

THE DAILY PALLADIUM IS THE OLDEST DAILY PAPER IN NEW HAVEN, AND BEING AS

FOREVER FIRST THAT STANDARD SHEET! Wherever it is sold, it falls before us!

A TRUCE TO OUR STRIFE. It is particularly gratifying to see the hearts of our people united as they are by our national calamities.

General Halleck. The appointment of Gen. Halleck as Commander-in-Chief, and practical director of the war, will be hailed with delight by the country.

Bounties. Do not wait for more bounties to be offered. If you design to enlist at all, now is the time.

Our Danger. The following correspondence will be read with interest, especially when it is known that Secretary Seward is of a hopeful cast of mind, and not in the least an alarmist.

Beers W. Munson. Sympathy in affliction is a great consolation, as was shown in the case of our deceased friend, Beers W. Munson, by the members of the Company with which he was formerly associated.

Civil War. The case of Mrs. Bridget McPartland for assault on Luke McGarvey was tried this morning. There appears to be a state of hostilities of the most bitter sort existing between these parties.

Joel F. Gray, Co. E, 12th Regiment, died suddenly at St. John's Hospital, New Orleans, July 3d. He had been discharged from the hospital, where he had been sick with Cholera Morbus, but was re-attacked and lived but five hours.

LOCAL AFFAIRS.

We are glad to learn that Captain Sep. S. Smith and Lieut. Wm. A. Bowns, are meeting with good success and expect to fill up their company of volunteers next week.

The Tenth Regiment. Capt. Goodyear of the 10th regiment C. V., will return to his regiment about the first week in August. He will take on small parcels for those who wish to send to members of the regiment.

The Harbor. The steam mud-digger which for several weeks has been busy in the harbor removing the deep deposits of mud about the docks, has cleared the space at the Steamboat Wharf, and Bell Dock, so that there is now an average depth of twelve feet about these docks at low water.

Sabbath School Picnic. Several omnibuses and horse cars loaded to the utmost with the children of the Sabbath School of the College-street Church, and of the mission school connected with that Church, left Chapel street about 2 o'clock this afternoon.

At 10 1/2 o'clock, last evening, an alarm of fire was raised. It was found to be caused by the burning of a barn belonging to Amasa Porter, situated at the upper end of Oak street, near West River.

Postage Stamps for Change. Postage stamps being now a legal tender for all sums under five dollars, have within a day or two become quite numerous as a circulating medium.

Books Received. The American Annual Cyclopaedia and Register of Important Events of the year 1861, has been received from D. Appleton & Co. It embraces a great variety of interesting information, and appears to be especially valuable as a book of reference.

Deaths in the Twelfth Connecticut Regt. The following is a list of deaths in the 12th regiment since they left Hartford four months ago: March 13th, Dr. John B. Welch, State Surgeon at Ship Island, of typhoid fever; May 8th, Private Edward Baker, Co. K, at New Orleans General Hospital, of typhoid fever; May 23d, Private Morris Church, Co. G, at Ship Island Hospital, of typhoid fever; May 27th, Private John H. Carrie, Co. D, at Camp Parapet Hospital, of typhoid fever; June 7th, Lieut. Charles Cornwell, Co. I, at Camp Parapet Hospital, of typhoid fever; remains sent to New Haven; June 14, Private Timothy O. Leary, Co. C, drowned while bathing in the Mississippi. The body was recovered, and buried 8 miles below on the other side of the river; June 18th, Private James Brookman, Co. A, at Camp Parapet Hospital, of typhoid fever; June 19th, Secretary Wm. Hurd, Co. E, at Camp Parapet Hospital, of typhoid fever; June 20th, Private A. S. Sackett, Co. I, at Camp Parapet Hospital, of typhoid fever; June 21st, Capt. Joseph T. Toy, Co. H, at Camp Parapet Hospital, of typhoid fever; remains sent to Simsbury, Ct.; June 21st, Orderly Sergeant Henry M. Frowitt, Jr., Co. E, at Camp Parapet Hospital, of typhoid fever; remains sent to Norfolk, Ct.; June 26th, Private Alonzo S. Atkins, dropped dead in the street of heart disease; remains buried at Camp Parapet burying ground; June 29th, Private Wilson Babcock, Co. D, died suddenly in his tent of heart disease.

Military Items. Capt. J. D. Griswold of Old Lyme, Co. I, 11th Connecticut Volunteers, has been appointed Post-Commissary of the city of Newbern, N. C. The following promotions have been made in the Tenth Regiment: 1st Lieut. John L. Otis of Co. F, to be Captain of Co. I, vice Daniel M. Mead, promoted; 2d Lieut. Charles G. Bates, wood of Co. B, to be 1st Lieut. of Co. F; 2d Lieut. John A. Way of Co. C, to be 1st Lieut.; John C. Coffin of Co. G, to be 1st Lieut. of Co. K, vice Geo. W. Atherton, promoted; 2d Lieut. Wm. W. Perkins of Co. H, to be 1st Lieut. of Co. A, vice Benjamin Jepson, promoted; Orderly Sergt. Theron D. Hill of Co. B, to be 2d Lieut.; Orderly Sergt. Benjamin L. Graves of Co. G, to be 2d Lieut.; Orderly Sergt. Wm. M. Webb of Co. H, to be 2d Lieut.; Orderly Sergt. Theron D. Hill, Jr. of Co. F, to be 2d Lieut., vice Geo. McCaw, promoted.

THE ARMY OF VIRGINIA.—Vigorous Measures to be Used.

Gen. Pope, on July 18th, issued three general orders that seem to set things in motion in the right direction. The first relates to subsistence, and states that hereafter, as far as practicable, the troops of this command will subsist upon the country in which their operations are carried on.

The second states that the cavalry force will dispense with supply and baggage trains, carrying two days cooked rations; and all villages or neighborhoods through which they pass will be laid under contribution in the manner specified by general orders above, for the subsistence of men and horses.

The third notifies the people of the Shenandoah and throughout the region of operations, that they will be held responsible for any injury to railroads, telegraph lines, and for any attacks upon trains or straggling soldiers.

RELIGIOUS NOTICES. SOUTH CHURCH.—There will be preaching in the morning at the usual hour, and in the evening at quarter before 8 o'clock. Sabbath school and young people's prayer meeting in the afternoon.

THE UNITED SERVICE will be held in the Center Church to-morrow evening. Subject, 'The duty and the method of Conciliating the Revolted States.'

COLLEGE STREET CHURCH.—Rev. Mr. Coe, of Danbury, preaches in the College Street Church to-morrow.

GERMAN MORAVIAN SERVICE.—Rev. C. G. Rental will preach on Sunday at half-past 10 o'clock, and at 3 o'clock. Sabbath School commences at 2 o'clock. Place of worship—Lecture Room of Trinity Church, Grogson street.

DASHAWAY CLUB No. 1, holds its annual temperance meeting to-morrow evening, in the Orange street Chapel.

UNIVERSALIST CHURCH.—Services to-morrow afternoon at three o'clock. Subject, 'The Millennium; or the Golden Age to Come.' The Sabbath School will meet at 10 1/2 o'clock, a. m. Daily meetings for prayer, next week, will be held at Temple Hall, every morning, at 8 o'clock.

PUBLIC ACTS.

CHAPTER XXV. An Act in addition to an Act relating to Toll Bridges and Draw Bridges. Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives, in General Assembly convened:

CHAPTER XXVI. An Act in addition to an Act relating to Toll Bridges and Draw Bridges. Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives, in General Assembly convened:

CHAPTER XXVII. An Act in addition to an Act relating to Toll Bridges and Draw Bridges. Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives, in General Assembly convened:

CHAPTER XXVIII. An Act in addition to an Act relating to Toll Bridges and Draw Bridges. Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives, in General Assembly convened:

CHAPTER XXIX. An Act in addition to an Act relating to Toll Bridges and Draw Bridges. Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives, in General Assembly convened:

CHAPTER XXX. An Act in addition to an Act relating to Toll Bridges and Draw Bridges. Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives, in General Assembly convened:

CHAPTER XXXI. An Act in addition to an Act relating to Toll Bridges and Draw Bridges. Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives, in General Assembly convened:

CHAPTER XXXII. An Act in addition to an Act relating to Toll Bridges and Draw Bridges. Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives, in General Assembly convened:

CHAPTER XXXIII. An Act in addition to an Act relating to Toll Bridges and Draw Bridges. Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives, in General Assembly convened:

PUBLIC ACTS.

CHAPTER XXXIV. An Act in addition to an Act relating to Toll Bridges and Draw Bridges. Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives, in General Assembly convened:

CHAPTER XXXV. An Act in addition to an Act relating to Toll Bridges and Draw Bridges. Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives, in General Assembly convened:

CHAPTER XXXVI. An Act in addition to an Act relating to Toll Bridges and Draw Bridges. Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives, in General Assembly convened:

CHAPTER XXXVII. An Act in addition to an Act relating to Toll Bridges and Draw Bridges. Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives, in General Assembly convened:

CHAPTER XXXVIII. An Act in addition to an Act relating to Toll Bridges and Draw Bridges. Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives, in General Assembly convened:

CHAPTER XXXIX. An Act in addition to an Act relating to Toll Bridges and Draw Bridges. Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives, in General Assembly convened:

CHAPTER XL. An Act in addition to an Act relating to Toll Bridges and Draw Bridges. Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives, in General Assembly convened:

CHAPTER XLI. An Act in addition to an Act relating to Toll Bridges and Draw Bridges. Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives, in General Assembly convened:

CHAPTER XLII. An Act in addition to an Act relating to Toll Bridges and Draw Bridges. Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives, in General Assembly convened:

FOREIGN NEWS.

The City of Washington arrived off Cape Race at 10 o'clock, Friday afternoon. The Opinion Nationale says, that Russian papers revive the rumor that France, in consequence of the stubbornness of England against doing so, has invited Russia to join her in an offer of mediation to America.

One hundred thousand dollars was realized by the sale of the cargoes of the prize ships Lizzie Weston, Clinton, and Napoleon, at New York, yesterday.

Among the confirmations by the Senate appear as Aides-de-Camp to Gen. Wool, with the rank of Major, William P. Jones and Chas. Von Herman, of Connecticut.

Information from Gen. McClellan's headquarters up to Thursday night reports the health of the troops improving, and no difficulty in securing subsistence supplies. No military movements of consequence are mentioned.

Gen. K. Saxton, writing from Beaufort, S. C., July 10th, to the War Department, says we have some fifteen thousand acres of cotton and corn under cultivation, and the negroes are working industriously.

Suffield had its lowest meeting, Thursday afternoon, largely attended. They voted to give one hundred dollars extra bounty to each recruit from that town. With the State and Government bounty that makes two hundred dollars cash, in advance, before starting. Liberal enough. The men will soon be enlisted.

Let a youth who stands at the bar with a glass of liquor in his hand, consider which he had better throw away—the liquor or himself.

BY TELEGRAPH TO THE NEW HAVEN DAILY PALLADIUM. The North American off Cape Race. ONE DAY LATER FROM EUROPE. CARE RACE, July 19, 1862.

The steamship North American from Liverpool on the 10th, via Queenstown the 11th inst., passed this point at 11 o'clock this morning, en route to Quebec. Her clock is one day later than those by the Nova Scotia. The steamship Bavaria, from New York, arrived at Southampton on the 10th inst. The news of the series of battles fought before Richmond excited the greatest attention, and it was thought that it would result in prolonging the war.

Special Notices.

DR. SWEET'S INFALLIBLE LIMENT cures cuts and wounds immediately, and leaves no scar.

FALL IN BOYS! FALL IN! AND ENROLL YOUR NAMES WITH THE HALLECK RIFLES!! LYON REGIMENT.

Recruiting at Candee & Bown's old store, in STATE ST., NEAR CHAPEL ST., also at TENT ON PARK IN BROADWAY, under the auspices of the Union Association.

Secure the State bounty of $50, and the U. S. bounty of $25 offered to immediate volunteers. Pay and ratons commence from the day of enlistment, as follows:

State bounty paid upon enlistment within 30 days $50 00

State bounty paid in first year, for which $10 00 is paid in advance $60 00

State bounty for two children each year $45 00

Total from the State in one year $250 00

United States Pay, $13 per month $156 00

NEW HAVEN DAILY PALLADIUM
MONDAY, JULY 21, 1862.
DAILY..... Per Annum..... $5 00
WEEKLY..... Per Annum..... 2 00
SPECIAL ADVERTISING NOTICE
FOR READING MATTER, SEE LIST AND 4TH PAGE.

THE UNION AND CONSTITUTION
Forever free that standard shall
Where freedom's soil beneath our feet,
With Freedom's banner streaming o'er us!

Our Country Calls.
We know that the farmer as he pursues his avocation, is likely to think that he cannot get along without the usual number of hands in the field, but he should recollect that the General, fighting the battles of his country, is powerless without men to carry out his plans, and that reverse to the General will surely and speedily bring upon the devoted head of the farmer all the bitterness that war is so capable of producing. Sacrifices must be made, and are being made. The merchant contributes the very money he so much needs to enable him to prosecute his business without failure and disaster, and manages that business with prudence and care, knowing that if the cause of his country fails, he goes by the board with it. Then let there be no withholding of men "to help their work;" but, as a wise Providence has by the skill of man perfected machines to gather in the crops of the land, let those who have the articles assist their neighbors generously and lighten the burdens of the men pressed heavily by work. We are passing through an ordeal that tests the best qualities of man—and noble is he above his fellow men who by prompt action and worthy deed shows the least selfishness, and exhibits more of those qualities that shone in revolutionary days. We love to read of the patriotism of other days; it is given to us to furnish still more illustrious pages to the nation's history.

Gen. Pope's Orders.
The orders recently issued by Gen. Pope are significant not only as showing the vigor with which he himself is disposed to act, but as indicating the future policy of the Administration. Gen. Pope has been selected by the President as the commander of the army of the Shenandoah and vicinity, because in his Western campaign he exhibited in a remarkable degree both prudence in counsel and promptness in action. The President wisely judged that a General who had been so uniformly successful in the West, was the proper person to inspire confidence in our Eastern troops, while the good judgment everywhere displayed by Gen. Pope would secure the Government from those embarrassments into which a more impetuous General might plunge. Taking the command by the special direction of the President, General Pope undoubtedly is familiar with the wishes of the Administration. His first act is to issue a series of orders, requiring the utmost activity on the part of his soldiers, throwing the burden of the war in a large measure upon the country of the enemy, and holding the inhabitants of the territory in the rear of his army, responsible for any disturbances which may occur. The people of the Shenandoah are no longer to be regarded as irresponsible neutrals, while they give information to the enemy and secretly rejoice at the destruction of railroads and telegraphs; but for every such offence they are to be held responsible, and the injury will be obliged to repair it. They may have found it quite exhilarating to tear up railroad tracks and break down bridges in the night. They will hardly find it as pleasant to reconstruct them in the day.

An Imposition.
A few days since, a female called at the house of a very respectable family in Olive street, and desired to rent a room, stating that she was married, but that her husband was away on a military expedition, and that she was at work in a shirt manufactory. The story was plausible, and the woman's appearance was not suspicious, and the room was rented as desired. It was soon found by the family that she had captured a Tartar, for in a few days the stranger had far too many callers of a suspicious character, whose visits were made at doubtful hours. Moreover, the new comer had introduced another female friend of suspicious character. The trouble was unbearable, and the family thus imposed upon, made complaint to the police. They made a descent upon the place on Sunday evening, and captured the two women and two male friends who had extended their calls beyond the limits of reasonable hours. The two women and one of the men have their trial to-morrow; the other man pleaded guilty to charges alleged against him, and paid a heavy fine and costs.

The Army of Virginia.
GEN. POPE'S ORDERS.
The effect of Major General Pope's official orders upon his troops is said to be wonderful. It has infused new vigor, given them additional strength and courage, and increased anxiety for active operations. On the 17th an order was issued announcing that no more passes except for the day would be granted. No officer or soldier will be permitted to leave his command on any pretense whatever, without authority from headquarters. All officers found absent from their commands five days after the date of the order, will be arrested and tried for disobedience. All soldiers absent after that time will be confined, and returned under guard to their regiments for trial by court martial.

The Lyon Regiment.
There is not perhaps at the present time as much enthusiasm in enlisting as there was a year since, just after the events of the 19th of April. Companies are not raised in a day, nor do recruits muster at a moment's notice. But this does not indicate in the least that the desired regiments cannot or will not be raised. Recruits are coming forward with commendable zeal in most of the country towns, and probably there are men enough enlisted to-day to fill up the 14th and 15th Regiments.

Our Country Calls.
We know that the farmer as he pursues his avocation, is likely to think that he cannot get along without the usual number of hands in the field, but he should recollect that the General, fighting the battles of his country, is powerless without men to carry out his plans, and that reverse to the General will surely and speedily bring upon the devoted head of the farmer all the bitterness that war is so capable of producing. Sacrifices must be made, and are being made. The merchant contributes the very money he so much needs to enable him to prosecute his business without failure and disaster, and manages that business with prudence and care, knowing that if the cause of his country fails, he goes by the board with it. Then let there be no withholding of men "to help their work;" but, as a wise Providence has by the skill of man perfected machines to gather in the crops of the land, let those who have the articles assist their neighbors generously and lighten the burdens of the men pressed heavily by work. We are passing through an ordeal that tests the best qualities of man—and noble is he above his fellow men who by prompt action and worthy deed shows the least selfishness, and exhibits more of those qualities that shone in revolutionary days. We love to read of the patriotism of other days; it is given to us to furnish still more illustrious pages to the nation's history.

Our Country Calls.
We know that the farmer as he pursues his avocation, is likely to think that he cannot get along without the usual number of hands in the field, but he should recollect that the General, fighting the battles of his country, is powerless without men to carry out his plans, and that reverse to the General will surely and speedily bring upon the devoted head of the farmer all the bitterness that war is so capable of producing. Sacrifices must be made, and are being made. The merchant contributes the very money he so much needs to enable him to prosecute his business without failure and disaster, and manages that business with prudence and care, knowing that if the cause of his country fails, he goes by the board with it. Then let there be no withholding of men "to help their work;" but, as a wise Providence has by the skill of man perfected machines to gather in the crops of the land, let those who have the articles assist their neighbors generously and lighten the burdens of the men pressed heavily by work. We are passing through an ordeal that tests the best qualities of man—and noble is he above his fellow men who by prompt action and worthy deed shows the least selfishness, and exhibits more of those qualities that shone in revolutionary days. We love to read of the patriotism of other days; it is given to us to furnish still more illustrious pages to the nation's history.

Our Country Calls.
We know that the farmer as he pursues his avocation, is likely to think that he cannot get along without the usual number of hands in the field, but he should recollect that the General, fighting the battles of his country, is powerless without men to carry out his plans, and that reverse to the General will surely and speedily bring upon the devoted head of the farmer all the bitterness that war is so capable of producing. Sacrifices must be made, and are being made. The merchant contributes the very money he so much needs to enable him to prosecute his business without failure and disaster, and manages that business with prudence and care, knowing that if the cause of his country fails, he goes by the board with it. Then let there be no withholding of men "to help their work;" but, as a wise Providence has by the skill of man perfected machines to gather in the crops of the land, let those who have the articles assist their neighbors generously and lighten the burdens of the men pressed heavily by work. We are passing through an ordeal that tests the best qualities of man—and noble is he above his fellow men who by prompt action and worthy deed shows the least selfishness, and exhibits more of those qualities that shone in revolutionary days. We love to read of the patriotism of other days; it is given to us to furnish still more illustrious pages to the nation's history.

Our Country Calls.
We know that the farmer as he pursues his avocation, is likely to think that he cannot get along without the usual number of hands in the field, but he should recollect that the General, fighting the battles of his country, is powerless without men to carry out his plans, and that reverse to the General will surely and speedily bring upon the devoted head of the farmer all the bitterness that war is so capable of producing. Sacrifices must be made, and are being made. The merchant contributes the very money he so much needs to enable him to prosecute his business without failure and disaster, and manages that business with prudence and care, knowing that if the cause of his country fails, he goes by the board with it. Then let there be no withholding of men "to help their work;" but, as a wise Providence has by the skill of man perfected machines to gather in the crops of the land, let those who have the articles assist their neighbors generously and lighten the burdens of the men pressed heavily by work. We are passing through an ordeal that tests the best qualities of man—and noble is he above his fellow men who by prompt action and worthy deed shows the least selfishness, and exhibits more of those qualities that shone in revolutionary days. We love to read of the patriotism of other days; it is given to us to furnish still more illustrious pages to the nation's history.

Our Country Calls.
We know that the farmer as he pursues his avocation, is likely to think that he cannot get along without the usual number of hands in the field, but he should recollect that the General, fighting the battles of his country, is powerless without men to carry out his plans, and that reverse to the General will surely and speedily bring upon the devoted head of the farmer all the bitterness that war is so capable of producing. Sacrifices must be made, and are being made. The merchant contributes the very money he so much needs to enable him to prosecute his business without failure and disaster, and manages that business with prudence and care, knowing that if the cause of his country fails, he goes by the board with it. Then let there be no withholding of men "to help their work;" but, as a wise Providence has by the skill of man perfected machines to gather in the crops of the land, let those who have the articles assist their neighbors generously and lighten the burdens of the men pressed heavily by work. We are passing through an ordeal that tests the best qualities of man—and noble is he above his fellow men who by prompt action and worthy deed shows the least selfishness, and exhibits more of those qualities that shone in revolutionary days. We love to read of the patriotism of other days; it is given to us to furnish still more illustrious pages to the nation's history.

Our Country Calls.
We know that the farmer as he pursues his avocation, is likely to think that he cannot get along without the usual number of hands in the field, but he should recollect that the General, fighting the battles of his country, is powerless without men to carry out his plans, and that reverse to the General will surely and speedily bring upon the devoted head of the farmer all the bitterness that war is so capable of producing. Sacrifices must be made, and are being made. The merchant contributes the very money he so much needs to enable him to prosecute his business without failure and disaster, and manages that business with prudence and care, knowing that if the cause of his country fails, he goes by the board with it. Then let there be no withholding of men "to help their work;" but, as a wise Providence has by the skill of man perfected machines to gather in the crops of the land, let those who have the articles assist their neighbors generously and lighten the burdens of the men pressed heavily by work. We are passing through an ordeal that tests the best qualities of man—and noble is he above his fellow men who by prompt action and worthy deed shows the least selfishness, and exhibits more of those qualities that shone in revolutionary days. We love to read of the patriotism of other days; it is given to us to furnish still more illustrious pages to the nation's history.

Our Country Calls.
We know that the farmer as he pursues his avocation, is likely to think that he cannot get along without the usual number of hands in the field, but he should recollect that the General, fighting the battles of his country, is powerless without men to carry out his plans, and that reverse to the General will surely and speedily bring upon the devoted head of the farmer all the bitterness that war is so capable of producing. Sacrifices must be made, and are being made. The merchant contributes the very money he so much needs to enable him to prosecute his business without failure and disaster, and manages that business with prudence and care, knowing that if the cause of his country fails, he goes by the board with it. Then let there be no withholding of men "to help their work;" but, as a wise Providence has by the skill of man perfected machines to gather in the crops of the land, let those who have the articles assist their neighbors generously and lighten the burdens of the men pressed heavily by work. We are passing through an ordeal that tests the best qualities of man—and noble is he above his fellow men who by prompt action and worthy deed shows the least selfishness, and exhibits more of those qualities that shone in revolutionary days. We love to read of the patriotism of other days; it is given to us to furnish still more illustrious pages to the nation's history.

Our Country Calls.
We know that the farmer as he pursues his avocation, is likely to think that he cannot get along without the usual number of hands in the field, but he should recollect that the General, fighting the battles of his country, is powerless without men to carry out his plans, and that reverse to the General will surely and speedily bring upon the devoted head of the farmer all the bitterness that war is so capable of producing. Sacrifices must be made, and are being made. The merchant contributes the very money he so much needs to enable him to prosecute his business without failure and disaster, and manages that business with prudence and care, knowing that if the cause of his country fails, he goes by the board with it. Then let there be no withholding of men "to help their work;" but, as a wise Providence has by the skill of man perfected machines to gather in the crops of the land, let those who have the articles assist their neighbors generously and lighten the burdens of the men pressed heavily by work. We are passing through an ordeal that tests the best qualities of man—and noble is he above his fellow men who by prompt action and worthy deed shows the least selfishness, and exhibits more of those qualities that shone in revolutionary days. We love to read of the patriotism of other days; it is given to us to furnish still more illustrious pages to the nation's history.

Our Country Calls.
We know that the farmer as he pursues his avocation, is likely to think that he cannot get along without the usual number of hands in the field, but he should recollect that the General, fighting the battles of his country, is powerless without men to carry out his plans, and that reverse to the General will surely and speedily bring upon the devoted head of the farmer all the bitterness that war is so capable of producing. Sacrifices must be made, and are being made. The merchant contributes the very money he so much needs to enable him to prosecute his business without failure and disaster, and manages that business with prudence and care, knowing that if the cause of his country fails, he goes by the board with it. Then let there be no withholding of men "to help their work;" but, as a wise Providence has by the skill of man perfected machines to gather in the crops of the land, let those who have the articles assist their neighbors generously and lighten the burdens of the men pressed heavily by work. We are passing through an ordeal that tests the best qualities of man—and noble is he above his fellow men who by prompt action and worthy deed shows the least selfishness, and exhibits more of those qualities that shone in revolutionary days. We love to read of the patriotism of other days; it is given to us to furnish still more illustrious pages to the nation's history.

Our Country Calls.
We know that the farmer as he pursues his avocation, is likely to think that he cannot get along without the usual number of hands in the field, but he should recollect that the General, fighting the battles of his country, is powerless without men to carry out his plans, and that reverse to the General will surely and speedily bring upon the devoted head of the farmer all the bitterness that war is so capable of producing. Sacrifices must be made, and are being made. The merchant contributes the very money he so much needs to enable him to prosecute his business without failure and disaster, and manages that business with prudence and care, knowing that if the cause of his country fails, he goes by the board with it. Then let there be no withholding of men "to help their work;" but, as a wise Providence has by the skill of man perfected machines to gather in the crops of the land, let those who have the articles assist their neighbors generously and lighten the burdens of the men pressed heavily by work. We are passing through an ordeal that tests the best qualities of man—and noble is he above his fellow men who by prompt action and worthy deed shows the least selfishness, and exhibits more of those qualities that shone in revolutionary days. We love to read of the patriotism of other days; it is given to us to furnish still more illustrious pages to the nation's history.

Our Country Calls.
We know that the farmer as he pursues his avocation, is likely to think that he cannot get along without the usual number of hands in the field, but he should recollect that the General, fighting the battles of his country, is powerless without men to carry out his plans, and that reverse to the General will surely and speedily bring upon the devoted head of the farmer all the bitterness that war is so capable of producing. Sacrifices must be made, and are being made. The merchant contributes the very money he so much needs to enable him to prosecute his business without failure and disaster, and manages that business with prudence and care, knowing that if the cause of his country fails, he goes by the board with it. Then let there be no withholding of men "to help their work;" but, as a wise Providence has by the skill of man perfected machines to gather in the crops of the land, let those who have the articles assist their neighbors generously and lighten the burdens of the men pressed heavily by work. We are passing through an ordeal that tests the best qualities of man—and noble is he above his fellow men who by prompt action and worthy deed shows the least selfishness, and exhibits more of those qualities that shone in revolutionary days. We love to read of the patriotism of other days; it is given to us to furnish still more illustrious pages to the nation's history.

Our Country Calls.
We know that the farmer as he pursues his avocation, is likely to think that he cannot get along without the usual number of hands in the field, but he should recollect that the General, fighting the battles of his country, is powerless without men to carry out his plans, and that reverse to the General will surely and speedily bring upon the devoted head of the farmer all the bitterness that war is so capable of producing. Sacrifices must be made, and are being made. The merchant contributes the very money he so much needs to enable him to prosecute his business without failure and disaster, and manages that business with prudence and care, knowing that if the cause of his country fails, he goes by the board with it. Then let there be no withholding of men "to help their work;" but, as a wise Providence has by the skill of man perfected machines to gather in the crops of the land, let those who have the articles assist their neighbors generously and lighten the burdens of the men pressed heavily by work. We are passing through an ordeal that tests the best qualities of man—and noble is he above his fellow men who by prompt action and worthy deed shows the least selfishness, and exhibits more of those qualities that shone in revolutionary days. We love to read of the patriotism of other days; it is given to us to furnish still more illustrious pages to the nation's history.

Our Country Calls.
We know that the farmer as he pursues his avocation, is likely to think that he cannot get along without the usual number of hands in the field, but he should recollect that the General, fighting the battles of his country, is powerless without men to carry out his plans, and that reverse to the General will surely and speedily bring upon the devoted head of the farmer all the bitterness that war is so capable of producing. Sacrifices must be made, and are being made. The merchant contributes the very money he so much needs to enable him to prosecute his business without failure and disaster, and manages that business with prudence and care, knowing that if the cause of his country fails, he goes by the board with it. Then let there be no withholding of men "to help their work;" but, as a wise Providence has by the skill of man perfected machines to gather in the crops of the land, let those who have the articles assist their neighbors generously and lighten the burdens of the men pressed heavily by work. We are passing through an ordeal that tests the best qualities of man—and noble is he above his fellow men who by prompt action and worthy deed shows the least selfishness, and exhibits more of those qualities that shone in revolutionary days. We love to read of the patriotism of other days; it is given to us to furnish still more illustrious pages to the nation's history.

Our Country Calls.
We know that the farmer as he pursues his avocation, is likely to think that he cannot get along without the usual number of hands in the field, but he should recollect that the General, fighting the battles of his country, is powerless without men to carry out his plans, and that reverse to the General will surely and speedily bring upon the devoted head of the farmer all the bitterness that war is so capable of producing. Sacrifices must be made, and are being made. The merchant contributes the very money he so much needs to enable him to prosecute his business without failure and disaster, and manages that business with prudence and care, knowing that if the cause of his country fails, he goes by the board with it. Then let there be no withholding of men "to help their work;" but, as a wise Providence has by the skill of man perfected machines to gather in the crops of the land, let those who have the articles assist their neighbors generously and lighten the burdens of the men pressed heavily by work. We are passing through an ordeal that tests the best qualities of man—and noble is he above his fellow men who by prompt action and worthy deed shows the least selfishness, and exhibits more of those qualities that shone in revolutionary days. We love to read of the patriotism of other days; it is given to us to furnish still more illustrious pages to the nation's history.

Our Country Calls.
We know that the farmer as he pursues his avocation, is likely to think that he cannot get along without the usual number of hands in the field, but he should recollect that the General, fighting the battles of his country, is powerless without men to carry out his plans, and that reverse to the General will surely and speedily bring upon the devoted head of the farmer all the bitterness that war is so capable of producing. Sacrifices must be made, and are being made. The merchant contributes the very money he so much needs to enable him to prosecute his business without failure and disaster, and manages that business with prudence and care, knowing that if the cause of his country fails, he goes by the board with it. Then let there be no withholding of men "to help their work;" but, as a wise Providence has by the skill of man perfected machines to gather in the crops of the land, let those who have the articles assist their neighbors generously and lighten the burdens of the men pressed heavily by work. We are passing through an ordeal that tests the best qualities of man—and noble is he above his fellow men who by prompt action and worthy deed shows the least selfishness, and exhibits more of those qualities that shone in revolutionary days. We love to read of the patriotism of other days; it is given to us to furnish still more illustrious pages to the nation's history.

Our Country Calls.
We know that the farmer as he pursues his avocation, is likely to think that he cannot get along without the usual number of hands in the field, but he should recollect that the General, fighting the battles of his country, is powerless without men to carry out his plans, and that reverse to the General will surely and speedily bring upon the devoted head of the farmer all the bitterness that war is so capable of producing. Sacrifices must be made, and are being made. The merchant contributes the very money he so much needs to enable him to prosecute his business without failure and disaster, and manages that business with prudence and care, knowing that if the cause of his country fails, he goes by the board with it. Then let there be no withholding of men "to help their work;" but, as a wise Providence has by the skill of man perfected machines to gather in the crops of the land, let those who have the articles assist their neighbors generously and lighten the burdens of the men pressed heavily by work. We are passing through an ordeal that tests the best qualities of man—and noble is he above his fellow men who by prompt action and worthy deed shows the least selfishness, and exhibits more of those qualities that shone in revolutionary days. We love to read of the patriotism of other days; it is given to us to furnish still more illustrious pages to the nation's history.

Our Country Calls.
We know that the farmer as he pursues his avocation, is likely to think that he cannot get along without the usual number of hands in the field, but he should recollect that the General, fighting the battles of his country, is powerless without men to carry out his plans, and that reverse to the General will surely and speedily bring upon the devoted head of the farmer all the bitterness that war is so capable of producing. Sacrifices must be made, and are being made. The merchant contributes the very money he so much needs to enable him to prosecute his business without failure and disaster, and manages that business with prudence and care, knowing that if the cause of his country fails, he goes by the board with it. Then let there be no withholding of men "to help their work;" but, as a wise Providence has by the skill of man perfected machines to gather in the crops of the land, let those who have the articles assist their neighbors generously and lighten the burdens of the men pressed heavily by work. We are passing through an ordeal that tests the best qualities of man—and noble is he above his fellow men who by prompt action and worthy deed shows the least selfishness, and exhibits more of those qualities that shone in revolutionary days. We love to read of the patriotism of other days; it is given to us to furnish still more illustrious pages to the nation's history.

Our Country Calls.
We know that the farmer as he pursues his avocation, is likely to think that he cannot get along without the usual number of hands in the field, but he should recollect that the General, fighting the battles of his country, is powerless without men to carry out his plans, and that reverse to the General will surely and speedily bring upon the devoted head of the farmer all the bitterness that war is so capable of producing. Sacrifices must be made, and are being made. The merchant contributes the very money he so much needs to enable him to prosecute his business without failure and disaster, and manages that business with prudence and care, knowing that if the cause of his country fails, he goes by the board with it. Then let there be no withholding of men "to help their work;" but, as a wise Providence has by the skill of man perfected machines to gather in the crops of the land, let those who have the articles assist their neighbors generously and lighten the burdens of the men pressed heavily by work. We are passing through an ordeal that tests the best qualities of man—and noble is he above his fellow men who by prompt action and worthy deed shows the least selfishness, and exhibits more of those qualities that shone in revolutionary days. We love to read of the patriotism of other days; it is given to us to furnish still more illustrious pages to the nation's history.

Our Country Calls.
We know that the farmer as he pursues his avocation, is likely to think that he cannot get along without the usual number of hands in the field, but he should recollect that the General, fighting the battles of his country, is powerless without men to carry out his plans, and that reverse to the General will surely and speedily bring upon the devoted head of the farmer all the bitterness that war is so capable of producing. Sacrifices must be made, and are being made. The merchant contributes the very money he so much needs to enable him to prosecute his business without failure and disaster, and manages that business with prudence and care, knowing that if the cause of his country fails, he goes by the board with it. Then let there be no withholding of men "to help their work;" but, as a wise Providence has by the skill of man perfected machines to gather in the crops of the land, let those who have the articles assist their neighbors generously and lighten the burdens of the men pressed heavily by work. We are passing through an ordeal that tests the best qualities of man—and noble is he above his fellow men who by prompt action and worthy deed shows the least selfishness, and exhibits more of those qualities that shone in revolutionary days. We love to read of the patriotism of other days; it is given to us to furnish still more illustrious pages to the nation's history.

Our Country Calls.
We know that the farmer as he pursues his avocation, is likely to think that he cannot get along without the usual number of hands in the field, but he should recollect that the General, fighting the battles of his country, is powerless without men to carry out his plans, and that reverse to the General will surely and speedily bring upon the devoted head of the farmer all the bitterness that war is so capable of producing. Sacrifices must be made, and are being made. The merchant contributes the very money he so much needs to enable him to prosecute his business without failure and disaster, and manages that business with prudence and care, knowing that if the cause of his country fails, he goes by the board with it. Then let there be no withholding of men "to help their work;" but, as a wise Providence has by the skill of man perfected machines to gather in the crops of the land, let those who have the articles assist their neighbors generously and lighten the burdens of the men pressed heavily by work. We are passing through an ordeal that tests the best qualities of man—and noble is he above his fellow men who by prompt action and worthy deed shows the least selfishness, and exhibits more of those qualities that shone in revolutionary days. We love to read of the patriotism of other days; it is given to us to furnish still more illustrious pages to the nation's history.

Our Country Calls.
We know that the farmer as he pursues his avocation, is likely to think that he cannot get along without the usual number of hands in the field, but he should recollect that the General, fighting the battles of his country, is powerless without men to carry out his plans, and that reverse to the General will surely and speedily bring upon the devoted head of the farmer all the bitterness that war is so capable of producing. Sacrifices must be made, and are being made. The merchant contributes the very money he so much needs to enable him to prosecute his business without failure and disaster, and manages that business with prudence and care, knowing that if the cause of his country fails, he goes by the board with it. Then let there be no withholding of men "to help their work;" but, as a wise Providence has by the skill of man perfected machines to gather in the crops of the land, let those who have the articles assist their neighbors generously and lighten the burdens of the men pressed heavily by work. We are passing through an ordeal that tests the best qualities of man—and noble is he above his fellow men who by prompt action and worthy deed shows the least selfishness, and exhibits more of those qualities that shone in revolutionary days. We love to read of the patriotism of other days; it is given to us to furnish still more illustrious pages to the nation's history.

Sons of New England in Philadelphia.
The Society of the Sons of New England, in the City of Philadelphia, have raised funds and placed in the hands of a Relief Committee who will visit the Army Hospitals within that medical district and render disabled New England soldiers such aid as they may require. They will keep a correct list of all New England soldiers admitted to the different hospitals there, and will gladly answer the inquiries of friends. Communications may be addressed to H. R. Warriner, President, No. 16 North Seventh St., Philadelphia.

Danbury.
The largest and most enthusiastic meeting ever held in Danbury was held on Friday evening the 18th. Lieut. Gov. Averill presiding. Gov. Buckingham was the principal speaker. Many men enlisted on the spot. Resolutions were passed calling on the Selectmen to make arrangements for supporting the families of volunteers.

Charles H. Meigs, a Wall Street broker at No. 50 Exchange Place, New York, was robbed on Friday afternoon, in Wall street, of the sum of $1,600 in United States Treasury Notes. He was carrying two bags of gold, one upon each shoulder, $500 in each bag, and was jostled by three men one of whom abstracted the notes from his pocket. One of the men who gave his name as Wm. Curtis was arrested for the robbery.

M. Mercier, the French Minister, is expected to join his family at the Pequot House, New London, to day.

Col. W. Bliss, of the Bliss Cavalry, wrote a short time since to Gov. Buckingham for authority to recruit for his regiment in this State. He received the following reply:

New Haven, Conn., July 3, 1862.
Colonel Wm. S. Bliss:
Sir—Your favor of 1st instant received. In reply to you I would say that I have made other arrangements for Connecticut troops.

He received similar answers from the Governors of several other States.

Care for the Soldiers.
We would suggest to the ladies of our State the propriety of laying by this summer a large supply than usual of jellies and dried fruits.—These luxuries are almost indispensable to the sick and wounded, and it is not probable that the number of invalid soldiers in our hospitals will be diminished during the coming year.—Indeed, as new battles are fought, the number of these must be materially increased. It is the proper time now to anticipate any possible wants of the future. A little forethought in providing delicacies which will quicken the appetite, and facilitate the recovery of the broken down volunteer, will carry joy to homes all over the land. We need not dwell upon this topic. The women of our State have shown their willingness to contribute to the comfort of the soldiers in a thousand ways. We make the suggestion for them to consider and act upon. In no better way can they prove their devotion to the cause.

Gen. Butler has received authority from Washington to raise five regiments of troops in Louisiana to fight for the Union.

Near Richmond.
Gen. Dix went on Thursday up the James river from Turkey Island Creek to meet Gen. Hill, to make permanent arrangements for an exchange of prisoners. The death of Gen. Twiggs at Augusta, Ga., July 15th, is announced in the Richmond papers. A free colored man escaped to Washington from Richmond, says the rebel loss in killed and wounded and missing in the seven days battles, was 32,000, and that the rebel army numbered 250,000. Gen. Ewell was severely wounded in the neck. Joe Johnston had experienced a relapse and mortification of his wound was feared.

The Drummer Boy of Tennessee.
The following is a press story of real life, exploitatively put into rhyme by the fair correspondent of the Home Journal.

When called the fife and drum of morn
The soldier from his rest,
And those who higher honors born
To him the drum was sent,
There came, a captain brave to seek,
To see his drum in morn,
By loss made such a sorry weak,
A mother and a lad—
And they had come from Tennessee,
Waiting the best of revellie,
But penniless and widowed,
His story soon he told,
And read upon the captain's face
The drum he had so long so sore,
And how she brought her only son,
To him the drum was sent,
This young his daily bread to earn,
His country's foes to face;
For he had learned the Tennessee,
To beat the call of revellie.
The boy upturned his eager gaze,
And with a beating heart,
And read upon the captain's face
Both kindness and doubt;
For he had marked the soldier's eyes,
His little fragile form,
"Don't be afraid," he boldly cried,
"For, captain, I can beat the drum,
And I have come from Tennessee,
To sound for you the revellie."

A Disgraceful Affray.
A sad exhibition of unchristian temper took place in the ante-room of one of the churches of this city yesterday morning, when just before service time two of the prominent members of that church had a knock-down fight, very much in the style of the unregenerate portion of this world. The affray lasted for some minutes, until the combatants, bruised and bleeding, were finally separated by the lookers-on. The affair originated, it is said, in a quarrel of long standing. It is most unfortunate for the church, the parties, and the holy cause they profess to serve.

The Army of Virginia.
GEN. POPE'S ORDERS.
The effect of Major General Pope's official orders upon his troops is said to be wonderful. It has infused new vigor, given them additional strength and courage, and increased anxiety for active operations. On the 17th an order was issued announcing that no more passes except for the day would be granted. No officer or soldier will be permitted to leave his command on any pretense whatever, without authority from headquarters. All officers found absent from their commands five days after the date of the order, will be arrested and tried for disobedience. All soldiers absent after that time will be confined, and returned under guard to their regiments for trial by court martial.

The Lyon Regiment.
There is not perhaps at the present time as much enthusiasm in enlisting as there was a year since, just after the events of the 19th of April. Companies are not raised in a day, nor do recruits muster at a moment's notice. But this does not indicate in the least that the desired regiments cannot or will not be raised. Recruits are coming forward with commendable zeal in most of the country towns, and probably there are men enough enlisted to-day to fill up the 14th and 15th Regiments.

Our Country Calls.
We know that the farmer as he pursues his avocation, is likely to think that he cannot get along without the usual number of hands in the field, but he should recollect that the General, fighting the battles of his country, is powerless without men to carry out his plans, and that reverse to the General will surely and speedily bring upon the devoted head of the farmer all the bitterness that war is so capable of producing. Sacrifices must be made, and are being made. The merchant contributes the very money he so much needs to enable him to prosecute his business without failure and disaster, and manages that business with prudence and care, knowing that if the cause of his country fails, he goes by the board with it. Then let there be no withholding of men "to help their work;" but, as a wise Providence has by the skill of man perfected machines to gather in the crops of the land, let those who have the articles assist their neighbors generously and lighten the burdens of the men pressed heavily by work. We are passing through an ordeal that tests the best qualities of man—and noble is he above his fellow men who by prompt action and worthy deed shows the least selfishness, and exhibits more of those qualities that shone in revolutionary days. We love to read of the patriotism of other days; it is given to us to furnish still more illustrious pages to the nation's history.

Our Country Calls.
We know that the farmer as he pursues his avocation, is likely to think that he cannot get along without the usual number of hands in the field, but he should recollect that the General, fighting the battles of his country, is powerless without men to carry out his plans, and that reverse to the General will surely and speedily bring upon the devoted head of the farmer all the bitterness that war is so capable of producing. Sacrifices must be made, and are being made. The merchant contributes the very money he so much needs to enable him to prosecute his business without failure and disaster, and manages that business with prudence and care, knowing that if the cause of his country fails, he goes by the board with it. Then let there be no withholding of men "to help their work;" but, as a wise Providence has by the skill of man perfected machines to gather in the crops of the land, let those who have the articles assist their neighbors generously and lighten the burdens of the men pressed heavily by work. We are passing through an ordeal that tests the best qualities of man—and noble is he above his fellow men who by prompt action and worthy deed shows the least selfishness, and exhibits more of those qualities that shone in revolutionary days. We love to read of the patriotism of other days; it is given to us to furnish still more illustrious pages to the nation's history.

Our Country Calls.
We know that the farmer as he pursues his avocation, is likely to think that he cannot get along without the usual number of hands in the field, but he should recollect that the General, fighting the battles of his country, is powerless without men to carry out his plans, and that reverse to the General will surely and speedily bring upon the devoted head of the farmer all the bitterness that war is so capable of producing. Sacrifices must be made, and are being made. The merchant contributes the very money he so much needs to enable him to prosecute his business without failure and disaster, and manages that business with prudence and care, knowing that if the cause of his country fails, he goes by the board with it. Then let there be no withholding of men "to help their work;" but, as a wise Providence has by the skill of man perfected machines to gather in the crops of the land, let those who have the articles assist their neighbors generously and lighten the burdens of the men pressed heavily by work. We are passing through an ordeal that tests the best qualities of man—and noble is he above his fellow men who by prompt action and worthy deed shows the least selfishness, and exhibits more of those qualities that shone in revolutionary days. We love to read of the patriotism of other days; it is given to us to furnish still more illustrious pages to the nation's history.

Our Country Calls.
We know that the farmer as he pursues his avocation, is likely to think that he cannot get along without the usual number of hands in the field, but he should recollect that the General, fighting the battles of his country, is powerless without men to carry out his plans, and that reverse to the General will surely and speedily bring upon the devoted head of the farmer all the bitterness that war is so capable of producing. Sacrifices must be made, and are being made. The merchant contributes the very money he so much needs to enable him to prosecute his business without failure and disaster, and manages that business with prudence and care, knowing that if the cause of his country fails, he goes by the board with it. Then let there be no withholding of men "to help their work;" but, as a wise Providence has by the skill of man perfected machines to gather in the crops of the land, let those who have the articles assist their neighbors generously and lighten the burdens of the men pressed heavily by work. We are passing through an ordeal that tests the best qualities of man—and noble is he above his fellow men who by prompt action and worthy deed shows the least selfishness, and exhibits more of those qualities that shone in revolutionary days. We love to read of the patriotism of other days; it is given to us to furnish still more illustrious pages to the nation's history.

Our Country Calls.
We know that the farmer as he pursues his avocation, is likely to think that he cannot get along without the usual number of hands in the field, but he should recollect that the General, fighting the battles of his country, is powerless without men to carry out his plans, and that reverse to the General will surely and speedily bring upon the devoted head of the farmer all the bitterness that war is so capable of producing. Sacrifices must be made, and are being made. The merchant contributes the very money he so much needs to enable him to prosecute his business without failure and disaster, and manages that business with prudence and care, knowing that if the cause of his country fails, he goes by the board with it. Then let there be no withholding of men "to help their work;" but, as a wise Providence has by the skill of man perfected machines to gather in the crops of the land, let those who have the articles assist their neighbors generously and lighten the burdens of the men pressed heavily by work. We are passing through an ordeal that tests the best qualities of man—and noble is he above his fellow men who by prompt action and worthy deed shows the least selfishness, and exhibits more of those qualities that shone in revolutionary days. We love to read of the patriotism of other days; it is given to us to furnish still more illustrious pages to the nation's history.

Our Country Calls.
We know that the farmer as he pursues his avocation, is likely to think that he cannot get along without the usual number of hands in the field, but he should recollect that the General, fighting the battles of his country, is powerless without men to carry out his plans, and that reverse to the General will surely and speedily bring upon the devoted head of the farmer all the bitterness that war is so capable of producing. Sacrifices must be made, and are being made. The merchant contributes the very money he so much needs to enable him to prosecute his business without failure and disaster, and manages that business with prudence and care, knowing that if the cause of his country fails, he goes by the board with it. Then let there be no withholding of men "to help their work;" but, as a wise Providence has by the skill of man perfected machines to gather in the crops of the land, let those who have the articles assist their neighbors generously and lighten the burdens of the men pressed heavily by work. We are passing through an ordeal that tests the best qualities of man—and noble is he above his fellow men who by prompt action and worthy deed shows the least selfishness, and exhibits more of those qualities that shone in revolutionary days. We love to read of the patriotism of other days; it is given to us to furnish still more illustrious pages to the nation's history.

Our Country Calls.
We know that the farmer as he pursues his avocation, is likely to think that he cannot get along without the usual number of hands in the field, but he should recollect that the General, fighting the battles of his country,