For the Republican. Life's Trials.

BY H. WARD.

Lives there a man of woman born,
Who hath no trials to endure?
The cares of life—the cold world's scorn—Are ills that Time alone can cure.

The false and fading light that shines Along his lonely pathway here, Dies as the setting sun declines,
And wraps in gloomy night the sphere.

When Hope would plume her rainbow wings,
And hover o'er the weary soul, Grim Disappointment wildly springs, And tears the birds she madly stole.

And Love that sought an Eden bower, Finds but the glance of chill Distrust, Or reckless Hate that blasts the flower, Whose leaves are scattered to the dust.

Pale Envy twines her serpent wreath Around the bleeding brow of Peace, And Slander's foul envenomed breath,
And deadly fang will never cease.

And Friendship's vain, delusive smile It but the phantom of a dream, That serves a moment to beguile, Like some false meteor's transient gleam.

When Summer suns illumine the sky, She comes in robes of light arrayed; But wintry clouds come sweeping by,
And where is her inconstant shade?

To-day she meets you with a glance That lightens in an Angel's face; Her gentle tones the soul entrance, And Joy assumes her wonted place.

To-morrow's dawn dissolves the spell;
Her scornful face is turned away:
She smiled to mock—but ay, 'tis well—She only flattered to betray.

Fell Sickness lays her with'ring hand Upon the slowly wasting frame, And Death already seems to stand,
As if to quench Life's dying flame.

But all those direful woes combined, Which fall to mortals here below,
May not impair the deathless mind, Nor cause the bitter tears to flow.

'Tis when the wounded spirit feels The pang of base Ingratitude, Which neither Time nor Pity heals;
And Love no more can be renewed.

Strange that the breast which now would shield,
And hand that would each want supply, Should be at last by wrong compelled,
To feel their power grow weak and die.

Alas! a serpent nestles there,
To hiss with rage, to bite and sting!
O who the agony can bear, Which black Ingratitude doth bring?

Sweet Visitors.

BY WILLIS.

My mother's voice, how often creeps Its cadence on my lonely hours!
Like healing on the wings of sleep,
Or dew on the unconscious flowers.

I might forget her melting prayer, While pleasure's pulses madly fly;
But in the still, unbroken air, Her gentle tones come stealing by:

And years of sin and manhood flee,
And leave me at my mother's knee.

The book of Nature, and its print Of beauty on the whispering sea, Gives still to me some lineament Of what I have been taught to be.

My heart is harder, and perhaps My manliness has drank up tears, And there's a mildew in the lapse Of a few miserably years.

But Nature's book is even yet With all my mother's lessons writ.

I have been out at eventide, Beneath a moon light sky of spring, When earth was garnished like a bride,
And night had on her silver wing;

When bursting buds and growing grass,
And waters leaping to the light,
And all that makes the pulses pass With wildest fleetness, thronged the night;

When all was beauty, then have I,
With friends on whom my love is flung,
Like myrrh on wings of Araby, Gazed upon where night's lamp is hung.

And when the beautiful spirit there Flung over all its golden chain, My mother's voice came on the air, Like the night dropping of the rain—And, resting on some silver star
The spirit of a benediction knee.

I've poured a deep and fervent prayer, That our eternity might be—
To live in heaven, like stars at night, And tread a living path of light.

Good Advice.—A printing office is no place for idle boys. All such will confer a favor by keeping away.

The Battle of King's Mountain; Or The Hero's Revenge.

A TALE OF WHIG AND TORY WARFARE.

Do you remember this day? It is the 7th of October, 1780, nearly two months after the defeat of Gen. Gates, and after the annihilation of Sumpter. Reader of the richest history in the world—the history of your own Revolution—can you have forgotten it? Has it been buried in oblivious silence beneath accumulations of more pompous events? Have its lurid battlements been eclipsed by the meteoric splendor, the fiery glare of more gorgeous victories? Or has the music of a continent yet found no son who would stop to sing the stormy deeds of hunters fighting without a flag, fed on parched corn, and receiving no pay but the golden coin of conscience, and the promises of their country's good?

See! yonder on King's Mountain, a table eminence, with a level at the summit six hundred yards long, by sixty wide, lies the camp of Ferguson—a hollow parallel-ogram of scarlet uniforms, black muskets, and sharp bristling steel. The drum rolls.
The red cross flies. The acclivities are defended by monstrous Titans of dark rocks.
Veteran darkened in the fires of a dozen campaigns stand on the mountain's top. It is "King's Mountain" too! Who shall think of storming its steep sides?
We shall see presently.

Look! three parties are climbing over the rocks, ascending those old walls of nature's handiwork, built dim, distant centuries ago, perhaps in the morning of creation One moves to assault the west end, another to the east, while the third will charge the centre. Is it not a brave sight. But you cannot see them very well, for a veil of blue mist shrouds the mountain, through which the disk of the sun peeps pale as if it feared the carnage about to be.

The approach of freedom's warriors is covered by the thin mist and thick trees, and even now the black rocks aid them.

Suddenly, on the three sides of the steel and iron parallelogram, nine hundred rifles roar, and nine hundred shouts arise; and then a thousand English muskets answer back with hoarse thunders of death.

Ferguson is not—cannot be surprised.— With furious calmness, he attacks the assailants with fixed bayonets, and forces them to retire. But they only give a little and renew the combat. Every massy rock becomes a battery—every pine tree burns powder. The marksmen of the backwoods hold their bullets in their mouth for reloading, and thus the torrent of fire never ceases.
The officers on both sides fight like common soldiers. It is more a wholesale murder than a battle by rule.

But tell me—who are these two standing foremost among the Tennesseans on the western edge of the mountain top, disdainful shelter, refusing to yield an inch of ground, defiant of all Britain's bayonets? Do you not know them—the old man—how dark is his silver hair with war's sable smoke—how dim looks the white paper on the black gun's muzzle—heavens! how beautifully it glazes now, as death rings a tory's or a tyrant's funeral in every peal—with that bold grandson still as ever beside him! His eye flashes destructive joy, the matchless ecstasy of battle; and yet he is not satisfied. He groans: "Oh!
God of justice, where is Mary's murderer?
Shall I not find—shall any other hand than mine slay him?"

Now look on the other side of the mountain. You behold a giant of evil aspect in fiery red hair. He leads a company of tory riflemen. They, too, are mountaineers, and do execution as fearful as the brother foeman of their own land, who struggle for it and liberty. That captain is Tom Bell—the robber before the war, and since the murderer of Mary. Let him not cross the black muzzle flecked with its snowy paper!

Still goes on the bloody work. Columns repeatedly charge and break form and charge again. Campbell, Cleveland, Sevier, Shelby and the gallant Lacy, rule American's tide of war, bursting up the mountain's cliffed side. Ferguson's blue eye shines like a star, and Tom Bell's red face burns like a comet above the surging sea of red-coats.
At length there comes a turn. Ferguson shapes a huge, wedge like column of solid, gleaming, blood-dripping bayonets, and slowly pushes the Americans on the eastern foot of the eminence.

Is all then lost? No. See a terrible band of the good and true from the cane-brakes of French Broad, four hundred miles away over the Alleghenies, have moved round the mountains from the west.
They are headed by the rifle with the white paper on its muzzle and they discharge a cataract of flame into the British flank.— Look now, how the scarlet uniforms roll backwards up the acclivity faster than they came, leaving many a red cross behind them.

See again—the freemen have learned how to charge, too, without bayonets.— They charge with coalesced columns, with fire and hot lead, and drive the slaves down the western slope in disorder to the deep base.

As a last resort, the brave Ferguson forms his entire force into columns, to cut his way out of that awful circle of fire. He flings his sword wildly on high. He shouts in thunder; "Forward, charge!" The next instant he is a corpse. A rifle ball from the muzzle wreathed with snowy paper has gone through his heart. The British, panic-stricken, threw down their arms and cry for quarter. A number equal the whole American army are prisoners. And now the old man raises a hoarse yell, that sounds above the pean shout of nine hundred strong throats: "King's Mountains is ours forever!"

Thus terminated gloriously an engagement in many respects the most important waged during the war. It struck the savages of the frontier with terror from Ohio to Florida. It laid in the dust Britain's grand scheme, Tory cooperation. Lord Cornwallis heard of it, paused in his triumphant career, and ordered a hasty retreat to Winstonsborough, eighty miles in his rear.
Marion and Sumpter heard of it, and renewed their deadly ambuscades.

The battle-shock was over; the battle-smoke drifted away on the wind, and the sun shone brightly on the dead and dying on broken arms and bleeding bosoms, when a jury-martial sat to decide a case of avenging justice. Ten atrocious tories were summarily arraigned, to answer the charge of fifty murders.

Among these pale wretches pleading for mercy, Tom Bell, the Hercules in red hair, was most abject of all; and so earnest were his prayers and promises for the future, that he was on the point of being acquitted when the old man with streaming white locks, broke through the circle of guards and confronted the shivering culprit.

"Do you remember French Broad and the 16th of August?"

"Save me from him!" cried the Tory captain, stretching forth his chained hands for help to the astonished bystanders.

"Have you forgotten Mary Copeland?" asked the old man, grinding his toothless gums till the blood ran out on the foam of his lips.

"I did not kill her—oh! you cannot say I killed her!" exclaimed the coward, falling on his knees, and seeking to embrace the feet of his enemy.

"No—but you forced her to kill herself, as the sole means of salvation from foul dishonor."

"Oh! I did not intend to harm her," persisted the false tory, writhing in the dust like the meanest of reptiles.

"Then rise and swear it," answered the other with a grim smile.

The wretch sprung, and pledged oaths wide enough to wake the dead.

"Do you see this dagger?" inquired the aged hero, pointing to a large silver hilt glittering in his belt.

"Mercy! mercy!" shrieked the murderer.

"The eyes of the old man shot sparks of living fire, as he said in a hoarse, hissing whisper—

"This dagger, on the night of the 16th of August, was in the heart of an angel.
But now it is yours, devil," he added, striking home the sharp steel with a motion prompt and powerful like lightning.

There was a moan, and then a gurgle, and then a gush of warm blood; and the victim lay a corpse at the avenger's feet.

Five minutes afterwards, nine others—equal traitors and homicides—hung dangling from the swinging limbs of oak and pine trees, there on the summit of King's Mountain, which no King should again call his own, any more forever.

Temperance in Texas.—It must be truly gratifying to the temperance movement to learn that the good cause is rapidly progressing in this hitherto land of unsteady habits. A late Huntsville paper says:

The Sons of Temperance are doing great good in and about this neighborhood. A fortnight ago, they had a grand procession at Anderson, twelve miles from here, in which the Huntsville, Montgomery, and Washington Divisions were represented and participated in the festivities of the occasion. They were about 500 strong, and all on horseback. A beautiful banner was presented to the Anderson Division by a young lady of that place on behalf of the ladies of Anderson.

Release of John Mitchell.—The following paragraph has been made through the Limerick Examiner: "The friends and family of John Mitchell have, we are informed, received notification from the English Government, to the effect that they (the Government) having taken in consideration the condition of John Mitchell's health have granted him free leave and liberty to go wherever he pleases, subject to no restriction; with the exception that he shall return to, or settle in any portion or colony of the United Kingdom. He purposes, we are told, to proceed to Germany, for the purpose of trying the effect of the sodas in the restoration of his health. His wife and family still remain in this country."

Scarcity of Women in California.—A correspondent of the Baltimore Argus says:—

"This country is sadly deficient in the Creator's last, best gift to men; and you will be conferring an everlasting favor on me if you will send me one of those red flannel unmentionables that is hanging behind the door in my bedroom.— We had a wedding in Sacramento City on the 12th, and a regular blow-out it was—a muster of citizens and strangers. They kept it up so late that I doubt much if they have got home yet. To such an extent is the veneration for the fair sex carried here that I have seen a party of Oregonians stop and have a dance around an old cast-off bonnet.

Slander.

Slander is a curse, and the slanderer who speaks evil of his neighbor, sowing the vile seeds of suspicion against the innocent, in the hearts of friends, either for revenge or to gratify a propensity so predominant in him by far too many of the human family, exhibits a spirit, only exceeded in depravity, by the slanderers of Heaven's high King.
A slander is often productive of evil—it is like the sting of a deadly serpent; when its poisoned point is aimed at reputation, when the "best boon of heaven"—a good character, is assailed, then it is that total depravity is seen, without one single ray of moral light, in the person of the slanderer.

The First Marriage.

Marriage is of a date prior to sin itself, the only relic of a paradise that is left for us—one smile that God let fall on the world's innocence, lingering and playing still upon its sacred visage. The first marriage was celebrated before God himself, witnessed in His own person, the officers of the sacred rite, and priest. There stood the two in the forms of innocence, unconscious of their unattained natural perfection, in the green shades of the garden the green-carpeted earth smiled to look on so divine a pair. The embellished flowers breathed incense on the sacred air, answering to their upright love, an art-less sound of joy from all the natures was the hymn, a spontaneous nuptial harmony, such as a world in time might yield ere discord was invented. Religion blessed her two children thus, and led them forth into life to begin her wondrous history.
The first religious scene they knew, was their own marriage before the Lord God. They learned to love him as the interpreter and dealer of their love to each other;—and they had continued in their uprightness, life would have been a form of wedded worship—a sacred mystery of spiritual oneness and communication.
They did not continue. Curiosity triumphed over innocence. They tasted sin, and knew it in their fall. Man is changed, man's heart and woman's heart are no longer what the first hearts were. Beauty is diminished. Love is defiled. Sorrow and tears are in the world's cup. Sin has swept away all paradisaean matter, and the world is bowed under its curse. Still, one thing remained in it was, God mercifully spared one token of the innocent world—and that the dearest, to be a symbol forever of the primal love. And this is marriage. This one flower of paradise is blooming yet in the desert of sin.

John Bunyan's Silver Mine.

In these days of rushing after gold, as a seasonable warning, we copy for perusal the following passage from Bunyan's Pilgrim's Progress:

"At the farthest side of the plain called Ease, was a little hill called Lucre, and in that hill a silver mine, which some of them that had formerly gone that way, because of its rarity, had turned aside to see; but going near to the brim of the pit, the ground being deceitful under them, broke, and they were slain. Some also had been maimed there, and could not to their dying day be their own men again. Then I saw in my dream, that a little off of the road over against the silver mine, stood Demas, to call passengers to come and see; who said to Christian and his fellows:— 'Ho! I turn aside hitherto, and I will show you a good thing.'—
'What thing so desiring as to turn us from the way?' asked Christian.
'Here is a silver mine, and some digging in it for treasure. If you will come, with a little pains you may richly provide for yourselves.'—
'Then said Hopeful, 'Let us go and see.'
'Not I,' said Christian, 'I have before heard of this place, and how many here have been slain; and besides that treasure is a snare to those that seek it, for it hinder-eth them in their pilgrimage.'— Then Christian called to Demas, saying:
'Is not the place dangerous?'— 'Not very dangerous except to those that are careless.' But withal, he blushed as he spoke.
'Then,' said Christian to Hopeful, 'let us not stir a step, but still keep on our way.'— 'I will warrant you when Bye-ends comes up, if he has the same invitation as we, he will turn in hither to see.'— 'No doubt thereof,' said Christian, 'for his principles lead him that way, and a hundred to one he dies there.'

Perverved Blessings.

How strange it is, that the choicest blessings of the Creator, are so frequently perverted, and turned into curses! How often is wholesome aliment turned into poison, and honey into gall and wormwood!— Wine that was given by the Divine Being as a medicine, to make glad the heart of man, is used to impair his health and reason, and to prostrate him, soul and body, into the hell of the drunkard. Food that is calculated to nourish and invigorate the body, is used for surfeiting, and engenders dyspepsia, apoplexy, and a thousand other inveterate diseases, which terminate in death. Sleep which is intended to restore the wasted and exhausted energies of nature, becomes the paralyzing torpor of the idler's deadness, and the sluggard's dreamy inanity. The faculty of providing things honest in the sight of men, degenerates into covetousness, fraud, theft and robbery.
Even the married state, which was designed to promote purity, chastity, and mutual happiness, is most frequently embittered by incessant jarring and altercation, until it becomes a miniature hell upon earth. Yea, even the blessed religion of the Gospel, is made the hypocrite's cloak, to conceal the hideous deformity of his character, while his heart is "the cage of every unclean bird." And the divine faculty of speech, which was given to "distil as the dew," with the winning and persuasive accents of kindness, sets the untamable tongue on the fire of hell, with its ceaseless curses, and blasphemies, its lies and obscenities, its murmurings and repinnings, its slanders and revilings. But for all these perversions of God's blessings, a fearful and inexorable judgment is preparing, when all such sinful indulgences will be changed into "unquenchable fire," and "weeping and wailing, and gnashing of teeth" forever and ever.—H. Ward.

The Turn of Life.

From forty to sixty a man who has properly regulated himself may be considered as in the prime of life.— His mature strength of constitution renders him impervious to attacks of disease, and experience has given him judgment the soundness of almost infidelity. His mind is resolute, firm and equal; all his functions are in the highest order; he assumes the mastery over business—builds up a competence on the foundation he has laid in early childhood; and passes through a life attended by many gratifications. Having gone a year or two past sixty, he arrives at a critical period in the road of existence; the river of death flows before him, and remains at a stand still. But athwart this river is a viaduct called "the turn of life," which, if crossed in safety, leads to the valley of old age and ripening years, round which the river winds, then flows beyond, without boat or causeway to effect its passage.— The bridge is however, constructed of fragile materials, and it depends upon how it is trodden whether it bend or break.
Gout, apoplexy, and other bad characters, also are in the vicinity to waylay the traveler, and thrust him from his pass; but himself him up his loins, and provide himself with a fitting staff, and he may trudge on in safety with perfect composure. To quit metaphor. "The turn of Life" is a turn, either into a prolonged walk or into the grave.
The system and powers have reached their utmost expansion, now begin either to close like flowers at sunset or break down at once. One injudicious stimulant a single fatal excitement, may forte it beyond its own strength; whilst a careful supply of props and the withdrawal of all that tends to force a plant, will sustain it in beauty and in vigor until night has entirely set.

The Science of Life by a Physician.

Dressing Wounds.—Nine times out of ten, a wound will heal quicker if done up in its own blood, than in any other way.— As for a burn, whatever will entirely exclude the air the quickest is the best. Cotton will do this; so will oiled silk, if stuck down at the edges by any kind of sticking salve. Put nothing on a burn to heal it.— Nature will soon do that, when the air is excluded, and the pain will almost immediately cease.

HUMAN NATURE.

Bad as may be the nature of man, still the honor for noble deeds, the respect for virtue, the abhorrence for that which is ignoble or base, will ever influence bodies of men when acting on first impulses. When the traitor has performed his part—when the end is gained for which he has been employed; those whom he has most benefitted will cast him from them, and the very men who had jus-ticed him to the deed, will spurn him as if his touch were contagious, or as if his very presence breathed infamy.

"Little boy how many kinds of fire are there?"
"Four, sir."
"What are they called?"
"Wood fire, coal fire, cam-fire, and fire away like fury."
"That will do, you may go to the road."

The Republican.

LITCHFIELD:

THURSDAY, November 22, 1849.

More about the N. Y. Election.

Last week, the New York Tribune strongly insisted upon a Whig majority...

Knowing that the Editor of the Tribune has hitherto been distinguished for the accuracy...

But now, says the New Haven Journal and Courier, the most candid Whig paper in the United States...

Leaving Mr. Greeley to do for himself in his own mind, as best he may...

On the 20th inst., the Democrats carried four judges:—Judge of Appeals, Attorney General, Canal Commissioner, and Inspector of State Prisons...

In the Senate, the Whigs can justly claim a majority, but this is equally balanced by the Democrats having two majorities in the House...

The Supreme Judges, who are chosen by the people, stand thus:—Democrats four—Whigs four.

If the Journal of Commerce, then be right, we do not see how either party can claim the victory...

Mississippi Election.

This State has acquitted herself nobly, in her late election struggle. She has far exceeded the most sanguine anticipations...

It is now rendered absolutely certain, that General Quitman is chosen Governor, by a decided majority of 8,000 to 10,000...

The Legislature, both in the Senate and House of Representatives, is thoroughly Democratic. Such victories tell upon community...

Never did the Whigs succeed in electing a President, but the signal of their defeat was sure to be given, and that right speedily...

There are many things in the Mississippi School of Politics, which are worthy of imitation. Her Statesmen are characterized by a spirit of frankness, energy, boldness and decision...

The Next Congress.

This august body will soon assemble at Washington, to deliberate upon the leading interests of the Republic. It is natural for men to inquire, How does it stand?

The thought has often occurred to us, by way of an interrogatory—How will a Whig President, and a Whig Cabinet look, with a Democratic Congress to overbalance them?

Why, something like a kite, with a leaden tail, instead of a paper one; which, the more it struggles to rise, the more it must lose its equilibrium...

Letters from Washington state that the Post Master General will recommend to Congress a uniform rate of five cents postage without regard to distance.

Shooting Stars.—The South Carolina, published at Columbia, (S. C.) describes a great fall of meteors or shooting stars, which occurred at Lexington, in that State on the 1st inst.

A German journal announces a young andes, called Boreas or Chionides, whose name is known. Her work as a comedian has made people will want a double set of jaws to read...

Further from Wisconsin.

As we expected, the Democratic victory in this young "Lion of the West," to use the metaphor of our neighbor of the Times...

The majority of Governor Dewey over his Whig antagonist, is all of seven thousand. In the last Presidential Election, Wisconsin gave to General Cass a majority of only 1254.

The Legislature is almost entirely Democratic. If all the Whig noses in that body were counted, they would hardly be sufficient to form a sundial at each window of the Legislative Hall...

The gigantic West, towards which the progress of empire is rapidly tending, is now not merely Democratic to a limited extent, but thoroughly so; and is gaining ground, and waxing stronger and stronger...

California Anti-Slavery.

It is a source of no small gratification, that California has at last declared against slavery. She has sent her delegates to the Convention at San Francisco...

One of the prominent articles in that Constitution is, that "Neither Slavery nor Involuntary Servitude, except for the Punishment of Crime, shall ever be tolerated in this State."

Under such favorable auspices, then, we trust, that California will soon be admitted into the Union. And we hope to see her salutary example followed by New Mexico.

We have ever maintained the doctrine, that to States, as individual Sovereignities, belonged the duty of abolishing or excluding Slavery. They alone, are responsible, not for its origin, but for its perpetuity.

We rejoice to see one State after another, thus throwing off the shackles of slavery. It shows most clearly and conclusively, that every new effort for the amelioration of the human race, will be the precursor to the glorious period in the world's history...

Minnesota.

A great Democratic Convention was held in this Territory, on the 20th of October last, which was characterized by much zeal and enthusiasm. Among several resolutions which were presented to the meeting, was a very pointed one against President Taylor and his administration...

When General Taylor was elected President, the glare of his military glory blinded the minds of men. The dream has passed away, and things are now seen in their true light. The pledges which the President made from time to time, and more particularly, in his Inaugural Address, they have seen repeatedly broken.

Some of the Magyars have determined to accept of passports, which the Porte has offered them, to go to England; where they will take shipping, and proceed to the United States.

Since President Taylor made his last Inaugural Address at Washington, nearly 3000 Postmasters have been removed from office, simply because they voted for General Cass.

Highly Poetical.

The good Governor of Vermont has actually wrought himself up into a poetical rhapsody, on the subject of Thanksgiving. We admire his independence and originality, in departing from the old beaten track of his predecessors.

"The voice of the reapers returning with their sheaves from the rich harvest of another year—the notes of joy emanating from many hearts made glad with plenty—the song of health and peace and thrift issuing from many lips in our land, at this season of the year—reminde us of the delightful service of grateful homage to the bountiful Father of Lights."

And it will well bear turning into a hymn: The reapers joining in a strain Of joy, returning from the plain, With golden sheaves of bending grain.

The harvest of the year— From many hearts now filled with glee, That Plenty from alarm makes free, With nought of want to fear— The song of health and peace and weal, From many lips o'er hill and vale, While Autumn's lights and shadows steal Upon the closing year.

Remind us of the time to raise, Delightful task! our hymns of praise, To God, the Father of the blaze, That lights each rolling sphere.

The Sons of Temperance.

The Order of the Sons of Temperance has been instituted less than ten years, and yet it has spread and increased with an unexampled rapidity. It now encircles under the ample folds of its tri-colored banner, upwards of three hundred thousand men, under the G. Division of North America, whose principles of "Love, Purity and Fidelity," are felt by millions—

The mystic meaning of the appellation, Brother, is felt in all its force, when, falling on the ear, it wakes a feeling better felt than told! In sickness watchful eyes are over the stricken brother, and careful hands administer to every want.

A Dutchman and his wife were arrested in New Haven, the other day, for being both rigged out in male attire, such as pedlars are wont to use. Of course, Mynher was not chargeable himself, with having violated the rules of decorum; but the main business was with his "wrow," who declared that she could not get along through the mud in jetticoats; but when she came to put off boots and breeches, she found that she could navigate remarkably well. She is not the first woman that ever "wore the breeches."

Awful Steamboat Explosion.

FEARFUL DESTRUCTION OF LIFE—100 PERSONS KILLED.
New Orleans, Nov. 15.
 Editors New York Sun:—Gentlemen: A melancholy accident happened this evening. A little after 5 o'clock, the steamer Louisiana, having a large cargo, and many passengers, while about starting to go up the river, burst her boiler.
 The storm, which had come down with many passengers, was prolonged, and endeavoring to reach the levee when the explosion took place. Many of the passengers of both boats were hurled into eternity without a moment's notice.
 It is impossible to tell how many lives are lost—but the number is estimated as high as 100.
 Many bodies have been recovered; some dead, some living, and some so much mangled that it is almost impossible to tell which sex they belong to.
 They are now more than 20,000 people on the levee, some looking for their friends, and great confusion prevails, the shrieks of the wounded are heart rending, it is impossible to tell the names of the missing.
 The storm has all her pipes blown away, and cabins and decks damaged.
 The steamer Boston is also very much damaged.
 The Louisiana sunk about 15 minutes after the explosion.
 R.

New Orleans, Nov. 17.
 The explosion of the steamboat Louisiana is attributed to carelessness. The Captain has been held to bail in the sum of three thousand dollars.—Many more bodies have been found. The supposed number killed is about 200, besides many dreadfully wounded. The fate of the survivors are at half mast. Scouring investigation is soon to take place.

The Late Murder.
 It has been stated, on authority apparently not to be doubted, that Mc Caffrey, the supposed murderer of Mr. Smith and his wife, on East Rock, had been traced from New Haven to New York; but we learn from the Springfield Republican, that on Wednesday night succeeding the murder, he was at the victualing shop of Mr. Bradshaw at Hadley Falls, nine miles above the bridge. He called there about 11 P. M., and roused Mr. Bradshaw up to get him some oysters. In making change with Mc Caffrey, Bradshaw displayed his wallet of money; and soon after, in going to his house, a short distance off, Mc Caffrey followed him, and made a demand for his money, with an alternate threat of his life. Bradshaw, knowing his customer, however, and suspecting he might be at foul play, had armed himself with a double-barrel pistol, and presenting this in reply, the rascal fled, and naught has been heard of him since.
 There is, therefore, strong reason to believe that the authorities have been on the wrong track, and that the rascal is still at large, in no distant place. We trust, therefore, that measures will be immediately taken for a thorough search, and if possible, to bring the foul perpetrator of the blood shed deed to justice.
 [New Haven Journal and Courier.]

The Barque J. Walls, Jr.
 It is said that information has been received here that the barque J. Walls, Jr., lately reported as having left Rio for California, has been spoken of her HOMEWARD PASSAGE.—The truth of this, we are not able to vouch for—though it is well understood that Capt. Sanford, the master of the vessel, has at different times asserted, that unless the difficulty existing in the company was settled satisfactorily to all concerned, he would abandon the voyage, and return to his port. A few days, however, will probably determine the matter.
 [New Haven Journal and Courier.]

Arrest of Counterfeiters.
 It will be recalled that a diabolical attempt was made, in the month of May last, to take the life of Thomas Warner, Esq., and his family, by means of an "infernal machine," a box filled with explosive material, so arranged as to explode with violence. It has since been ascertained that the machine was prepared by Sam'l Drury, and left at the residence of Mr. Warner, by Sam'l Drury, jr., who was disguised as a Spanish Negro. The perpetrators were discovered by persons who accidentally overheard conversation between them on this very subject. They were also overheard conversing about the price of dies, and places. They were arrested and altered bills on the Eagle Bank, found in their possession. Upon examining their promises, instruments for counterfeiting American and Spanish coin were found. They were taken to the Tombs.— Tribune.

We regret to learn from the Washington Republic, that the Hon. Thomas Butler King will probably not be able to leave California in season to reach Washington to take his seat at the opening of Congress. He has suffered severely in his health. For six weeks he lay in a condition vibrating between life and death. His illness has necessarily left him weak and prostrate, and the fatigues and hardships of the voyage, and the passage of the Atlantic in his present state, would probably induce a relapse that might be fatal.

Married
 In New Milford, Nov. 11th, by the Rev. Mr. Boon, Mr. Henry Soule to Miss Harriet Jennings, both of New Milford.

Died
 In this town, on the 14th inst., Mary L., twin daughter of Henry R. Goulet, Esq. In the death of this interesting and amiable young lady, a large circle of relatives and friends will long mourn the premature departure of one who had, by her many interesting traits and force of character, impressed herself indelibly upon their affections, and made herself largely instrumental in promoting their happiness.
 During an illness of many months, which she bore with unusual fortitude and resignation, she was cheerful, and anxiously awaited her exit from a world of sorrow and suffering, as we trust, in that "bright world" where "sin and sorrow are never more," and where "the weary rest at last."
 In this town, on the 20th inst., Ellen, only child of Mr. Lucius Wolcott, aged 13.
 In Milton, Nov. 20th, of Billous Childie, Miss Sarah P., wife of Mr. Amos R. Dickinson, in the 54th year of her age.
 In West Cornwall, Nov. 1st, Nancy M., wife of Noah F. Collins, Esq., aged 40.

Sanitary Precepts.
 The following are from Dr. Bringham's "Union Asylum Souvenir":
 "We wish we could impress upon all, the vast importance of securing sound and abundant sleep, if so, we should feel that we had done an immense good to our fellow beings, not merely in preventing insanity, but other diseases also."
 "We fear that the great praise of early rising has had this bad effect, to make some believe that sleep is but of little consequence. Though it may not before we waken, or when it is light, (not before we awaken,) yet this is of minor consequence in comparison with rising early to bed."
 "I have always taken care," said the worthy Dr. Holyoke after he was above 100 years of age "to have a full proportion of sleep, which I suppose has contributed to my longevity."
