The Order Relative to Evasion of Military Duty. The following circular has been issued to

30th, states to the agents of the Golden Gate WAR DEPARTMENT, that, owing to the shelving nature of the beach, WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 11, 1862. and the heavy surf where the wreck is lying, Military Commandants, Provost Marshals, U. there is little probability of saving the lost treas-Marshals and Police Officers: You will reure. He with part of the crew remained as eive herewith an order of the War Department agents of the underwriters, protecting the wreck to prevent the evasion of military duty, and with hopes of saving additional lives. Mr Scott, the third officer in charge of the boat 8th of August, 1862. with over twenty other persons, had not reached

This order to be efficient is necessarily very omprehensive in its terms, and its proper exeention requires the exercise of sound judgment and discretion by the officers to whom its enforcements is intrusted, and to guard you in its execution, the following instructions are to be First, the order comprises two classes of persons, viz: Those who are about leaving the United States to evade military duty, and those who for the same purpose leave their own State. Leaving the United States until the military draft is perfected is absolutely prohibited, but it was not the intention of the order to interfere with the transit from State to State of any persons but those who design to evade nilitary duty.

Whenever you have reason to believe that the ourpose is to evade military duty, the order will uthorize the detention of any person leaving the state, county, or military district.

Second, Any person detained may be re eased on giving bonds to the United States, with sufficient security, in the sum of $1,000 conditional for the performance of military duty f he should be drafted, or the providing of a oroper substitute.

Third, Immediate report is to be made to this office of all persons detained, with cause of their detention.

You will exercise the powers of arrest and de ention with caution and forbearance, so as to avoid giving annoyance or trouble to any persons excepting those who are seeking to evade the performance of their duty to their country. The Governors of the respective States are authorized to give passes and permits to their own citizens desiring to leave the State without intent to evade military duty. By order of the Sercetary of War. L. C. TURNER, Judge Advocate.

The Late Battle Near Culpepper.

Washington, Aug. 11, 1862. Accounts from Culpepper represent the ene my's estimated force engaged at 20,000, and our own, exclusive of cavalry and artillery, as not exceeding 7,000. The number of United States soldiers wounded is large, but the wounds are generally slight. The number killed is small.

On Saturday night the teamsters lit their fires, causing the enemy to shell our new position for two hours, with considerable effect. Yesterday morning the Rebels were not in ight on our front, but there were indications

Gen. Banks, to hold them in check. At day- PER CENT. per annum from July 1st 1862 light this morning it was discovered that the enemy had advanced as far as Cedar Run Mountain, holding its wooded sides and cleared slopes. Only a small portion of their strength, however, was visible.

They also held a range of elevations and ravines westward of the mountain. An elevated spot a mile and a half from the mountain and a mile long east and west, was selected by Gen. Banks as the best place to receive their attack. The forenoon was spent by the enemy in manœuvres, they only occasionally showing themselves. At three o'clock in the afternoon, a battery on our front, at a mile and a half range, opened on us and their infantry drove in our pickets in the woods on our right wing. Afterwards battery after battery was unmasked on mountain slopes and on every hill, making a crescent of batteries of nearly three miles commanding our own position. For two hours our batteries were exposed to cross-fires at every point. The rebels evidently outnumbered us in guns and weight of metal. We replied shot for shot until 4 o'clock, when the rebels opened an enfilade battery on our right.

Gen. Banks here gave orders to cease firing and charge this battery. The duty was assigned to Crawford's brigade of Williams' Division, and the 46th Penn. regiment led the charge. Behind the battery was a thicket of shrub oak and before the 46th Penn, regiment could reach the rebel guns they were mowed down by a terrific fire from the thicket. The BL'K. FIG'D. DOUBLED FACED SILKS rest of the brigade was quickly brought up and subsequently the rest of Generals Williams' and Augur's commands, but the brigades of the ebels were found at every point. This battle-ground was in a thicket-wood, with a ravine on our right. Here nearly all the enemy's infantry had been concealed during the shelling, after securing themselves from observation by expelling our pickets.

This was probably one of the hardest fights in Virginia, lasting until dark, when our forces getired from the field, taking a new position beyond the reach of the enemy's guns which were in an advantageous position on the heights. Our infantry were badly cut up. We lost two guns-the enemy's loss was certainly greater than ours as their dense columns were frequently riddled by our artillerists.

We took many prisoners. Since our corres pondent left the field, large reinforcements have eached there, and for an hour shots have bee

Intervention. of the English press treat of Gen. McClellan, is much more favorable to us than we had reason to expect. The London Times, as usual can discover no prospect of ultimate success on the part of our government, and continues to distrust the patriotism and earnestness of the North, and to belittle our power. But the London Star is much more sen sible. It says that as neither prophesy nor sarcasm can affect events, they are satisfied to leave the future of the war to decide whether the people of the North have not displayed a courage and resolution worthy of men who profess to be fighting for just laws and free institutions. They "deprecate the insults which the Times pours upon the North the moment that the South obtains an advantage. Such effusions of malice can do no harm were reft from it. But they may do immeasurable their kinsmen are not their friends." The Lon- for the health of the soldiers. don Daily News also says : "As far as we can perceive, there is no symptom of faltering or flagand wisest means of putting an end to the senseless and sanguinary schism." These indications of friendly feeling on the part of the English press are very pleasant, even if they are of little prac-

n nations, and make them see clearly the justice of our cause, as victories won in the the various contrabands who sell articles of that field, and the exhibition of overwhelming kind I cannot say, but I suspect that is the power. When Europe shall learn the promptness with which our country is responding to the call for volunteers, and the general joy new indication of resolution on the part of our government, they will appreciate as never before the stability of Republican Institutions, and the strength of a government that relies, for its Brigadier-General Brennan, who is in command support, on the patriotism of twenty millions of loyal hearts. Let the London Times babble of for England when it undertakes the task of dismembering this free republic. But so long as the North exhibits the spirit of to-day, no European nation will have the hardihood to trouble us. We are safe not because the aristocracy of Europe love us or intend to favor our cause any further than their own interest requires, but because the people of these United States are resolved that come what may, this Union shall be preserved. Rebel Retaliation.

The Rebel government at Richmond come out in a detailed order, signed by the Adjutant-General, severely denouncing the recent orders of Gen. Pope that his army shall subsist on the Rebels, &c., &c. Jeff. Davis also writes a letter to Gen. Lee, commanding the Confederate forces, in which he instructs that officer, after reviewing the order of Pope, " not to consider any officers hereafter captured from Gen. Pope's army as prisoners of war." They are A. Fuller, and J. A. Buttersby. J. B. Shields of the same regiment, died and was buried at to be closely confined so long as Pope's orders stand unchanged, and in case of any unarmed person claiming to belong to the Southern Confederacy being killed under pretense that he is a spy, the Commanding General (Lee) is further instructed to cause immediately to be hung out of the commissioned officers, prisoners as aforesaid, a number equal to the number killed (Jeff. calls it "murdered ") by the Federals.

Wendell Phillips.

Since the breaking out of the unholy Southern Rebellion we have welcomed the efforts of every man, whatever may have been his political views before the commencement of the war, who has come forward to the support of the Government, and by words and deeds has shown himself to be a true and loyal citizen. On the other hand we have never failed to strike a blow at treason wherever we found it; whether in the South or in the North, whether armed and equipped, or hid under the shadow of false partisanship or hollow patriotism. Our words to-day are brief. In a speech made by Wendell Phillips, a Abingdon, Mass., Aug. 1st, he came out boldly for the dissolution of the Union. He has never vet taken an oath of allegiance to this government. He will not agree to support it. Why should he not be made to do so? As he is now he stands precisely and holds the same relations to the Constitution and the Union as Jefferson Davis does. Let him take the oath of allegiance. Treason is the same North as South, and we agree with the Hartford Courant that V. died in camp opposite Vicksburg, on the "a man that calls for the destruction of this 21st ult.

The new vesel is constructed from the British steamer Fingal, which ran into Savannah early in the spring. The armament of this new accession to the rebel navy is as follows: Two one hundred-pound rifled guns; six ten-inch columbiads: and two twenty-four pounders for grape and canister-in all, fourteen heavy pieces. In shape she is similar to the Merrimac-differing from the latter, however, in her draft of water, which is much less than that of her ill-fated predecesor. It is supposed the intention of her commander is to run by the guns of the fort and make his way out to engage our blockading vessels. Letter from the Sixth Connecticut. CAMP OF THE SIXTH REGIMENT, C. V., BEAUFORT, S. C., Aug. 1, 1862.

EDITORS OF THE PALLADIUM :- The 6th regiment is now encamped in a place fit to be called the soldier's paradise, in the immediate vicinity of the beautiful town of Beaufort, S. C., on a level plot of ground just out of the village, under the shade of a number of fine old "live oaks," (which same shade, in this very warm climate, is highly appreciated by all.) The village of Beaufort is considered by a great many to be a beautiful place. There are ging in the loyal States of the Union, and no other a great many residences in it that can, unanimated discussion than that regarding the best doubtedly, lay just claim to such a title; but when, in my mind's eye, I see some of our Con-necticut villages, Stratford and Milford and other places of the same style, I cannot help but think how people's tastes differ.

The health of the 6th is very good. The sick lists are growing smaller each day. Nearly all cases that our Doctors have now are men that were on James' Island, and the march there contracted by exposure the diseases from which they are now suffering.

The 2d Company of New Haven Grays turned out this morning, under command of Capt. Davis, with a band of music, to escort to Camp Lyon a company of volunteers from Cheshire. The runaway which we mentioned yesterday a naving occurred on Thursday, was very serious. The Register's account of the affair relates that the horses were notoriously vicious, and while they vere passing along Grand street, they started int run, one of the reins broke, and the animals were urned into an embankment on the Fair Haven side of Barnesville bridge. The occupants of the car iage attempted to save themselves by jumping, and vere thrown to the ground. Mr. Samuel Pond, clerk in the store of T. H. Fulton, Columbus stree received severe bruises on the side and limbs; Mis Emma Pond had her shoulder broken, and was s erely bruised; Mrs. Daniel White was frightfull njured about the head, and otherwise severel ornised; Miss Mary Patrick, of Milford, had a hi adly injured, and received severe contusions abo he head. The whole party were taken up and con veyed to the residence of Mr. Fulton, where the lie in great pain. The horses continued on to Fai Haven, where they smashed a buggy with which they came in contact, and were finally brought up near King's Hotel. Lightning and Lightning Rods. The frequent thunder storms within the last vecks, and the destruction of several barns stocked with hay and grain, afford new warning to the owners of real estate to protect their lives and property by suitable conducting rods. The fact that the telegraph wires will lead electricity where it is sent, should satisfy the most incredulous of the ntility of lightning rods. Some men feel that be cause they have not suffered from lightning, though they have experienced many storms, they therefore will be forever exempted from injury from that cause. This is not a wise philosophy, for there must be a first time for everything. The next thing, after resolving upon a rod, is to get the best in use. That we believe to be the copper one manufactured and put up by Messrs. Charles W. Jones named are so constructed, being hollow, as to preent a large amount of surface in a comparatively small rod. So that while they are not too costly they are exceedingly effective. They have, after thorough examination by committees, been placed upon the Wooster Public School, the City Hall, and numerous other buildings. We commend the persons named as faithful and reliable workmen. Delay not to protect yourselves, for there is reason to anticipate a great many thunder storms during the present season.

He was a poor cripple-with fingers twisted out of all useful shape, and lower limbs paral-yzed so that he had to drag them after him wearily when he moved, a poor, unhappy, murmuring, and at times ill-natured cripple, eating the bread which a mother's hard labor procured for him. For hours, every fair day during pring, summer and autumn, he might be seen n front of the house where he lived, leaning ipon the gate, or sitting on an old bench, look-ng with a sober face at the romping village hildren, or dreamily regarding the passenger who moved with such strong limbs up and lown the street. How often bitter envy stung he poor oripple's heart! How often, as the thoughtless village children taunted him cruelly with his misfortune, would he fling harsh male lictions after them. Many pitied the poor cripple; many looked upon him with feelings o disgust and repulsion; but few, if any, sought to do him good.

Not far from where the cripple lived was nan who had been bed-ridden for years, and was likely to remain so to the end of his days He was supported by the patient industry of

But if there be only a single talent, it must b improved."

"I have no talent," said the invalid. "Are you sure of that?"

"What can I do? Look at me! No healt no strength-no power to rise from this bed A poor helpless creature, burdening my wife Better for me, and for all, if I were in my

"If that were so, you would be in you rave. But God knows best. There is some hing for you to do, or you would be no longer permitted to live," said the neighbor. The sick man shook his head.

"As I came along just now," continued th neighbor, "I stopped to say a word to poor fom Hicks, the cripple, as he stood swinging on the gate before his mother's house, looking o unhappily that I pitied him in my heart What do you do with yourself all through these long days, Tom," I asked. "Nothing,

"Don't you read sometimes?" I queried "Can't read." was his sullen answer. "Wer recheal?" I went on. "No; how can I get to school?" mother teach you?" "Because she can't read herself," replied Tom. "It is'nt too late to be said I encouragingly; "suppose were to find some one willing to teach you, what would you say?" The poor lad's face brightened as if sunshine had fallen upon it and e answered, "I would say that nothing could please me better." I promised to find him a teacher, and as I promised, the thought of you friend Croft, came into my mind. Now, here s something that you can do: a good work in which you can employ your one talent."

The sick man did not respond warmly to thi proposition. He had been for so long a time nere recipient of good offices-had so long felt himself the object toward which pity and service must tend-that he had nearly lost the relish for good deeds. Idle dependence had made him selfish.

"Give this poor cripple a lesson every day," went on the neighbor, pressing home the sub ject, "and talk and read to him. Take him in charge as one of God's children, who needs t be instructed and led up to a higher life than the one he is living. Is not this a good and great work? It is, my friend, one that God has brought to your hand, and in the doing of which there will be great reward. What car you do? Much! Think of that poor boy's veary life, and of the sadder years that lie still before him. What will become of him when his mother dies? The almshouse alone wi open its doors for the helpless one. But can tell what resources may open before him if stimulated by thought? Take him, then, and unlock the doors of a mind that now sits in darkness that sunlight may come in. To yo it will give a few hours of pleasant work each To him it will be a life-long benefit. Will you do it?"

"Yes. The sick man could not say "No," though in uttering that half extorted assent he manifected no warm interest in the case of poor Tom

Hicks. On the next day the cripple came to the sick man and received his first lesson; and every day at an appointed hour, he was seen at Mr Croft's room, eager for the instruction he received. Quickly he mastered the alphabet, and as quickly learned to construct very small Second class steamers.... words preparatory to combining them into a reading lesson. After the first three or four days the sick man who had undertaken this work with reluctance, began to find his heart work with reluctance, began to him his head group down into it. Tom was grateful, and the neighbor who had suggested this useful emiral elad gunbo-ts. the neighbor who had suggested this useful employment of the invalid's time looked in now and then to see how matters were progressing and to speak words of encouragement.

Poor Tom was seen less frequently than be fore hanging on the gate or sitting idly on the bench before his mother's dwelling, and when you did find him there as of old, you saw a dif- 1861 (85.) ferent expression on his face. absence, by Rev. Mr. Street of Lowell, Mass. He find him there, supplied him with books, so that he had an abundance of mental food, and now began to repay his benefactor, the bed-ridden man, by reading to him for hours every day.

There was something about him that strongly attracted the boys of the neighborhood, and he sually had three or four of them arou and often a dozen, in the afternoon, when the schools were out. There was no nousense; low sensual talk, to which boys are sometimes addicted, found no encouragement in his presence. His influence over these boys was, therefore, of the best kind. The parents of some of these children when they found their sons going so of-ten to the house of Tom Hicks, felt doubts as to the safety of such intercourse. The report of these boys took their parents by surprise; but, on investigation, it proved to be true, and l'om's character soon rose in the public esti-

The cripple's eagerness to learn, and rapid pro gress under limited advantages, becoming generally known, a gentleman, whose son had been one of Tom's visitors, and who had grown to be a better boy under his influence, offered to send him in his wagon every day to the schoolnouse, which stood half a mile distant, and have him brought back in the afternoon. It was the happiest day in Tem's life when he was helped down from the wagon and went hobbling into the school room.

Before leaving home that morning, he had made his way up to the sick room of Mr. Croft. 'I owe it all to you," he said, as he brought the white, thin hand of his benefactor to his lips. It was damp with more than a kiss when he laid it back gently on the bed. "And your

"Tom Hicks has received the appointment of teacher to our public school." "Are you in earnest" There was a minging of surprise and doubt in the low tones that crept out upon the air.

"Yes, it is true what I say. You know that after Mr. Wilson died, the directors got Tom, who was a favorite with all the scholars, to keep the school together for a few weeks until a successor could be appointed. He managed so well, kept such good order, and showed himself so capable as an instructor, that, at the election to-day, he received a large majority of votes over a number of highly recommended teachover a number of highly recommended teachers, and this, without his having made applicarived up from Panama. At this moment the cripple's well-known shuffling tread and the rattle of crutches was heard upon the stairs. He came up with more 78 of the Golden Gate's passengers—all that than his usual hurry. Croft turned with an efarce known to be saved, and a portion of the than his usual hurry. Croft turned with an effort, so as to get a sight at him as he entered the room.

"I have heard the good news," he said, he reached a hand feebly toward Tom, "and it has made my heart glad." "I owe it all to you," replied the cripple, in a voice that trembled with feeling. "God will eward you." And he caught the shadowy arm, touched it with his lips and wet it with grateful tears, as heart grew still and the freed spirit went up its reward. "My benefactor!" sobbed the cripple as stood by the wasted form shrouded in gravecloths, and looked upon it for the last time ere the coffin-lid closed over it, "What would have been except for you?"

The dispatch to Mr. McLane states that the ship papers are lost. Mr. H. M. Nickerman. 2d mate, was among those saved.

A dispatch dated San Francisco, August 6th. says:—"The steamship Golden Gate, Hudson, commander, sailed hence for Panama on the 21st ult., having 95 cabin passengers, 147 in the second cabin and steerage, and 95 crew. She had also $1,400,000 in treasure, of which Kirby, & Co. $10,000. On the 27th ult., at 4:45 p. m., when fifteen miles north of Manzilla, while the passengers were dining, an alarm of fire was heard. The steamer was promptly heard of heard. The steamer was promptly headed for the shore, three and a half miles distant, the flames meanwhile making fearful headway. At a quarter after five the upper deck fell. Soon after he steamer struck the beach, and the passengers and crew, who had not got into the boats, umped overboard and endeavored to swim ashore. About 100, including five children swam or were washed ashore alive. The ship burned to the water's edge, and soon disappeared The passengers who reached the shore made their way to New Manzanilla, where they arcaped to Manzanilla in boats. One boat with 30 ersons on board has not been heard from, but probably made the shore south of Manzanilla.-The St. Louis arrived here to-night, bringing crew. Captain Hudson, with a portion of the crew, remained at Manzanilla to look after the missing passengers."

To Horse Owners. DR. SWEET'S INFALLIBLE LINIMENT FOR HORSES DR. SWEET'S INFALLIBLE LINIMENT FOR HORSES is unrivaled by any, in all cases of Lameness, arising from Sprains, Bruises or Wrenching, its effect is magical and certain. Harness or £addle Galls, Scratches, Manage, &c., it will also cure speedily. Spavin and Ringbone may be easily prevented and cured in their incipient stages, but confirmed cases are beyond the possibility of a radical cure. No case of the kind, however, is so desperate or hopeless but it may be alleviated by this Liniment, and its faithful application will always remove the Lameness, and enable the horse to travel with comparative ease.

Every horse owner should have this remedy at hand, for its timely use at the first appearance of Lamness will effectually prevent those formidable diseases mentioned, to which all horses are liable, and which render so many otherwise valuable horses nearly worthless.

The Only Solution of Our National Troubles.

The Government of the United States of America is now engaged in a fearful conteststruggle more gigantic in its proportions, perhaps, than the world has ever before witnessed -a struggle for its own existence. The contest is so terrible that our enemies have taxed their resources to the furthest extent, and so great is the demand made by the government upon the people of the loyal states that many are looking with anxious eyes for some speedy and peaceful solution of the question. Three methods by which the war can be brought to an end are proposed by different classes of people and are briefly these three: 1st. To withdraw our forces from Southern soil and cease the strife. 2d. To sue for peace, or to compromise; and 3d. To push the war to the bitter end.

The first method is urged by but few persons, comparatively, and they are well known as warm friends of secession and bitter foes of the doctrine that the government has a right to demand submission to its authority. There is not the semblance of plausibility presented in this proposition. It is dastard cowardice-an invitation to Jeff. Davis and his minions to call us widing slaves.

2d. Compromise. This proposition is very akin to the first. Compromise we can not have even by asking far shall thou go, but no farther." for it. To ask a truce to settle our difficultie would be to embolden our foe by tacitly saying -" Fight us a little longer and we will accede to any terms you may dictate." No, there is no retreat. To go back, or to intimate a desire to go back, is only to make final defeat a present certainty. To whisper the possibility of any peace that is not purchased at the price of blacken our nation's character with a deeper infamy the vilest race that ever saw the light and cringed in abject servitude at the feet of unrelenting tyranny. There is no alternative, therefore, than

8d. To push the contest to the bitter end. Other propositions scarcely merit notice-still less, argument.

We are engaged in a contest that has no other possible solution. Come defeat or come victory, to a brave, law-loving, self-governing people, there is no alternative but this. In the words of one whose eloquence in the first revolution thrilled the people like the blast of a war trumpet-" We have no election! We are too late if we were base enough to desire one." We are the watched of the world. Beholding the terriffic contest of a great people for the preservation of national existence and constitutional government, the eyes of all men are upon

" Nation wildly looks at Nation,

We have every incentive to urge us on. Fellow countrymen! have you considered what it would be to fail in a contest like this? Our constitution overthrown and a compact framed by traitors put in its place-the starry flag that has led our legions on many a bloody and well fought field, and that has protected the white sails of our commerce on every sea; this flag trailed in the dust and the banner of a Republic whose corner-stone is Slavery, made its substitute-a last sad chapter of black disgrace written in the book of our Republic's history-these are only a few of the considerations of a moral character that would mark the triumph of traitor hosts. Defeat is the blotting out of all that is glorious in our past, and the blasting of every hope of the future.

Add to this the ruin of all national prosperity by the iron rule that victorious traitors would gladly impose to build up their own chosen sec tion and institutions at the expense of the conquered, and the darkness of the political night that would envelop the land in such a case, surpasses all comprehension and gathers new horror as we contemplate it.

Such then, though but briefly sketched, are some of the facts from which loyal men draw their inspiration in this time of national trial. Young men, old men, sisters, wives and mothers! the golden hour is now. The country calls for help. One terrible, overwhelming blow, and all is saved. Delay, and all is lost. Brave hearts and strong arms are needed now. Let patriotic men give themselves and their money, let wives and sisters and mothers give their God speeds and hearty encouragements, and the ship of state with its rich freight of past glory and future hope shall be preserved from the threatened destruction.

The administration we believe has awaked to the danger and will use every means to save thunder at the seaports of the South, our new the field, the season for military operations will nies of State militia for nine months.

The State of Harry emained in the Union by the votes of its own people, and has furnished many thousands of the very best soldiers. But among the people at home there has still been a degree of sympathy for the rebels, not, indeed, manifesting itself in any open acts of opposition to the government, but in efforts to render the policy of the nation towards the enemy more lenient. The time is not far distant when Kentucky, like the loyal States of the North will be ready to say to the Government, "Suppress this rebellion-drive back the enemy from our doors protect us from the robbers and murderers of the Southern Confederacy-and for the accomplishment of this, use all the means in your power, and every method consistent with civicause, or weaken the enemy, we call upon you were broken. to do." By the blazing fire of his own dwelling, and amid the ruins of his plantation, wasted and despoiled, the Kentucky Union man is learning new lessons in loyalty.

"To Your Tents!"

But a few days more remain for those desiring to join the Federal Army as volunteers. Soon the order for drafting must be carried out .-Then the able-bodied must leave their business if called upon, and go out to battle for their country. A battle was fought on Saturday between cavalry brigade, had been engaged the day be- cleared out of all sick and wounded ore in the extreme advance near the Rapidan and cut him off. Saturday morning he was engaged for some hours, before Gen. Bank came up, and with four regiments of cavalry, the 1st Pennsylvania, 1st Maine, and 1st Rhode Island, delayed and embarrassed the enemy's advance. The rebels under Jackson and Ewell, had crossed the Rapidan in force, and their advance guard 15,000 strong was attacked by Gen. Banks Saturday afternoon, about 6 miles

The fight was almost wholly with artillery hoisted the rebel rag. o'clock, and a determined and bloody contest followed. Gen. Banks' right wing, under Gen. Saybrook, was struck by lightning Saturday Williams, suffered severely. The rebel position was in the woods, while the troops which She had been previously struck while trying to attacked them were obliged to cross open ground. It was not till about six that it became evident that the rebels were attacking in force. Previously to that there had been rather a desultory cannonade. Then the whole rebel wich route, collided with a Williamsburg ferry force suddenly attacked in overwhelming numpoat, while coming down the East River, Sunbers at all points. Nearly all their regiments had full ranks. At 71 o'clock Gen. Pope arrived on the field from Culpepper, accompanied by Gen. McDowell, with part of McDowell's corps. The battle was substantially over, Gen. Banks holding the same ground he occupied at Their entire loss could not have been less than the beginning. After the arrival of Gen. The attempt was repelled by a vigorous fire from McDowell's troops, and the Generals and their staffs left the ground under a cross fire from the rebels and their own troops. The fire of the rebel batteries was afterwards silenced.

Gen. Pope on arriving sent fresh troops to the front to take the place of Gen. Banks' exhausted column. The enemy did not renew the at-tack except by artillery. The troops were under arms and in position all night. General Banks was on the field throughout the action, and was constantly under fire. His handling of his troops and personal gallantry are highly praised by his officers. The bravery and good conduct of the troops were conspicuous during a large part of the fight. When overpowered by numbers, some regiments retreated in disorder.

The losses are very heavy on both sides, not less than 2000 or 3000 killed, wounded and missing on each side. Some prisoners were taken by both. Jackson and Ewell were both present in the battle. Gen. Banks is rather severely hurt by an accident. A cavalry trooper ran against him, and he was struck heavily in the side. Nevertheless he remained on the field, and was on duty Sunday morning with his command. Major Savage, of the 2d Massachusetts is probably dead, as when last seen on the field, he was in a dying condition.
