was excited by drinking. Mr. Ely was then put among a multitude of prisoners and made to march to Manassas. They all suffered much on the way from heat and thirst. Mr. Ely was then taken before Gen. Beauregard, Jeff. Davis and others. One of them expressed his regret at his situation; but he was nevertheless sent off to sleep in a barn.

The next day he and his fellow prisoners were all sent off to Richmond. On their arrival, he was called upon by Bocock and Pryor, of Virginia, and Keitt and Boyce, of South Carolina, who said they should endeavor to procure his release, and applied to Jeff. Davis and Cabinet for that purpose, but in vain. On arriving at Richmond, crowds of visitors were allowed to come and stare at him, he often finding as many as forty of them at a time in his room. His meals, however, were nicely prepared and sent to him by families and citizens.

He says the position of our hostages is very painful—that they are closely confined in cells and not allowed to converse with any body. Their food is the coarsest of jail fare; and they are not allowed to have anything better, even at their own expense. Mr. Faulkner has promised to exert his influence to have the rebel authorities lessen the severity of their treatment.

Of the reckless and outrageous conduct of the rebel guards Mr. Ely speaks in terms of the utmost censure. He states that the prisoners had not been in the tobacco warehouse fifteen minutes before a bullet was fired into the window of one of them who had ventured to put his head outside, and that in this way seven men had been wantonly killed. This conduct met with severe censure from all who were aware of the facts, but he was not apprised that any action had been taken to punish the offenders by the rebel authorities.

Mr. Faulkner called upon him in his prison and announced to him that Davis & Co. had decided upon his release. The next day the order came for his departure. He then addressed the prisoners for an hour. They were deeply affected, and while regretting to part with him, congratulated him on his release.

In the afternoon, he was taken in Governor Letcher's carriage to the Governor's house, where they dined together, after which Mr. Ely was taken by railroad to Norfolk, and from thence to Fortress Monroe.

Mr. Ely has not the slightest doubt of an extended and deep Union feeling in Richmond, and says if a national army were within ten miles of Richmond, the national flag would be hung from hundreds of windows in the rebel capital. Nevertheless, an utter reign of terror prevails, and no public expression can be given.

Mr. Ely brings a list with him of 2,700 Union prisoners held in the South, whose release he will labor to procure.

STATE NEWS. Among the patents issued from the United States Patent Office, for the week ending Dec. 24th, 1861, are the following:

The Inflationist. The snobbish Russell, correspondent of the London Times, is still at his dirty work of prejudicing the English mind against America.

Provocative to War. A few days ago one of the principal Halifax (N. S.) papers came out with a furious declaration, that one of our ships of war had fired across the bows of an English corvette.

Effects of the Gale. During the prevalence of the high wind last night, about half-past 10 o'clock, the steeple of the Episcopal Church, at Southport, was blown down, and falling, struck upon the roof, split the edifice in twain, and thoroughly demolished the building.

Frozen to Death. John Howd, aged 40 years, was found this morning by the roadside, near his residence at Plantsville, town of Southington, frozen to death.

NEWS SUMMARY. Arrangements have been made to pay all the troops near Washington to January 1.

The Nova Scotians are rejoicing over the yield of the newly discovered gold mines there. The Halifax Journal, of the 18th, says that a beautiful specimen of gold-bearing quartz, from County Sligo, had been brought to that city, and adds that 54 ounces of Tanager gold, in bars, had been received the Tuesday previous.

An engineer, named Johnson, at Chicago, on Christmas evening, found that a thief had stolen his wedding coat from his room. There was no time to get another, and the plucky fellow was married in his shirt sleeves.

The ridiculous story of the London Times, that Mr. Seward said to the Duke of Newcastle, when he was in this country, that England must be insulted, is thus punctured by the Albany Journal.

The alleged conversation occurred in the Autumn of 1860, several months after the nomination of Mr. Lincoln. And yet Mr. Seward is made to say: "My Lord Duke, either Mr. Lincoln or myself will be the next President of the United States."

A writer in the Birmingham Daily Post, S. A. Goddard, thus disposes of some of the embellishments with which the inventions of the officers of the steamer Trent had garnished their account of the capture of Mason and Slidell:

There is not a braver class of men in this world, nor any class more courteous to women, than American naval officers. No American, nor especially an American naval officer, orders a charge of bayonets upon a woman.

There is no man in this country, before the war of 1812, who has seen so generally, for the time being, the enemy of real liberty, that every good man must, apart even from motives of self-interest, desire to see his theater as much circumscribed as possible.

The Death of Prince Albert. The melancholy event took place at about 11 o'clock on the night of the 14th of December. The London Times thus records the last moments of his royal highness.

The Prince was taken ill some twelve days since. Symptoms of fever, accompanied by a general indigestion, marked their appearance. For some days the complaint was not considered to be serious. It was not till Monday, the 11th, when the fever gained head and the patient was much weakened, that the first bulletin was issued, and even then it was stated that the symptoms were not unfavorable.

On Saturday forenoon there was a rally which so often precedes dissolution, but it gave great hopes to the physicians. At 4 p. m., a relapse took place, and the Prince, who, from the previous Friday, had been sustained by stimulants, began to sink gradually.

The Times says that the Queen has borne her loss with exemplary resignation, and a composure which, under so sudden and so terrible a blow, is to be ascribed to her noble and generous mind.

Among the patents issued from the United States Patent Office, for the week ending Dec. 24th, 1861, are the following:

Exchange of Prisoners. Four prisoners arrived here last evening, under a flag of truce from Norfolk, being the first instalment of a body of 150 who are to be sent in exchange for an equal number from the North.

From Missouri. Dispatches received at headquarters announce the capture of the notorious Jeff Owens, Col. Jones and fifty-three of the bridge guard near Martinsburg, by Gen. Schofield, commander of the State Militia, and various guerrilla bands along the North Missouri railroad have been pretty thoroughly scattered.

The Gate. The Norwich boat, City of Boston, arrived at 11; or rather subsequently. There was a heavy gale last night; nearly a dozen prize vessels at the Atlantic docks were more or less damaged, and a number of vessels in the bay dragged anchor, but were not damaged.

From Washington. Gen. Benham has been released from arrest and ordered to duty at once. The Court of Inquiry ignored the charges as soon as made. Col. Wilson's regiment of mechanic fusiliers is ordered to report to Gen. Lane at Leavenworth.

Gen. McClellan Not Dangerous. We are happy to say that at no time has Gen. McClellan been dangerous. He is rapidly recovering from a severe cold taken at Gen. Porter's last review. He is attending to all important business, and will be out in a day or two.

From the Potomac. Contrabands arriving daily and who are sent to Gen. McClellan's headquarters, state that at least one-third of the slaves of Loudoun county have made their escape, and some from Fairfax, Fauquier and Culpeper occasionally turn up.

Fortress Monroe, Dec. 31, 1861. A negro who came into Camp Hamilton this afternoon, reports that a large camp of the enemy at a place near Bethel was broken up, and a general stampede to Yorktown took place on Saturday night. They had seven heavy howitzers, but they were all removed.

Fortress Monroe, Dec. 31, 1861. A flag of truce was sent by Gen. Magruder to Hampton Bridge this afternoon with a small packet of letters for the North. Seven rebel officers composed the party. They remained at Hampton for some time, and appeared to be making observations and endeavoring to obtain information of our contemplated movements.

Gen. McClellan Not Dangerous. We are happy to say that at no time has Gen. McClellan been dangerous. He is rapidly recovering from a severe cold taken at Gen. Porter's last review. He is attending to all important business, and will be out in a day or two.

From the Potomac. Contrabands arriving daily and who are sent to Gen. McClellan's headquarters, state that at least one-third of the slaves of Loudoun county have made their escape, and some from Fairfax, Fauquier and Culpeper occasionally turn up.

Fortress Monroe, Dec. 31, 1861. A flag of truce was sent by Gen. Magruder to Hampton Bridge this afternoon with a small packet of letters for the North. Seven rebel officers composed the party. They remained at Hampton for some time, and appeared to be making observations and endeavoring to obtain information of our contemplated movements.

Exchange of Prisoners. Four prisoners arrived here last evening, under a flag of truce from Norfolk, being the first instalment of a body of 150 who are to be sent in exchange for an equal number from the North.

From Missouri. Dispatches received at headquarters announce the capture of the notorious Jeff Owens, Col. Jones and fifty-three of the bridge guard near Martinsburg, by Gen. Schofield, commander of the State Militia, and various guerrilla bands along the North Missouri railroad have been pretty thoroughly scattered.

The Gate. The Norwich boat, City of Boston, arrived at 11; or rather subsequently. There was a heavy gale last night; nearly a dozen prize vessels at the Atlantic docks were more or less damaged, and a number of vessels in the bay dragged anchor, but were not damaged.

From Washington. Gen. Benham has been released from arrest and ordered to duty at once. The Court of Inquiry ignored the charges as soon as made. Col. Wilson's regiment of mechanic fusiliers is ordered to report to Gen. Lane at Leavenworth.

COND EDITION.

4 O'CLOCK P. M. FROM MEXICO.

VERA CRUZ CAPTURED.

New York, Jan. 2, 1862. The Spanish fleet took possession of San Juan d'Ulloa, Dec. 16. The city was evacuated by the Mexican troops the next day. They retired without firing a gun.

Havana letters state that Santa Anna and Miramon are both going to Mexico. Gen. Prim is at Havana, about to leave with reinforcements for Mexico.

From the Havana Diaro we learn that the Governor of Vera Cruz was willing to evacuate the city, but demanded and received a respite of 24 hours.

General Gassett on landing, issued a proclamation to the troops, and made an announcement to the people to the effect that the troops had come hither only to demand satisfaction for the failure of treaties and violences committed against their compatriots, and to obtain guarantees against similar outrages.

The greatest satisfaction of the army would be after fulfilling its mission from the Queen to return to its own country with the certainty of having the merited affection of the Mexicans. Nearly one hundred rifled cannon of the latest pattern were found in San Juan.

Down the Potomac. Washington, Jan. 2, 1862. The Stepping Stone came from the flotilla last night. This steamer on her reconnoitering trip up Occoquan Bay, lately, scattered the rebels with three well directed shots from her 24-pounder rifled gun—the shells bursting right in the midst of the rebel soldiers.

But, on her return, she was followed by riflemen who concealed themselves behind trees and fired several bullets through her sides; one of these shots passed through the head of the Captain's berth.

The rebel battery is on Possum Nose, this side of Cockpit Point, and is, therefore, the nearest battery to this city; as shells have been fired into the mouth of the Mattawoman Creek.

Serious Accident. As the train for New London was leaving the depot this afternoon, an Irishman named James Lally fell from the platform in front of one of the cars, and had both his legs cut off, besides being otherwise severely lacerated.

He was taken to his boarding house on Broad street, and Dr. Jewett was sent for.
