Resolved, That the suspension of the writ of habe

This resolution is designed as an attack upon the Administration, for the measures it took to save the capitol from the conspirators against the constitution and the liberties of the people during the early part of the rebellion. No such resolution as the above could have been framed or adopted by any set of men in a loyal State, unless they were in some degree in sympathy with the rebellion. We know this will be denied. We know it will be said that the Convention in one of its resolutions declared that it would support the President in his efforts to put down the rebellion. But there is a dodge in that pledge. The declaration is that they will " sustain the President in all constitutional efforts to suppress the rebellion." This is the precise language of "the call" -and it means nothing -or rather it means opposition to the war-and to the President who is carrying it on. These Breckinridge leaders, with Eaton at their head, have in public meetings declared the whole war to be unconstitutional and unrighteous, and they have demanded a suspension of hostilities. They have for years declared it unconstitutional to attempt to coerce a State to remain in the Union, or to do just what the Government is doing to preserve the constitution and the

This hypocrisy of the Democratic leaders even more detestable than their disloyal sym pathies. With all their pretensions of supporting the President, they mean exactly the reverse. They abhor the President and the war, and would take back the rebel States on their

Now if they were honest in their profession of supporting the President, and yet had their doubts of the constitutionality of the suspension of the writ of habeas corpus, they would in view of the perils of the country and their knowledge of the fact that the President was at Temple Hall, every morning, at 84 o'clock. actuated by laudable and patriotic motives, express themselves in more moderate terms; nor would they, as they have done in their detestable resolutions, make a party issue of the ques tion. They have in that resolution left the carmark of their herd upon all their proceedings and all their friends, remember this. The wretches in Baltimore, who were the instigators of the murderous attack upon the Massachusetts troops that passed through that city in defence of the capital, were arrested for their treasonable proceedings. They were arrested by military authority. An attempt was made to snatch | church will be held in Hemingway's Hall, corthem from prison, and leave them to continue their fiendish work against the lives and liberties of the people. The President interposed as the Commander in Chief of the military forces of the republic, refusing in such a time of public danger to allow the forms of the law to be used to trample in the dust the law itself. This is his offense, and for it he is assailed in this ungrateful and dastardly manner, and in the face of the armed legions of the enemies of the republic. Shame on such patriotism-shame on such defenders of the national flag and the national life

The framers of the constitution, in providing for the suspension of the writ of habeas corpus, had in view just such circumstances as thos which occurred when the writ was suspended What says the constitution itself on this subject? It is found in the ninth section of the first article of that instrument, and in these

"The privilege of the writ of habeas corpus shall not be suspended, unless when in cases of rebellion or invasion, the public safety may re- be a member of the Society." quire it."

It was during the present rebellion that the writ was suspended. The very cases provided for by the constitution, were met in the spirit and form of the constitution. Some of the best lawyers in the land have so decided. The Pres- Death. Evening services at 63 o'clock. Subident, in the trying emergencies in which he was called upon to act, appealed to the law officer of his Cabinet-his constitutional adviser, the Attorney General, and he gave his opinion that one of the crises had arisen contemplated by the constitution, when the writ could be suspended the president acted accordingly. For this act he is denounced by those who hypocritically pretend to support him.

FROM THE SEVENTH CONNECTICUT. AROUND PULASKI.

Tybee Island, Ga., Jan. 28, 1862. Messes, Epirors: Yesterday was a day of sep anxiety and excitement. About noon on Sunday last our men descried a fleet of fifteen sail, standing in towards Warsaw Sound, which they entered about the middle of the afternoon. they came to anchor for the night. Speculation was rife as to their destination, designs, md who commanded. But as none of thes questions could be answered with certainty, the oldiers here had no other method than to quietly await the certain developments of a few hours. On Monday morning we heard the firing of a single gun, and as no other accompanied ular preaching in the German language by the it we knew that it was the signal for the fleet Rev. J. C. Deininger, at 101 a. m. and 7 p. m. to get ready. Every ear was open wide to catch the first booming of the gun that should the evening of Feb. 10: break the more than ordinary stillness of the day. We listened long and attentively throughout the day, but it passed, and with it all tidings from the fleet: they had passed so far up the river as to be hidden from our sight by the intervening hills and woods. So I will leave them for the night.

Farly in the evening the German pickets dis overed a boat containing two men, pulling for shore from the direction of Fort Pulaski. Being themselves concealed they waited silently until the boat had touched our shore, when they sprang from their hiding place and hailed the strangers. One of them very readily stepped out of the boat and halting answered the chal-Bacon, D.D., will address the 13th Regiment in lenge: "A friend from the South without the the Center Church on Sunday afternoon next. countersign." He proved to be a sermon, to furnish the regiment with a chapel German, and had voluntarily deserted. What he said of his companion I have not learned. He represents Pulaski as being in a deplorable condition-says when the officers in command saw the approach of our fleet they immediately put the soldiers on short allowance of food and vater-that they have no wood, and having no wells are dependent upon the river streams for water; that there is one company of Ger mans and one of Irishmen who are almost in a state of mutiny: that it was their Major who fired the shot killing a member of the 46th N. Y. V., and that there are large numbers of the Constitution, which we here re-print: "Article garrison who would escape if they could. The deserter is a more than ordinary intelligent detained.

During the day and night subsequent to the firing of the signal gun before mentioned, they had been slowly and cautiously feeling their way up the unsurveyed river, and at 10 o'clock Tuesday mornng, they observed the fleet of Tatnall's seven steamers, coming down the Savannah river, and to them they determined to offer the compliments of the morning. With the first shot sound the cause of it, who were not on duty, made a general stampede from the camp ground is his account of that post: and selecting the highest altitude afforded, quihight, and to it I hastily made my way. well as their chagrin, we could see the shot sachusetts man ever crossed our soil to carry at home could be benefitted if the troops only strike the water and hear the quick response from each of our lips, short! short! short! The tide was fast ebbing, which was to the advantage of the enemy and to the disadvantage was too great, and the entire fleet, running the gauntlet, succeeded in reaching Pulaski, whether in safety or in a damaged condition, we could not with certainty tell. As the steamers run into their dock at the fort, we "let go" our parrot battery (for the first time) at them, firing four shots, but the guns did not quite come up to our expectations. The shots were excellen line shots, but their range was short. In the persed. It was concluded to fire her again, at afternoon the steamers returned to Charleston the morning previous. What the extent of damage done on either side is, we are as yet ignorant of. Their visit to the fort was unplies. Officers on Martello say that with the aid of their glasses they could distinctly see the steamers landing troops; while a naval officer in the lighthouse positively avers that they were taking off troops. The latter seems most ions, &c, and that two companies were almost in a state of mutiny. Why Pulaski did not return the fire of our battery is a mystery. Our boats have made good progress up the river during the past night, as their firing this morn-

Col. Terry maintains the same hold upon the affections of his command as of yore. Long may he be spared us, as it is to him mostly that we are indebted for the knowledge of military tactics which we possess and which have won for us such a good name wherever the fortunes as flush and ruddy as I have seen it in years past, but his physical strength remains good, and his general appearance betokens good health for the future.

It is now nearly noon, and as nothing can be seen or heard from our fleet it is generally supposed that they have gained the Savannah river and have now fair sailing. The mails are so uncertain here in Tybee that it is more than prob able you will receive an official account of the xploit long ere you receive this.

Gen. Burnside's Report.

HEADQUARTER'S, Department of North Carolia, Roanoke Island, Feb. 10, 1862-To Gen. George B. McClellan: I have the honor to report that a combined attack upon this Island was commenced on the morning of the 7th, by the naval and military force of this expedition, which has resulted in the capture of six forts, forty guns, over 2,000 prisoners and upwards of 3,000 small arms. Among the prisoners are Col. Shaw, commander of the Island, and O. Jennings Wise, coromander of the Wise legion. The latter was mor tally wounded and has since HOW THE VICTORY WAS GAINED.

Bowling Green Evacuated.

Bowling Green, as appears by dispatches this p. m., has been evacuated, and General Mitchell is pushing on after the retreating rebels. It appears the enemy took the precaution to burn the bridge over Big river creek to hinder our forces in the pursuit. Bowling Green is a place of great strategic importance at the junction of the two Kentucky railroads which enter Tennessee.

It has a population of 2,500 inhabitants.

Спісаво, Feb. 15, 1862. A special to the Journal dated 2 miles from Fort Donelson, Feb. 14, says the attack com? menced at 74 o'clock yesterday morning by the land forces under Generals Grant, Smith and McClernand. The fort is surrounded by high steep hills heavily wooded, protected by two redoubts, trenches and rifle pits.

The rebels gave battle from their entrench ments outside the fort, but were driven in after a severe battle, and considerable loss on both sides.

Our troops hold two of the rebel batteries outside the fort. Our loss is probably forty-five killed, and 150 wounded Eight thousand troops and four gunboats ar-

Mobs in Richmond.

The Richmond papers complain bitterly the murders, and drunken brawls in that city of the proud and lofty chivalry. The follow ing is a sample of their wailings. It is copied from the Richmond Examiner of February 6:

"The rowdvism now rife in the city has become intolerable, and demands immediate sur pression with the high hand. Acts of brutal violence, vulgar ruffianism and gross indecency, are of momentary occurrence in our streets The most ordinary citizen, and the most delicate lady are exposed to outrage and insult. No man's life, even, is secure in broad day-light, on our most public thoroughfares. To surround, knock down, bruise and maltreat, has become the pastime of the ruffians that throng our payements. The evil must be suppresse or else society must surrender ita authority brute violence. The time has arrived for vigi lance and summary reform, or else ruffian theft, arson, drunkenness, and murder, will soon claim the city as their exclusive preserve."

This is certainly very different from the pre dictions heretofore made by the chivalry. There were to be mobs all over the free States when free society had, they said, proved a failure but in slavedom there was to be nothing but good order, high polish, perfect civilization and the purest Christianity. The Southern lords never learned so much in so short a time as they have done since they attempted to dispens with the Union. They have not yet had enough of the sweating process. To be fitted to enjoy the blessings of the Union again, they must suffer yet more. More mobs, more starvation, more conflagrations, more blood letting are needed for the purification of the inflated and corrupt men who rule the South with such despotic sway. One mob continued their work of destruction all night. Several persons were killed, stores and houses were broken open and . robbed, and the whole city was in as great alarm as if the Yankees had surrounded the place. Here are some extracts from Richmond

The Water Contract. The city on Saturday, voted by 238 majority to approve the contract made between the Common Council and the Water Company. The vote stood yea 1,330, nay 1,092. A great effort was made to defeat the measure, much more than was anticipated, while but little was done on the other side, for the reason that some of the stockholders of the Water Company were dissatisfied with the contract, and were in hopes it would be defeated. The Company was screwed down to the lowest dollar that the Common Council could get from it, and yet it had 1,090 votes against it! We are almost ashamed to record the fact. Here will be a saving of large expenditures for fire and steam enginesa saving of insurance, and a saving from conflagration, and the water will be a saving of health, which the city is legally bound to care for. Rejoice and be Glad.

We have the pleasure of announcing to-day the joyful news of the capture of Fort Donelson, in Tennessee. After more than three days of storming, this stronghold of the rebels, three of their Generals and a large number of fighting men have fallen into our hands. The Evacuation of Bowling Green. The Federal Army Moving South.-80,000 Men on the Cumberland. CINCINNATI, Feb. 17, 1862.

This morning's Commercial has the following special dispatch: On learning that the rebels were evacuating Bowling Green, Gen. Buell ordered a forced march by Gen. Mitchell, to save, if possible, the railroad and turnpike oridges on Big Barren River. They, however, had all been destroyed when Gen. Mitchell words refused a pass to the widow of a volun- reached the banks of the river. The brigades of Gen. Breckinridge and Gen. Hindman were, until Thursday evening, at Woodland Station. The rebels left nothing at Bowling Green except a few old wagons.

> A part of the town, it is reported, is being ournt; it is believed now, that there are no rebel forces except in Kentucky, east of the direct road from Bowling Green via Franklin to Nashville.

Gen. Crittenden is trying to organize another rmy at Carthage on the South bank of the Cumberland; this is the only rebel force on the ine from Bowling Green to Nashville.
