in all sorts of conveyances, in great hurry and nfusion. The secret of this precipitate flight of the citizens, is contained in a document which I forward to you, an address of the Colonel of a North Carolina Regiment to his men which I found among his papers in camp an hour or two after the fight. The misrepresentation therein contained, especially in regard to the beastly vandalism and inhumanity of our troops, has cost them dear; and I have no doubt the terror inspired by the presence of such an enemy, added greatly to our chances of suc-There is not the slightest doubt to my mind, that had the citizens comprehended for a moment our real designs as victors, Newbern would have been to-day a place to be envied by the South, instead of a deserted, desolate and forsaken city; thus the blow intended for us has recoiled with redoubled force upon their own

The wounded rebels are astonished by the kindness and attention shown them. A rebel Captain who commanded a fort upon the river, called Fort Ellis, mounting eight 32-pounders, was found lying in the works, severely burned by the explosion of the magazine of his fort, which he fired with a short train of powder; he was most shockingly burned, and his right leg was broken by one of the timbers thrown upon it by the explosion.

We had him brought into our camp, and everything was done for him that possibly could be done to alleviate his sufferings. He expressed his disappointment many times over at the kindly treatment shown him. He is not however sufficiently grateful to declare for the Union, and expressed a wish to the writer today that he might soon recover and be exchanged, as he was anxious to take the field again. The name of this rebel Captain is James M. Mayo, 36th Reg. N. C. troops, (ar- quantity desired at low rates. A. L. CURTISS & Co. tillery,) a lawyer by profession, and more or less of a politician. Speaking of the Captain reminds me that our boys have brought in a number of prisoners, and contrabands are too numerous for our comfort, we don't know what to do with them, but provide quarters for all

The General is already projecting plans for another blow at "Secessia," and our successes will not end at this point unless some other troops are sent to meet us; from what we hear they are wanted at every point at once, which is rather hard on the Confederates.

If you will glance at the difficulties and obstacles of all kinds which this expedition has had to encounter and has surmounted, from the day when in a terrible gale it reached Hatteras, you must acknowledge that nothing but the most indomitable energy, supported by the utmost confidence in ultimate success, has characterized it throughout. The events at Hatteras were in themselves enough to have disheartened almost any one but Gen. Burnside I enclose a list of the killed, wounded and missing in the 11th Regiment, C. V.; the 8th and 10th have suffered perhaps more than the 11th, but how much more I cannot say. The total loss in the division is variously estimated from three to five hundred killed and wounded. The rebel loss is unknown at present. The wounded are doing well-all that the best of medical attendance can do, is done; an ample supply of medical stores is on hand, and, in fact, everything absolutely required for the sick and wounded is provided for them. I returned not an hour ago from the hospital, where the wounded of our own regiment are; I found

I close at once for fear I shall forget to stop writing; for, really, I did not see the end from ng and it appears no nearer tha when I began. I believe, however, I have glanced at all the most important matters, Among the dead of the 11th, we have to regret the fall of Capt. E. R. Lee of Company D. a brave and gallant officer, who feel early in the day, fighting most gallantly for the principles he advocated so zealously. Yours, &c.

From the Atlantic for March VOYAGE OF THE GOOD SHIP UNION.

BY OLIVER WENDELL HOLMSE

'Tis midnight, through my troubled dream Loud wails the tempest's cry: Before the gale with tattered sall,

A ship goes plunging by,
What name? Where bound?—The rocks &rous
Repeat the loud h-lloo.
-The good ship Union, Southward bound,
God help her and her crew!

And is the old flag flying still
That o'er your father s flew,
With bands of white and rosy light,
And fleids of starry blue?
-Ah! look aloft! its fo'ds full oft
Have braved the rosting blast,
And stil shall fly when from the sky
This black typhoon has past! Speak, pilot of the storm-tost bark!
May I thy peril share?

May I thy peril share?
O landsman, those are fearful seas
The brave alone may dare!
—Nay, ruler of the rebel deep,
What matters wind or wave? The rocks that wreck your reeling deck Will leave me nought to sa e!

What sign hast the u to show?
What sign hast the u to show?
—The crimson stains from loyal veins
That hold my heart-blood's flow!
—Enough! what more shall honor claim?
I know the sacred sign:
Above hy head our flag shall spread,
Our ccean path be thine!

The bark sails on; the Pilgrim's Cape The bark sails on; the Filgrim's Cape
Lies low along her lee,
Whose head and crooks in anchor flukes
To lock the shore and s'a.
No treason here! it cost too dear
To win this barren realm!
And true and rice the hands must be
That heid the whaler's helm!

Still on! Manhattan's narrowing bay No Rebel cruiser sears;
Her waters feel no phrate's keel
That flaunts toe falling stars!
—But wat h the light on youder hight—
Ay, pilot, have a care!
Some linge ing cloud in mist may shroud
The capes or Delaware!

Say, pilot, what this fort may be, Whose scutinels lock down
From monted walls that show the sea
Their deep embrasures' frown?
The Rabel host craims all the coast, But these are friends, we know,
Whose footprints spoil the "sacred soil,"
And this is? — Fort Monroe!

The breakers roar—how bears the shore?
The traitor us wrocker's hands
Have quencied the blaze that poured its rays.
Along the ratterns sands.
—Ha! say not so! I see its glow!
Again the shoals display
The beacon light that shines by night,
The Union Stars by day!

The good ship flies to milder skies, The wave more gently flows,
The softening breez wafts o'er the seas
To brathe o' Beauto. 't's rose.
What fold is this the sweet winds kiss,
Far-striped and many-starred,
Whose shadow palls the orphaned walls,
The twins of Reauregard?

What! heard you not Port Royal's doom? How the black war-ships came
And turned the Beaufort roses' bloom
To redder wreaths of flame?
How from Rebellion's broken roed
He saw his emblem fall,

As soon his cursed poison-weed Shall drop from Sumter's wall? On! On! Pulaski's iron hail Falls harmless on Tybee! Her topsails feel the freshning gale, She strikes the open sea; She rounds the point, she threads the keys That guard the land of flowers And rides at last where firm and fast Her own Gibraltar towers!

The good ship Union's voyage is e.er, at anchor safe she swings, and loud and lear with cheer on cheer her j yous welcome rings; Hurrah! Hurah! it shakes the wave, It to ware no her beautiful to the shore.

It is thought probable that the rebels are marching acress the neck of land from the island to Merriweather's Landing in the Mississippi, only five miles over a practicable road, and below Point Pleasant, the place where Gen. Pope has batteries, and that when they are embarked on the boats (the smoke of which was plainly seen on Sunday, at or near Merriweather's Landing, from the gunboat Benton), we shall find the rebel nest empty and the river clear of rebels at Randolph or Fort Pillow.

> The Emancipation Message. The Democratic papers were generally at first well disposed towards the President's conciliatory emancipation policy. Even the Journal of Commerce approved the message. But the Boston Post and Argus dissent, the Post on the ground that Congress has no authority to appropriate the public money to the purchase and emancipation of slaves, and the Argus because its jealous eve sees in the scheme the germ of a consolidated Government. Some of the emancipation papers also praise the message, but claim for it more than its language warrants. The New York Tribune finds in it a threat to the slave States that if they do not accept the help of the Government, the Government will proceed to eradicate slavery without their cooperation and consent. If the people of the South should infer any such implied threat the message could only be an obstacle to its avowed object. But the most gratifiying thing about the message is, that the moderate slaveholders in the Border States have given it their most hearty approval.

How is it about that "Swede," that escaped from Norfolk before the fight of the Merrimac. The story was that Gen. HOW THE BATTLE OF NEWBERN

WAS FOUGHT. STATEMENT OF AN OFFICER WHO WAS PRESENT.

TEN HOURS MARCHING AND FIGHTING

BALTIMORE, March 18, 1862. Sergeant-major D. H. Johnson, of the 23d Mass. regiment, came a passenger in the steamer Commodore in charge of the bodies of Lieut.

Col. Merritt, of the 23d Mass., and Adjt. Stearns, of the 21st Mass., who bravely fell while leading on their regiments in an attack on the enemy's batteries at Newbern. From Major Johnson, who was in the fight, we gather the following interesting particulars Our troops, under Gen. Burnside, landed on Thursday evening near the mouth of Sin creek, on the west side of the Neuse river, fifteen miles below Newbern.

Owing to a dense fog the naval vessels did not participate in the fight.

Early on Friday morning the fight com-

Our troops advanced along a country road running parallel with the Neuse river, but a mile or two in the rear of the road skirted on the west side by the rail road and a dense

All along the river side were a series of bat teries, which were taken by our troops one after another.

After some bloody hand to hand contests our troops were divided in three brigades under Generals Reno, Foster and Parks.

We advanced gradually; the enemy desert ing their guns until we reached a line of earthworks extending across the road from the river to the swamp on the west, a distance of some two miles

These carthworks were very strong. They were located about two miles south of Newbern and between there and the city ran the Trent river.

The county road and railroad both passed through these works, and crossed into the city by bridges.

In front of these works the rebels had felled a large number of trees, forming an almost impenetrable abattis.

Here the flying rebels were rallied and made for a while a desperate stand. Our brave fellows fought until all their ammunition was spent, when an order to charge bayonets was given, and the works were finally taken at the point of the bayonet. The enemy flying like frightened sheep, leaving everything behind

In their retreat they burnt the bridges communicating with the town over both the country road and the railroad. As they had trains of cars in their rear just across the bridges, they, of course, were able to carry off their wounded and dead.

Their loss is therefore, not certainly known, but must have been pretty severe. Before our troops reached this last work, they encountered another which was deserted. It was in front of this last fortification that the greatest loss was sustained. Our entire loss is estimated at 90 killed, and 400 wounded and missing. The force of the rebels is supposed to have SHIPPING INTELLIGENCE.

been about 8,000. We captured a number of prisoners, including Col. Avory, who cursed his soldiers as cowards.

As the battle terminated, the fog lightened and enabled our gunboats, which had been impatiently waiting an opportunity to participate in the fight, to come up the river, and our troops were thus furnished with means of transportation across the Trent river to New-

The rebels attempted to fire the town on their retreat, but were prevented by citizens, who extinguished the flames as fas. as they were started by the soldiers.

None of our Generals nor any of ou. staff officers were either killed or wounded.

We captured from thirty to fifty cannon. Officers of rebels left their private traps behind in their final retreat, and the men threw away every thing. The fight terminated at 8 p. m. on Friday, when our troops remained masters of the position.

"Very well," he replied, "pass powder as long as possible, but tell the magazine men to look out in time to save themselves." This order being executed, I presume about seven minutes elapsed before I saw the magazine men come up well wet on to the B. deck. At this time, some 10 or 12 mangled bodies were carried into the sick bay, where were lying two sick men in cots. A shell at this moment came into the bay, well on the starboard bow and did awful work. Water now began to gain very rapidly. No more 10-inch powder to be had-and the powder passers (mere boys) behaved nobly, standing knee deep and passing powder from the after magazine. Mess chests, bags and wood were now floating forward of the fore hatch, and had reached a wounded man by the name of Harrold, who asked me to have him moved. I got a wounded man (Powell) to assist me and we carried him nearly to the main hatch. In a minute or two, I had him moved again to the main mast on B. deck. I now began to think the ship would soon sink. I ran to Mr. Mack and reported to him the water on the berth deck to the combings of the main hatchway. Mr. Mack, gave me orders to report the same to the 1st Lieut. I started on my mission, but before I reached the main deck the ship began to careen. Death of Ben McCulloch. General Ben McCulloch, who is reported among the killed in the battle of Ozark Mountains, was a Tennesseean by birth, and a vagabond and traiter by nature. He went to Texas run away alone to Mexico, or some other safe which he became known was committed in Dewhich attacked the town of Mier. The Texans were in turn threatened by a superior force under Ampudio; and in order to secure their retreat. Fisher, the colonel in command, sent McCulloch with a detachment to gather horses and mules from the surrounding country and bring them into the town. McCalloch got the horses, but persuaded the men under his command to desert and leave their companions to their fate, which was decimination by the Mexicans and long imprisonment and suffering for the survivors. #### Burnside's Report of the Action at Newbern. Washington, March 19, 1862.

Gen. Burnside, in his official report, says : I must defer for want of time a detailed ac count of the action. It is enough to say that after an engagement of 4 hours, we succeeded in carrying a continuous line of field works, over Fort Macon, at St. Augustine, Fla. a mile in length, protected on the river bank by a battery of 13 heavy guns, and on the opposite bank by a line of redoubts over half a mile n length, for riflemen and field pieces, in the midst of swamps and dense forests; which line of work was defended by 8 regiments of infantry; 500 cavalry, and three batteries of field artillery of six guns each.

The position was finally carried by a most gain all the batteries between this point and recommends the entire evacuation of East Newbern, which was done by a rapid advance Florida. of our entire force up the river road and railroad.

The city was set on fire by the retreating rebels in many places; but the remaining citizens and naval officers extinguished with the latter the rebels had evacuated and burnt them. the damage. Many of the citizens are now returning and we are in quiet possession of the city. We have captured a printing press and shall at once issue a daily paper.

The naval fleet, meantime, pursued its way up the river, throwing shot into the forts in front of us. The rebels after retreating in confusion and throwing away their blankets, knapsacks, arms, &c., went across the railroad bridge and country road, burning the former and de stroying the draw of the latter, thus prevent ing further pursuit, which caused a detention in occupying the town by our force. But the naval force had reached the wharves and comnanded them by their guns. I at once advanced Gen. Foster's Brigade to take possession of the town by means of the vessels.

By this victory we have captured eight bateries, containing 46 heavy guns; three light batteries of six guns each-in all 64 guns-two steamboats, a number of sailing vessels, wag ons, horses, a large quantity of ammunition Commissary and Quartermaster's stores; forage and the entire camp equippage of the rebel troops; a large quantity of rosin, turpentine, cotton and over 200 prisoners.

Our loss, thus far ascertained, amounts to 91 silled and 466 wounded, many mortally. Among these are some of our most gal

Events have followed so closely upon each other, and so much has been crowded into the few hours since we landed at "Bay Point," that I cannot hope to chronicle a tithe of that which is to be told. It seems almost incredible that such a strongly fortified position should have been abandoned brief space of two and a half hours; in fact it seems incredible that it was taken at all by so small a force. I expected to find Newbern strongly fortified, but I did not expect to find three and a half miles of intrenchments defended by heavy artillery and a force of from eight to ten thousand infantrymen, to say nothing of

The scene when we first clambered over the parapet, over which the smoke of their guns still hung, was beyond description. You would and horses strewed the ground—the blackened from the wounded and dying blended with the cheers for the flags, which floated proudly above us; bullets were still whistling through the air, and the gunboats opened their deadly volleys into the woods along the line of the railroad which were swarming with the disorganized and panic-stricken for es of the enemy. We had the satisfaction of taking a few Enfield rifles, lately imported from England and landed at Beaufort by the rebel steamer Nashville.

The attempt of the rebels to burn the city was not successful, as only a few buildings were destroyed, but a defeat had been in a measure anticipated, as the great bulk of the merchandise and household goods, and in fact all transportable property, had been removed several
