A Military Pause.

Unless the Rebels shall assume the offensive and attack our forces, very little war news need be expected for some weeks. Neither McClellan nor Pope are in any condition to seriously threaten the enemy, and if they shall be able to maintain their positions for the next month, the nation will have cause for profound gratitude. As yet very few reinforcements have been received by either General since the retreat of McClellan, and although every Northern State is doing its utmost to fill up its regiments, the system of districting the State, by which a large number of regiments are recruited at the same time, prevents any one regiment from being ready for the field as soon as it otherwise would be. But when the soldiers begin to pour into Washington as they will in a few weeks, the stream will be continuous and unabated until both armies are again ready for an advance. But will the Rebels wait for us to reinforce our army? Certainly not, if their superiority in numbers is such as we have reason to believe. No darker day for the Republic, no brighter one for the Rebels can ever dawn than the present. With the advance of new regiments to the seat of war, not only will our army be strengthened but the national heart will be cheered, hope will revive, and the raising of further regiments become much easier. The Rebels have their men already in the army, more than they can properly arm, while their supply of weapons is limited by their own actual possessions and capacity to manufacture. That they will quietly wait a month or six weeks for our new troops to reach the scene of conflict, and our new gunboats to be launched we hardly dare hope. Yet upon their doing so very much of our future now

We are not by any means disposed to take gloomy view of the future; not because the present is bright, but because we have full faith in the final triumph of right, and believe that whatever disasters may overwhelm us, there is a future for our country more glorious and beneficent than its past. The voyage may be tempestuous, but the haven will be certain and peaceful.

Absent Soldiers. The order requiring every officer and soldier absent on furlough, to return to his regiment, is a new indication of vigor in the prosecution of the war. The attempt to increase the army, so long as the furloughs were granted faster Rev. Dr. Phelps, Messrs. Chas. Linsley, I. P. Merthan recruits were enlisted, has for some time row, and Mr. Horton, their efficient superintenbeen a failure. We have been deceived by a nominal army, nominal regiments, nominal thousands-all existing on muster and pay rolls, but not to be found in the day of trial. We go into every battle with an overwhelming forceon paper. We come out of it with about third of the number, and are unable to account for the discrepancy by any list of killed, wound ed and prisoners. It is believed that this new order will throw more light upon the subject, and that the number of men hereafter actually Bentel, of the Moravian Church, in the evening. engaged in battle, will bear some decent relation to the number belonging to the army. There are cases where it is highly proper that they should be. But the wholesale manner in which they have been dealt out in the past, not only weakens our army in respect to counted as converts to Christ. The Militia Enrollment.

At 11 o'clock to-day 100 to 150 certificates had been received stating that the bearer was unfit for military duty on account of physical disability. It is remarkable how much physical (and moral) indisposition increases, in view of the probability of a draft to fill the ranks of the army.

If the Division of the Sons of Temperance, under whose auspices and for whose benefit they have been exhibited, has received the pe-cuniar, reward it deserves, we are glad; for never was an enterprise carried to a more successful issue. Our citizens ought to encourage home productions, at least, when they exhibit a talent and energy which approaches to or excels that which is necessary to the success of a travel-

The Golden Hour: By MONCURE D. CONWAY, author of the "Rejected Stone." Boston: Ticknon & Fields. 1862. pp. 160.

This book consists of a series of Essays on th subject of the present crisis of the republic. They are written in a vigorous and pithy style, and the vividness of the illustrative anecdotes, figures, &c. used to develop the meaning, strikes the attention at the first glance. The author appears to think that immediate emancipation is the panacea for all our national troubles-a conclusion that many may ot concede, however much they may realize the lesirableness of accomplishing that end. The book furnishes food for thought and is well worth a read ing by all who desire to know what can be said or the "radical" side of this bitterly controverted subject. The work is handsomely printed and bound in the best style of the "Riverside Press." For sale by T. H. Pease.

[Mrs. Hemans.

"What have you concealed here?" I said, taking hold of the heavy silk drapery attached to a rose wood cornice, and falling in graceful "Lilian! Lilian, dont raise it!" exclaimed

Mrs. Thornton, springing from the easy chair in which she had been reclining with the listessness of a dreaming child, and darting to my side she pressed so heavily against the veil that I could discern the outline of a picture frame.
"A picture!" I exclaimed. "O, I must see it, for I can never rest where there is anything mysterious." "But this you cannot-must not see." I did not reply, for having been an inmate of he house only a week, and this being my first visit to the library, I could not give utterence o the thoughts which rushed through my mind Perhaps Mrs. Thornton divined my thoughts as after a moment's silence she said : "You are to have access to this library at all times; every book is at your service, and you are at liberty, even, to rummage the drawers and pigeon holes of my desk, if your curiosity demands it; but you must not look beneath the trembled, her dark, expressive eyes were fixed and I must accompany him. Then I expressed upon mine.

"Just one glance," I said pleadingly; but she moved her head negatively, and I went on: How can I study with that mystery ever before me, and then too, I shall never sleep soundly again, but dream the livelong night of this mystical veil, and that it hides some strange, weird image; or worse, become a somnambulist and frighten every servant, who happens to fear ghosts, from the house by my midnight explorations and wanderings." "No eye but mine ever looks upon this veiled picture. It is sacred, for it is the only relic I have preserved of my past life; all that I have days too bright to last; to remind me of happy of a brief period when life's pathway was strewn with flowers, and I dreamed not that beneath those fair, perfumed flowers, petals, sharp, piercing thorns were hidden." Her face was pale as death, and those deep, dark eyes, moist with pearly tears. I saw that her heart was deeply pained; that welling from memory's fount came painful remembrance, and truly penitent, I said-"Forgive my thoughtless words, and I promise never to raise the veil from this picture, nor pain your heart by my questions."

An intense smile stole over her pale features, and kissing my cheek she murmured—"Dear child; perhaps some day I may lift the veil and tell you all." Then turning away to hide her tears, left me standing before the veiled pic-

It was rather curious how I came to be a dweller in the home of Mrs. Thornton. Two ears ago, when but fourteen years old, I came to New Haven to attend school, and after my father leaving home for Europe, where he expected to remain three years, intrusted me to ne guardianship of Mr. Howe, an old friend of is college days. It was at the house of Mr. Howe that I first met Mrs. Thornton. She went but little into society, and my guardian's was one of the few families she visited. Her pale, expressive face attracted me, and then, oo, there was an indefinable something in her dark, liquid eyes, now so sad, and now glowing with an intense smile, that awoke an answer ing echo in my heart. She always called me to her side to ask me about my studies; and when a new book was announced which she hought would be suitable for me to read, she placed it in my hand with my name engraven upon the fly leaf in her own hand writing Was it strange that my heart warmed toward her; and that her coming was looked forward to with pleasure, or that I often begged to visit her in her quiet pleasant home. My visits there were not very frequent; and when we sat in her boudoir, which was fitted up with artistic taste, and having never been admitted to and thought I could be happy there. Mrs. Thornton had proposed it, as Mr. Howe's family anticipated being absent from the city most of the summer; and the following Saturday I removed to her home.

It was my first holiday in my new home, and I had gone to the library with Mrs. Thornton to select a book, when on passing around, my eyes fell upon the silk drapery shading the walls in the furtherest corner, and was about to draw it aside, when her exclamation prevented. I had promised not to look beneath the mysterious folds of that silken veil, yet I was not satisfied; curiosity prompted me to try to catch a glimpse when Mrs. Thernton was occupied, but honor forbade.

Summer and autumn passed, and the long winter evenings were passed in the cosy, cheerful library; and though I cast many a furtive plance toward the veiled picture, I dared not uestion Mr. Thornton, and began to despair of he dawning of that day when she would relate the history of the picture. It was a mild evening in spring, and we were sitting before the grate in the library; I watching the fast dimming coals that had burnt low, while Mrs. Thornon with closed eyes sat near, in the easy chair. My reverie was broken by the tremulous tones of her voice, saving: "Lilian, do you remember your mother?" Then I answered that, though I turned leaf after leaf of memory's book, yet I could find no record of a mother's love. She died when I was about two years old, yet my father had been kind, and, as far as possible, filled the place of both father and mother. My childhood had passed happily; my father was both friend and instructor, and my first great grief was when I was sent to school and my father sailed for Europe.

"Was your mother's name Lilian?" and there was something in the tone of her voice that startled me. "Her name was Flora-Flora May. Was it.

ot a sweet name?" with a strange sensation.

"I can't tell where she was buried. Once when I asked my father, he said it was far away, York and removed to Ohio. I have no recolection of my first home, but shall ask my father to take me there before we return to Ohio.'

"And your father loved his wife?" "What a strange question," I said. Ye she appeared to have spoken without thought. "If he had not loved her, do you think he would oals. Were her questions the magic key that had unlocked the casket where the memories of my childhood were stored? I could not tell .-Yet there came a dim remembrance of a time when I was playing in the garden and a strange face peered into mine, as some one clasping me in her arms kissed me again and again, while ny face was wet with tears. I never knew whence she came or whither she went, and it seemed strange that dim memory should come ack then. It passed, and a bright dream flitted before my waking vision-my father would return in a few months; he would meet Mrs. Thornton; she was so gentle and winning h of my mother. To him the memory of the past was painful, and I mingled my tears with those of my father, while again I seemed to see that strange face peering into mine. In two hours I would leave my kind friend, and I was going without the mystery of the library being solved; so I ventured to hint that, when I came to visit her next year, I hoped to see the veiled picture unveiled. reply, but taking my hand led me to the library. She would tell me all, she said, for perhaps we might never meet again.

Mrs. Thornton told her story briefly. She vas the only child of wealthy parents, and married at the age of nineteen. For three years she was happy in the pleasant home to which her husband took her; then a cloud of midnight darkness overshadowed that home. Some one envying her, circulated reports injurious to her reputation, and these coming to her husband's ears, he, being naturally of a jealous dis position, believed them. The wife loved her nusband devotedly, and being innocent, how could she bear patiently his taunts and un called for surveillance? So she proposed reurning to her parental home, and the husbane said Go, only she must leave her child. She did go, and three years after, her parents being dead, she went to Europe, where she remained eight years. Returning to America, she came New Haven, where, under the assumed name of Thornton, she had since resided. Once she visited the home of her husband during his absence, and bribing the housekeeper by the present of a well-filled purse, procured his portrait; and in all her wanderings it had been her companion, though closely veiled, lest some one should recognize it, and thus her early history become food for idle gossip. Then, too, she had seen her child, and for a brief mo ment pressed it to her bosom, but words could not express the agony of her breaking heart as she turned away from her child. "Your husband's name," I said, sinking a her feet, and gazing wonderingly into her pale face and dark liquid eyes, bent so lovingly upon me; for a strange hope made my heart throb "I cannot repeat his name, but you may look upon his counterpart," she said rising. Slowly, almost reverently, she put back the folds of that silken veil, while I stood, half breathless, beside her. Was it a dream, or was it reality? There was no mistaking that likeness; and involuntarily the words, ther!" burst from my lips. Then, like a swiftly moving panorama, it all passed before my mind, and throwing my arms around her neck, Washington, Aug. 2, 1862. An officer writing from Harrison's Landing, says all is quiet on the James River. One corps after another is being reviewed by Gen. Mc-Clellan, and the troops make a fine appearance. The soldiers are in good spirits, and will be ready to deal heavy blows when called upon to strike the enemy. If New England, the Middle States, and the great West only do their duty now, this wicked rebellion can be crushed forever. God grant that the new call for men may not be in vain.

DR. CHEESEMAN'S PILLS The combination of ingredients in these Pills are the re sult of a long and extensive practice. They are mild in their operation, and certain in correcting all irregularities, Painful Menstruations, removing all obstructions, whether from cold or otherwise, headache, pain in the side, palpita-tion of the heart, whites, all nervous affections, hysterics, pair in the back and limbs, &c., disturbed sleep, which arise from interruptions of nature.

DR. CHEESEMAN'S PILLS was the commencement of a new era in the treatment of those irregularities and obstructions which have consigned so many to a PREMATURE GRAVE. No female can enjoy good health unless she is regular, and whenever an obstruction takes place the general health begins to decline.

DR. CHEESEMAN'S PILLS DR. CHEESEMAN'S PILLS
ser the most effectual remedy ever known for all complaints peculiar to Females. To all classes they are invaluable, inducing, with certainty, periodical regularity. They are known to thousands, who have used them at different periods, throughout the country, having the sanction of one of the most Eminent Physicians in America. Explicit directions, stating when they should not be used, with each Box—the Price One Dollar per Box, containing from 50 to 60 Pills.

A Letter to the President. President Lincoln having desired the people of the country to express their views, in order that he may know what public opinion is, we give ours concisely as follows: New Haven, Ct., Aug. 4th, 1862. PRESIDENT LINCOLN: - DEAR SIR: We wish you in the first place to fill up your armies to a magnitude never before attained. 2d. Tell your Generals, when the army is thus filled, to advance, and if they encounter the enemy, to fight, 3d. Tell them to carry into effect the law of Congress known as the Confiscation Act. both in their orders, and in their actions. 4th. Tell them, if they find negroes who are loyal, to use them, and if they find negroes fighting against us, to shoot them if they can, and to treat white rebels in the same way. 5th Carry on this war yourself, just as if you were fighting John Bull, or any other foreign enemy. 6th. We think time enough has been fooled away, and that dispatches about the enthusiasa of the soldiers over this or that General are quite more good than an eternity of such talk. 7th. It is the especial business of the rebels to look after the interests of Slavery. They would not trust you and have taken that matter out of attend to the country. 8th. Do not dismiss a General whose army happens to hurt some "Southern brother" in the rebel army, even though the General should be in imminent peril of gaining a victory. We assure you the any Generals who never do gain victories and if you remove these Generals. Remove them at once if you have no confidence in them. If you have confidence in them, it is all right, and Col. Colburn. we are glad to know it. 10th. In your own expressive language stop "throwing grass, and give every body to understand that in this bait, or go ashore." 11th. Let the people know fear. We cannot help you unless you speak 12th. Do your duty like a brave-hearted Western man as you are, and then call on the people when you are in trouble. They have as deep an interest in this matter as you. Your obd't servant. THE PALLADIUM.

Town Meeting.

A town meeting is called for to-morrow, to take action upon the subject of bounties for volunteers. We do not know whether any one proposes to vote against offering bounties, but there are just three considerations which may possibly induce some to do so. First, because they do not desire to see the rebellion suppressed; secondly, because they are too selfish to be taxed even for the preservation of their country; and third, because they desire a draft and do not wish any more volunteers. It is to be hoped that neither of these motives will operate upon the minds of many of our citizens, Volunteering is very slow. It is natural that it should be, for while towns around us have voted liberally, New Haven has not voted a dollar. Men are waiting to see what will be done. If the town is liberal in its appropriation, and it the town is liberal in its appropriation, and it gives them no encouragement, says he has no can afford to be, volunteers will come forward work, food or shelter for them, but still, not unand the quota will be raised. So that even if a like white men, they prefer liberty to slavery be resorted to here in New Haven. A bounty for a year past. One plantation asked their made. If it will stimulate enlistments to any considerable extent, it would be criminal not to offer it, and we hope no voter who desires the all a whipping, and commenced with an old neof peace, will be absent to-morrow from the The result was, thirteen able-bodied men ap-

Gen. Benham. Gen. Benham has been seriously censured for the unfortunate attack upon the rebel batteries on James Island. Among those who have attacked him is Gen. It does not yet appear whether a draft is to! e resorted to or not in this State. But unless the number of regiments required for us are filled up in a few weeks, it is evident that the Government will be obliged to order a draft. About three hundred more recruits are wanted from New Haven to save us from the annoynce. The State bounty of $50 will not be paid after Aug. 20th, and drafted men will receive no bounty, and no provision is made for heir families under the law.

Halleck, in sending this order, re minded Gen. McClellan that military officers LATES IN EVERY TOWN AND VILLAGE FROM WHICH have no right to recognize the local laws of the States in rebellion. He further orders him to seize every article of rebel property that can be made useful for the service of our army. It is further stated that the enforcement of the coniscation law has commenced with energy.

The appearance of the new Merrimac in the James River is not calculated to add to the safety of our army. If this vessel should prove in any manner as formidable as represented, and the enemy are able to shell our army from the opposite shore, the position of McClellan will become anything but pleasant, even if his supplies should not be cut off, by batteries planted on the banks below him.

We have a pleasant hospital a few miles out of camp, a house belonging to a rebel woman, who left her negroes without a mouthful to eat. The orange, lemon and fig trees furnish a very pleasant shade. The services of Dr. Fletcher, who enlisted as a private in Co. I., have been invaluable to the regiment. Surgeon Brownell was at New Orleans several weeks connected with St. James' Hospital, and Dr. Leavenworth, although very willing, found more than he could possibly do. We are better favored now; Dr. B. has returned, and the State has sent us a valuable man in the person of Dr. Cummings. JOHN DUDLEY, Secretary

New Haven, Aug. 2, 1862. Gen. Hunter has written a letter to Rev. D Tyng, urging emancipation and the arming of laves of rebels as the surest and shortest method of saving the country from ruin. The letter is written not for its political effect, but to exress the views of a military man, looking at military necessities. As a general, he insists that "the axe must be laid to the root of the upas tree which has rained down such bitter permanent peace can be justly hoped for." The sloop-of-war John Adams arrived in port at New London yesterday, from her cruise un the Sound. The French steam frigate Guerriere also arrived from New York.

Edwin Brothertoft : By THEODORE WINTHROP, au thor of "Cecil Dreeme," and "John Brent," Boston: Ticknor & Fields. 1862. pp. 369.

Few writers of late years have died so deeply and incerely lamented as Major Winthrop, the talented uthor of whom the present work is the latest and best literary monument. The brilliant genius of the writer shines out in full splendor in " Edwin Brothertoft." The style of the author is admirably clear and lucid; the plot is deeply interesting; the alluions to heroes of a former generation and the first evolution, excite much pleasure and interest; and t is not too much to say that the tale is one of the very best of the works of fiction, issued during the year past. We take pleasure in commending the story to all lovers of pure and cultivated reading. The "getting up" of the volume is of the same most excellent character as regards typography paper and binding, that marks all the works of hese popular publishers. For sale by T. H. CONCILIATION .- A discourse at a Sunday Evening service, New Haven, July 20th, 1862. By Leonard Bacon, Pastor of the First Church in New Ha ven. Peck, White & Peck.

Such is the title page of a Sermon lately delivere by Dr. Bacon. He treats his subject in his usually masterly style. He reviews the various methods conciliation that have been proposed, which are I. Submission to the demands on which the bellion is founded. This involves :

1. A surrender of the fundamental principle our government—that the secession of a state at it own discretion, is impossible without treason. 2. The surrender of the right to elect a Presi lent by a constitutional majority, in accordance with constitutional arrangements. 3. The nationalization of Slavery.

4. The suppression of the right of opinion and atterance in regard to Slavery.

Regarding this method as impracticable, the Do II. The proposal to conciliate by consenting

The New American Alphabet.-Entered accord g to act of Congress, By CHARLES B. GLENVILLE There are many scholars of the first rank, and their number is yearly increasing, who unwaveringly believe that the necessity of a more rational and philosophical spelling is so pressing that the want will in course of time be supplied. Such men are Professor Haldeman of Columbia College, Penn.; Professor Whitney of Yale; Professor Max Muller of Oxford University, England; Alexander John Ellis, and Sir Walter Trevelyan of the sam country. These and thousands more are hoping for "the good time coming" when a rational sys tem of spelling shall take the place of our bizarre and antiquated one; and thus give the English language the only indispensible essential it now needs to cause it to become in time the universal language of the earth. To supply the essential various persons have ainly essayed. Benjamin Franklin attempted it out died too soon to bring his plan into notice. We have before us an alphabetic scheme. We consider t very imperfect in many and vital respects, a few of which are as follows : 1. It is constructed on a wrong basis: that is, if egards the English rather than the European valnes of the vowel letters.

2. It violates most wantonly the obvious princ ple that "a philosophical alphabet should repre ent sounds of a given degree of likeness, by char neters of a near degree of similarity. (See Lathan on this subject.) This principle as regards an alphabet based as far as practicable on the use of old letters, may only be violated in the use of the char acters representing consonant sounds.

3. It violates another well settled principle of a phonetic representation, viz, "one sign to one ound and every sound its own sign, invariably." 4. Its new letters are bizarre, awkward, and finical in appearance.

5. Its script letters are difficult of execution.

Add to these objections, the author's analysis o ounds is imperfect; e. g., some words of two syllables he spells without a single vowel! Those curious and interested in these matters can obtain the work of T. H. Pease.

The Rebel mail-clad gunboat Arkansas is to s so formidable and invulnerable, why don't she destroy the Brooklyn and our other finest frigates? It is commonly said that there were 200,000 men in the Richmond army during the seven days, but can it be true? With 50,000 they attacked our right wing-with other 50,000 they might have attacked our left, and with ther 50,000 our center, leaving 50,000 as a reserve to hold their lines of defense. And vould they not have done it if they had the men? I believe we greatly overestimate their armed and effective force, and that the effect on our enlistments is bad. I would not underestimate them, or treat the matter with any want of candor, only let us endeavor to get at the truth. When our Monitors are ready in the Fall, and our 300,000 volunteers, we will so outnumber the rebels in all that goes to make up real efficiency in war, that our men may enlist with the comforting assurance that they are on, by far, the strongest side. I have had a pretty fair opportunity of judging as to the ability of the gun making world to supply good and serviceable rifles, and I am satisfied that the Rebels are utterly unable to properly arm such armies as we now hear asscribed to them, and that even our own government, with all the world open to it, will have as much as it can do, to arm our new levies. Probably, however, the Rebels have reserves to f possible complete the Connecticut quota by the fevers are gone and the land will be healthy; MENTOR.

HILTON HEAD, S. C., July 26, 1862.

I little thought, one week ago to-day when we were leaving Edisto Island, that we should be in this vicinity the length of time that we have been. Judging from the news which came to us from the seat of war, we all supposed that gunboats have passed up beyond Harrison's ere this time we should shake hands with our prothers along the banks of the James River. But not so, and the cause of this delay is said o be scarcity of transportation. Now this is too bad. The idea of keeping troops here in waiting who are already trained to the use of the rifle, and employing vessels to convey others who are young in experience and less calculated to bear the fatigues and toils of a life in the injustice, blunder or neglect, have been the tion comes, right merrily will all respond.

STATE NEWS.

A colored youth of seventeen summers, named Thomas Davis, living in Hartford, fell in love with a sable damsel named Georgiana Smith. He went with her to the opera, and was happy. But Georgiana had no idea of going with him through life. She did not love him. When once the blighting fact broke upon the mind of Thomas, life being worthless without Georgiana, he sought relief in the contents of a small pistol, and succeeded in lodging five shot in his stomach. The wounds thus made are said to be painful but not fatal, and it is thought he will recover both from the shots and his love. Thomas should remember the advice of the old clergyman to the young one who had been filted: "Well I wouldn't cry about it-there are enough more pretty girls."
