Lecture and Exhibition Last Night. Notwithstanding the severity of the storm there was a very good audience present at Music Hall last evening, to witness the exercises of the children from the School of Imbeciles. The Hon. H. M. Welch, Mayor of the city took the chair, and Miss Greene, one of the teachers of the School named, presided at the Melodian. Mr. Welch requested Mr. J. F. Babcock to give a sketch of the origin and condition of the institution which was there represented. Mr. B. said that the first movement in regard to it was made in the Legislature of 1855, when a committee was appointed to investigate the subject, and gather statistics of the number of imbeciles in the State needing the aid of such an institution. This committee reported to the session of the Legislature of May following, when an appropriation of $15,000 was made by the House for the establishment of a School; but the Senate refusing to concur, the appropriation failed. In 1858, Dr. Knight established a school upon his own responsibility, and obtained a number of pupils, a large portion of whom, however, were unable to pay a dollar of their expenses. The Legislature of 1860. learning of the condition of these children, sent a Committee to the school for examination, and on their return, recommended an appropriation of $1,500, or $100 a year for each one of Hospital Ste ford, recently left by will $3,000 to be appropriated to the institution whenever it should be permanently established. The Legislature of 1861 granted the school a charter, and appointed Trustees, who met in July and elected officers for the year. Mr. B. closed his statement with a brief appeal to the sympathies of the audience in behalf of the class of our population who were to be chiefly benefited by the institution. He then introduced Dr. H. M. Knight who gave a brief account of the exercises of his pupils, and then proceeded to their examination to the very great delight apparent ly of all present. The pupils, two boys and two girls, showed wonderful proficiency, considering the fact that some of them could not articulate the language not many months ago. Lessons were recited in geography, arithmetic, &c. One exercise, that of wooden dumb bells, to the music of the melodian, afforded the greatest pleasure to the audience, who asked for its frequent repetition. This was a gymnastic exercise, and made peculiarly pleasurable by being set to music.

But we can give no satisfactory account of previous to his late exploit on Roanoke Island: the these exercises, for they should have been seen to be appreciated. Many of the audience remained after the meeting had adjourned, and expressed the utmost interest in these pupils and their exercise. Some of them remarked that it was the most interesting meeting that they had attended in that hall during the entire sea-

The Earthquake.

The earthquake of which we made mention last week, was perceived in many of the towns in this county. It was felt in Deep River, and also in East Haddam. The vibrations, it is stated, were so sharp as to cause a violent rattling of windows, stoves, crockery, &c., and they apparently proceeded from the north-west to the south-east. About 9 o'clock the same evening, (9th inst.) another lighter shock occurred, and in the morning about 4 o'clock, still another took place. It would seem that than anywhere else. #### Mr. Faulkner's Position.

The report that the Hon. C. S. Faulkner of Virginia, lately our minister to France, had said that secession was a failure, appears to be at Martinsburg, Northern Virginia, near Leesburg, on Saturday, the 15th. He also said that there had been an unnecessary waste of life in some of the best blood of the South, and an immense sacrifice of property. If the war continued, ruin, he said, would pile on ruin.

The public sentiment of Western Virginia was opposed to it. He also intimated that be had no affiliation with those who wished the present war to continue. His remarks were acquiesced in by the large audience present, and he had no doubt but they reflected the true sentiments of nine-tenths of the people of the upper counties of the Potomac.

Sentiments like these at this time from a man of the position and influence in the South, of Mr. Faulkner, are equal to the capture of ten thousand Southern troops. They must be more Botteler, the vascillating representative in Congress from the Harper's Ferry District, to change sides again? He was dreadfully opposed to secessionism, but equally opposed to coercion and when coercion was attempted, he joined the rebels! That was Virginia consistency.

Rejoicing through Tears. With the shouts of victory come the wails of mourning. The nation rejoices, but fathers, mothers, brothers and sisters, are bowed down with grief at the desolations wrought in their own households. As the sun light of joy and hope flashes through the Presidential mansion, we see also the pall of death settling down upon it. The telegraph a few days since announced that "little Willie is past all hope of recovery." To-day it is announced that "little Willie is dead !" Such is human life. How varied its changed around on the other tack, declared hopes, fears, enjoyments and disappointments.

A Noble Letter.

The Secretary of War has written a noble letter to the New York Tribune, which has the ring of the old Puritan about it. He refuses to take all the credit which the Tribune gives to him for our recent splendid victories in all directions. He gives the praise to God and the ticut yesterday, consisted of two squadrons, of people! Evidently Secretary Stanton is the Sir: I cannot suffer undue merit to be as cribed to my official action. The glory of our recent victories belongs to the gallant officers Blakeslee, Adjutant; Elbridge Colburn, Quar- and soldiers that fought the battles. No share of it belong to me.

Much has recently been said of military combinations and organizing victory. I hear such phrases with apprehension. They commenced in infidel France, with the Italian campaign, and resulted in Waterloo. Who can organize victory? Who can combine the element of success on the battle-field? We owe our recent victories to the Spirit of the Lord, that goved our soldiers to rush into battle, and filled the hearts of our enemies with terror and dis may. The inspiration that conquered in battle was in the hearts of the soldiers and from on high; and wherever there is the same inspiration there will be the same results. Patriotic spirit, with resolute courage in officers and is a military combination that never

We may well rejoice at the recent victories, for they teach us that battles are to be won now and by us in the same and only manner any age, since the days of Joshua, by boldly pursuing and striking the foe. What, under the blessing of Providence, I conceive to be the true organization of victory and military combination to end this war, was declared in a few words by Gen. Grant's message to Gen. Buckner-"I propose to more immediately on your works! Yours truly, EDWIN M. STANTON.

TO ENGLISHMEN.

BY JOHN G. WHITTIER. You flung your taunt across the wave; We bore it as became us, Well knowing that the fettered glave Left friendly lips no option save To pity or to blame us,

You received our ples. "Mere lack of will Not lack of power," you told us: We showed our free-state records; still You meeked, confounding good and ill, Slave-haters and slave-holders.

We struck at slavery; to the verge Of power and means we checked it; Lo!—presto, change! its claims you urge, Send greetings to dor the surge, And comfort and protect it.

But yesterday you scarce could shake, In slave-abhoring rigor. In slave-abhoring rigor, Our Northern pulms, for conscience sake: To-day you clasp the hands that ache With "wallopping the nigger!"

O Englishmen!—in hope and creed, In blood and tongue our brothers! We too are heirs of Runnymede; And Shakspeare!s fame, and Cromwell's deed, Are not alone our mother's.

'Thicker than water" in one rill,

Joint heirs and kinfolk, leagues of wave Nor length of years can part us: Your right is ours to shrine and grave, The common freehold of the brave, The gift of saints and martyrs,

Our very sins and follies teach We carp at faults with bitter speech The while for one unshared by each We have a score in common.

We bowed the heart if not the knee To England's Queen, God bless her We praised you when your slaves wer We seek to unchain ours. Will ye Join hands with the oppressor?—

And is it Christian England cheers The bruiser, not the bruised?
And must she run, despite the tears
And prayers of eighteen hundred years,
A muck in slavery's crusade?

Oh black disgrace ! oh, shame and lose Too deep for tongue to phrase on Tear from your flag its holy cross, And in your van of battle toss The pirate's skull-bone blazon!

The troops were in a pitable condition, exhausted by their terrible retreat, and almost dead with hunger. The people in the surrounding country were engaged in bringing provisions into town for the relief of the halfstarved and worse frightened soldiers. A portion of the rebel army ran in the direction

The fatality among the officers of the rebel regiments was even greater than we were at first led to believe. Maj. Henry M. R. While Edwards talked thus, he was display-ing the goods he wished to sell in a way to let the rich, glossy surface catch the best points of light, and his quick eye soon told him his customer was beginning to be tempted.
"I'll cut you off a coat pattern," said he ta-

"There it is," came in a satisfied, half-tri umphant tone from the storekeeper's lips, "and the greatest bargain you ever had. You will want trimmings, of course !"

As he spoke, he turned to the shelves for pad ding lining, silk, &c, and while Jacobs, half-bewildered, stood looking on, he cut from on piece and another, until the coat trimmings were all nicely laid out. This done, Mr. Edwards faced his customer again, rubbing his hands from an eternal feeling of delight, and "You must have a handsome vest to go with hand upon his arm, causing him to pause as he this, of course." "My vest is a little shabby," replied Jacobs as he glanced downwards at a garment which had seen pretty fair service. "If that's the best one you have, it will never do to go with a new coat," said Edwards in decided tone. Let me show you a beautiful piece of black satin."

And so the storekeeper went on tempting his customer, until he sold him a vest and pantaloons in addition to the coat. After that he found no difficulty in selling him a silk dress for his wife. Having indulged himself with an entire new suit, he could not, upon reflection, think of passing by his wife, who had been wishing for a new dress for more than six

He was, as has been intimated, a clerk in wholesale store, and received a salary of seven hundred dollars a year. His family consisted of a wife and three children, and he had found necessary to be prudent in all his expendi tures, in order to "make both ends meet." Somewhat independent in his feelings, he had never asked credit of any one with whom he dealt, and no one offered, previous to the tempting inducement held out by Mr. Edwards, he had regulated his out-goes by his actual in-

of any real benefit to him: It was not so very pleasant to have thing comfortable or for a little display without feel-ing that the indulgence drained the purse too heavily. And weak vanity on the part of Jacobs was gratified by the flattering opinions of his honesty entertained by Mr. Edwards, the storekeeper. His credit was good and he was proud of the fact. But the day of reckoning vas approaching, and at last it came. Notwithstanding the credit of the dry goods clerk's purse at the end of six months than at tore, there was no more money in the young the beginning. The cash that would have gone for clothing, when necessity called for additions to the family wardrobe, had been spent for things, the purchase of which would omitted, but for the fact that the money was in the purse instead of in the shopkeeper's hands and tempted needless expenditure As the end of the six month's credit approach ed, the mind of Jacobs began to rest upon the dry good's dealer's bill, and to be disturbed by feeling of anxiety. As to the amount of this bill he was in some uncertainty; but he thought of it would not be less than forty dollars. That and sixty more have been spent under Knoxville, some of them having reached that was a large sum for him to owe, particularly as he had nothing ahead, and his current expenses were fully up to his income. It was now for the first time in his life that Jacobs felt the night-mare pressure of debt, and it seemed at times, as if it would suffocate him. One evening he came home, feeling more so
