanor betokening extreme haste.
'I say, Abe,' that fellow is making for it.
Something has happened, and he wants our assistance, said one of the party, tapping a young man of some twenty-three upon the shoulder; 'what say you?'
The person addressed as Abe, took a long look at the horseman, and then replied—'If that isn't old Ricardo, I'm very much mistaken.'
'What, the old Spaniard who owns the large hacienda near San Antonio, and who has such a pretty daughter?' asked the other.
'The same; but see, the old man beckons us to meet him—let us go.' And putting spurs to his horse, he bounded swiftly forward to meet him.
'Let's after him, boys, and if there's any fun on hand, we'll have a share in it,' shouted the other; and the whole party dashed after him. In a few moments they were alongside the old man; and having reined in their steeds, Abbot said—'What's the matter, Ricardo? Is any thing wrong?'
'Senors Americans! my child! my daughter!' replied the old man, in tones of anguish.
'What of her? Speak—tell me!' exclaimed Abbot with startling energy, and his eyes flashed as he grasped the Spaniard's arm.
'Ventill, the guerilla!' gasped the old man, in reply.
'He has not dared—' began the fiery youth; but he was cut short by the old man, who said—'He has robbed my house, and carried off my child. Oh! if you are men, fly to her rescue!'
'When was it done?' exclaimed half a dozen voices, and all eyes were eagerly bent upon Ricardo, as he replied—'Not two hours since—they can be easily overtaken.'
'How many were they?' demanded Abbot.
'One hundred in number! and the old man gazed with a despairing look upon the little party before him.
'Boys!' said Abbot, in a firm tone, 'who of you will go with me? For myself, I will rescue her, or die in the attempt!'
'I—I!' was the response of every member of the band, as they caught the darling spirit of Abbot.
'Then lead on, old man, and ere the sun sets, your child shall be restored to your arms.'
The Spaniard needed no second bidding, but wheeling his snorting charger, he buried his spurs in his flanks, and the gallant steed bore swiftly onward. Over the cross road leading to San Antonio they flew on their errand of mercy. Down the giant causeway of Antonio, and over the fatal bridge of Churubusco they went, and the spires of San Augustine glittered in the distance—but no foe was to be seen. The old man rode before, his gray locks streaming in the wind, and his dark eye fixed with an eagle glance before him, scanning the wide plain, and the rock-bound sides of the Contreras. Suddenly raising his long bony arm, he pointed far off before him, to where the road ascended the mountain heights of Cholacino, and shouted—'Look there they are. Forward! Forward!'
A suppressed yell of fury burst from twenty lips, and as many hands sought their sabre-hilts and loosened the shining blader in their scabbards, while a stern resolve rested upon the flushed and heated brow of each. Across the outskirts of San Augustine, and down by the placid lake of Chooloo they sped, and the next moment they are mounting the rugged heights of Cholacinto. On the top they pause, and down in the vale beyond, not over half a mile off, they discover the robbers riding slowly along, unconscious of pursuit.
'Fall back, Ricardo, and leave the work to us,' said Abbot, addressing the Spaniard.
'Never! burst from the pallid lips of the father.
'But you are unused to scenes of strife; you might fall and then what would become of your daughter?'
'No more,' said the old man, 'if a parent strikes not for his child, who will?'
The enemy now discovered the approach of the little party, and began to hasten their speed, but as the horses of the Americans rapidly outstripped the mustangs, it became evident that a few minutes must end the race. Finding escape impossible, the guerillas wheeled about, and hastily forming a line, came thundering on to meet them.

'Now boys, let them have a good volley from the rifles, and then throw them down, and trust to the sabre and pistol for the victory! Forward! and God defend the right!'
A deafening yell burst from the little band as Abbott concluded, and unslinging their rifles, they poured in a murderous fire, as they closed with the enemy, which brought many a stalwart foe to the earth, and drawing the glittering blade, fought for victory or death. Terrible, indeed, was that bloody encounter, but it was not of long duration.
A dozen of the guerillas sunk before the first fatal fire; and as they closed in a hand-to-hand struggle, the tall steeds of the Americans trampled down the lighter ones of the fœmen, and the deadly revolver told with powerful effect upon the cowardly robbers. One after another they fled from the field, and ere half an hour had passed, the remnant of the small band remained its masters.
Ten had fallen in the strife, and lay commingled with the bones of forty bandits upon the gory sod.
But where was Ricardo? Kneeling beside you rock, with his pale, haggard face upturned to heaven, while the blood oozed from a deep wound in his breast, he bending over the lifeless form of his daughter.
From a bullet-hole in her snow-white forehead the tide of life has ebbed away, and her own locks dabbled in her own life's blood, now mingled with that of her father.
Standing beside him, with his foot resting upon the body of Ventill, the guerilla chief, is Abbot. His haggard brow is furrowed with lines of heart-felt anguish, and his manly heart is beating with sympathy for the bereaved parent.
Around them, but at a respectful distance, stand gathered the survivors of that fatal conflict, and the stalwart band brushed the tear of sympathy from the eye, and they turned to hide the emotions of swelling hearts.
The old man motioned to Abbot to draw near. In an instant the youth was at his side, and dropping upon one knee, he supported the sinking form of Ricardo in his arms.
'See that we are buried,' whispered the Spaniard to the youth, 'and may God reward you for your endeavors in my behalf.
My child, I come!' and fixing his eyes upon the cloudless sky, he sank slowly back and expired.
They dug a rude grave beside the murmuring waters of Lake Othlo, and buried the father and daughter side by side, and the ripple of the gentle waters sung a requiem to the memory of the departed.— 'They fell beneath the iron hand of the demon of strife, and perished by violence before the swords of the foe. Goodness and love were forgotten in the relentless passions of the mind, racked and tossed by the vicissitudes of war, and innocence and beauty were sacrificed upon the blood-stained car of dissemination.

To Young Men.

THERE is no object so beautiful to me as a conscientious young man. I watch him as a star in the heavens; the clouds may be before him, but we know that his light is behind him, and will beam again; the blaze of others' popularity may outshine him, but we know though not seen, he il-lumines his own true sphere. He resists temptation not without a struggle, for that is not a virtue, but we know that he does resist and conquer; he hears the sarcasm of the profligate, and it stings him, for that is the trial of virtue; but he heals the wound with his own pure touch. He heeds not the watchword of fashion, it leads to sin; the atheist who says not only in his heart but with his lips—"There is no God!" contrasts him not; he sees the hand of a creating God, and rejoices in it.
Woman is sheltered by fond arms and loving counsel; old age is protected by its experience, and manhood by its strength; but the young stands amid the temptations of the world like a self-balanced tower; happy indeed is he who seeks and gains the prop and shelter of morality.
Onward then, conscientious youth! raise thy standard, and nerve thyself for goodness. If God has given thee the intellectual power, awaken in that cause. Never let it be said of thee, he has helped to swell the tide of sin by pouring his influence into the channels. If thou art feeble in mental strength, throw not that drop into a polluted current. Awake, arise, young man—assume the beautiful garb of virtue. It is fearfully easy to sin; it is difficult to be pure and holy. Put on thy strength, then—let Truth be the lady of thy love—defend her.

Is there a heart that never sighed?
Is there a tongue that never lied?
Is there an eye that never blinked?
Is there a man that never drank?
If so, then heart and tongue and eye Must tell a most confounded lie.

A New Fact Disclosed.

We were not aware until recently, that the books of newspapers were consulted to to quiet so large extent, by people in business, to ascertain the pecuniary standing of persons. Debts for newspapers come due once a year; and persons who pay us regularly for their papers, are regarded as prompt men and worthy of confidence.
We had a person come into our office a few days since, and ask, "Do you send the 'Trumpet' now to—?" We replied "Yes, we certainly do." Well said the man, he owes me about $39, and I can't get it. I don't think he's good.' We looked secretly at his accounts and found him all paid up. We then replied to the enquirer, that man is good; your debt is safe; he may have forgotten it, or something else may have prevented his paying; but he is good. The man's eyes brightened. Said he, 'I have been to several printers, and could not find where he took a paper. I thought of you and said I would come here.'
Said he again after a pause, 'This is the way we find out whether people are good. We ascertain what paper they take and contrive some way to peep into their accounts.'
Men who are sure to pay for their newspapers; and if they do not pay for these we think them not good.' We were forcibly struck by such an idea. 'Well,' said he,
I will send up my bill to—, by express These expresses by the way are one of the best inventions of modern times.
In a few days, the person came in again Said he, 'I sent up my bill,' 'Well, did he pay you?' 'Yes sir-ee,' said he as he opened his hands and showed me a roll of bills, there's' said he, 'give me a printer's book after all to tell whether a man is good—they are a complete thermometer, sir, a credit thermometer: we always know a man to be bad if he don't pay the printer.' He then made a polite bow and retired.
[Trumpet.]

The Five Daughters.—A gentleman had five daughters, all of whom he brought up to some useful and respectable occupation in life. These daughters married, one after the other, with the consent of their father.
The first married a gentleman by the name of Poor; the second, a Mr. Little; the third, a Mr. Short; the fourth, a Mr.
Brown; and the fifth a Mr. Hogg. At the wedding of the latter, her sisters with their husbands, were present. After the ceremonies of the wedding were over, the old gentleman said to the guests:
'I have taken great pains to educate my five daughters, that they might act well their parts in life; and now I find that all my pains, cares and expectations have turned out nothing but a Poor, Little, Short, Brown Hog.'

A Dream Realized.—The following dream, foreshadowing the fate of the famous Major Andre, were believe, is of a very old date, though but little known. Its truth is vouched for by a writer in Ainsworth's Magazine of recent date.—Register.

Major Andre, the circumstances of whose lamented death are to well known to render it necessary for me to detail them here, was friend of Miss Steward's and previously to his embarkation for America, he made a journey into Derbyshire to pay her a visit and it was arranged that he should ride over to see the wonders of the Peak, and introduce Andre to Newtown, her minstrel.
Whilst these two gentlemen were waiting the arrival of their guests, of whose intentions they had been apprised, Mr. Cuningham mentions to Newtown that on the preceding night he had a very extraordinary dream, which he could not get out of his head. He had fancied himself in a forest; the place was strange to him, and whilst looking about, he perceived a horseman approaching at great speed, who had carefully reached the spot where the dreamer stood, when three men rushed out of the thicket, and, seizing his horse, hurried him away, after closely searching his person.
The countenance of the stranger being very interesting, the sympathy left by the sleeper for his apparent misfortune awoke him; but he presently fell to sleep again, and dreamed that he was standing near a great city, amongst thousands of people, and that he saw the same person he had seen seized in the wood, brought out and suspended to a gallows. When Andre and Miss Seward arrived, he was horror-stricken to perceive that his new acquaintance was the antitype of the man in the dream.

A Freak of Nature.—A communication in the Boston Courier, from the late Editor of that paper states, that Mr. Wm.
Carter, of Cambridge, has a healthy and well-formed calf having a coat of wool, instead of hair! There is no perceptible difference in the appearance of the animal's hide from that of a sheep of the same age.
Like the sheep, the face and the lower part of the legs are covered with short and not very pliant hair; the rest of the body has a covering of wool, which, to all appearance, may afford as liberal a fleece as the true Saxon or Merino.

LITCHFIELD:

THURSDAY, June 21, 1849.

To Readers and Patrons.

The present number completes the second volume of the Republican. In looking back upon our past labors, we have only to observe, that our intentions have been, not to seek our own gratification, but to make the interests of our readers and patrons, the principal motives of our exertions.

The Weather and the Crops.

The Albany Journal says, "The crops are everywhere spoken of as looking remarkably promising. The warm sun and frequent showers have caused nature to put on her most beautiful and attractive garment."

The Rochester American says, "The weather could not be better for wheat than at present. There has been somewhat too much rain of late, but the present cool and dry air is admirably calculated to give the growing crop stability and strength."

The Whig Republican of the 1st inst. says, "The wheat which had been somewhat injured by the fly, is renovated—the grass and corn are sprouting forth in luxuriance—the prospect of an abundant crop is now most cheering."

Almost a Tragedy—A few weeks ago, a case of killing, almost occurred in the edge of Alabama, across the line from Holmes. A little difficulty had sprung up between two men, one named Martin, and the other Dean, on account of the latter's "feloniously taking and carrying away" the wife and dog of the former.

Col. Benton's Speech. Colonel Benton recently delivered a powerful speech, at Jefferson City in Missouri; of which, on account of its great length, we have barely room to give a synopsis.

General Scott at the capture of the city of Mexico, seized and brought home some five thousand volumes of Historical Works in the archives of Mexico, all in the Spanish language.

Paternal Affection—An Irishman, swearing the peace against his three sons, thus concluded:—"The only one of my children who shows me any real paternal affection, is my youngest son Larry; for he never strikes me when I am down!"

The same com. reported a bill for a public act concerning crimes and punishments; read three times and passed.

Disgraceful Conduct of the Whig Senate.

The Litchfield County Meeting nominated a Compromise Ticket of both Whigs and Democrats; and with a fair understanding on this subject, the House of Representatives honorably voted for those nominations. But when they were referred to the Senate, that body struck off every Democrat's name from the list; thus setting the wishes of the majority of their constituents at naught, and casting contempt upon the House, the question now occurs, whether the People of this State have not a right to strike their names off from every Senatorial ticket, upon which they shall again be placed on nomination.

Almost every body has heard of WILLIAM COLLINS, the celebrated English Poet; but the whole world has not probably heard of WILLIAM COLLINS, formerly Deacon of the Congregational Church in this Village. In publishing his obituary in May last, we tried to make out that he was a native of this town. That would not answer; for he was a native of Guilford; and in attempting to rectify this error, we confounded him with his father TROSBRY.

Mono-Chromatic Painting, &c.

We would call the attention of our readers to the advertisement of Mr. W. L. Phillips, in this week's paper. The chief excellency of the art which Mr. P. teaches, consists not merely in the graphical accuracy with which his pictures are drawn, but in the prominence with which the representations seem to stand out in bold relief.
