Fighting Against Odds.

Throughout this entire war the bravery of our soldiers has been conspicuous. Not often have they had the opportunity of meeting the foe on even terms. In almost every battle they have been forced to contend against overpowering numbers, with the advantage of position on the side of the enemy. It is pleasant to read the record of heroism and daring,pleasant to know that our brave soldiers have faced death in its most terrible form, when hope could be gathered only from despair, and when their only inspiration was to sell their lives as dearly as possible, and to bless their country even in death.

But on the other hand, to read, time and again, of a little band of heroes struggling beneath a scorching sun, against the hosts of the enemy, without any prospect of immediate reinforcement, is sickening in the highest degree. We have seen it at James Island, where our own Connecticut troops, exhibiting deeds of valor worthy of a better fate, were so mercilessly slaughtered. We have seen it at Ball's Bluff, where the Massachusetts men, with the dark waters of the Potomac rolling behind them, and the fee pressing upon them in front, were literally butchered, and where the gallant and eloquent Baker fell. We have seen it at Pittsburg Landing, and at Springfield where Lyon died. We have seen it in the seven days' rebellion was massed against our regiments, thinned by the fevers of the Chickahominy And, finally, we have seen it in the last bloody battle of Slaughter Mountain, where our State has again been compelled to mourn the loss of so many brave sons. In every instance our men have fought nobly. They have exhibited a prowess which would make victory sure, if they were properly sustained.

But we do not desire to read of any more battles of this kind. If victory is gained it is too dearly purchased. If defeat is suffered, our sorrow is intensified in mourning for friends needlessly slain. The people are anxious that this rebellion should be suppressed. But ever now, when the summer months are gliding away into Autumn, there is no murmuring or the part of the people, because more activity is not shown. They only ask that no movements may be made until the army is ready to succeed. Let Pope and McClellan secure the safety of their armies; let them guard against any sudden raid of the enemy, and then let them wait until the hundreds of thousands of new volunteers shall be ready to help them. The number of troops that can be furnished is almost without limit. Let them be so concentrated that the Southern confederacy can not bring into the field troops enough to outnumber us. The lessons of the past have been painful. The Government and Generals ought to profit by them. And in the future when our armie contend, let them fight not for self-preservation and life, but for the overthrow of the enemy and the final destruction of the hosts of treason

The "Confederate States,"--Character of the Rebellion.

The writer of the following explains by say ing that he had so many invectives on his mind, which had accumulated in consequence of his keeping a faithful record of the Southern rebellion, that he found it difficult to engage in ordinary conversation without indulg fng in more of them than necessary. In an opportune moment he rid himself of them, and was astonished to find that the order he had F. H. Arms, son of the Rev. The President on Thursday gave audience at the White House to a committee of colored men, for the discussion of the matter of colon ization, as proposed by the last Congress. Mr. Lincoln made a speech of considerable length, in which he urged colonization as the best thing for the colored race, and stated that a place in Central America had been decided upon for the experiment. He asked the delegation to give the matter thorough consideration, and to give him an answer at their pleasure. They promised to do so, and then retired.

A pleasant surprise was given to 1st Lieut. Barnes, of the 2d Company Grays, on the Camp Ground, Thursday. The members of the compan appreciating the whole-souled character and gene ous patriotism of their Lieutenant, manifested the regard by presenting him with a sword, sash and trappings. The sword, which we have seen, is in deed a fine piece of workmanship, being mounted with gold, and as "true as steel" in its proportions. On the hilt of the sword, and on the upper band of the sheath, appears the following: "Presented t 1st Lieut. S. Barnes, by company, 2d Company New Haven Grays, 15th Regiment, C. V., Aug. 14, 1862. The presentation was made by Rev. Mr. Folsom, of Fair Haven, in an eloquent and appropriate speech Mr. Barnes responded substantially as follows:

FELLOW SOLDIERS-You have most kindly as most completely surprised me with this honor. To say that I am deeply grateful to you for this sub-stantial and elegant gift would but half express the feelings of my heart. You know I am no orator. I aspire to deeds more than words in this hour of duty and peril. Soldiers—As often as I draw this beautiful sword from the scabbard, I shall silently ledge anew my heart and hand to you, to our holy case, our country, and our God. As often as draw it. I shall remind myself that you have in trusted it to me with the expectation that it wil never be dishonored by any act of mine; God help through every conflict, inspired to fortitude and courage by the thought that you gave it to me.—Soldiers—again I thank you. Let us do our data ing me, it never shall. I will carry this trusty blade nobly, and may God speed the right.

We vere present at one of these meetings this week, when the Rev. Mr. Simmons presided, and were deeply impressed with the importance of the serices. As he read the lesson from 1st Samuel, 18th chapter, the soldiers listened with great attention. His remarks were peculiarly adapted to the times. He showed that the majority of power and success was with the right and where God is. He illustraed by the proud Philistine's challenge through Go iah, their giant; spoke of their plans to overthrow lod's people, and that their object was servitude out that God's plan and men's differ. God designed no such thing, although they held a Goliah al armed and clad to defy and conquer them, He wished to show to the world that his people succed because their cause is right. Philiste supposed he said that one Philistine was as good as five Israel ites, but God choose a boy to teach them better. He caused him to put five smooth stones in his cartridge box, one for each joint of the giant's harness, and take his sling, and with these he levelled the proud defier. Thus hath the right prevailed, where dod works. History reveals everywhere that though often temporarily defeated, the hallelujahs of triumph, are eventually with the right. He spoke of Gideon's army; how God divided and subdivided it until only 300 volunteers were left, men who knew how to drink without exposing themselves to the enemy, and with these Gideo took the city. He spoke of the boasting Sennache rib, with his superior force and numbers, coming against God's people. He did not even let them strike a blow. "Wait," said he, and they waited Their cause was right, and God heaped up a hundred and eighty-five of their enemies, as evidence that when he works there is victory. He spoke of our own country, that success was sure if we would do right and trust God. He spoke of the individual heart, we must fight against sin, and God would

He Recommends the Crittenden Resolutions.

FRANKFORT, Ky., Aug. 15, 1862. The message of Gov. McGoffin condemns the invasion of the State by the guerrilas, John Morgan and others, and declares that Southern-Rights men disapprove of it. He recommends the adoption of the Crittenden resolutions as a standing proposition of peace and settlement of war. He concludes his message as follows: "I hazard nothing in saying that I have been more untiring in honest efforts to preserve, and have made more propositions to prevent a dishas, Lyman, John Covert, Geo. The Connecticut Fifth.

This regiment seems to have borne the brunt of the battle in the recent conflict at Cedar Mountain and to have covered itself with glory, that it was impossible to keep up the regiment though at a terrible sacrifice. A correspondent but Gen. Hunter is not understood to be such of the New York Tribune writing from the an officer as would permit his soldiers to act in Rapidan, Aug. 15th, says: "The Conn. 5th, such a manner; it is more likely he would comthe pride of Gen. It is a noticeable fact that sons enrolled, five hundred had deserted, and these five wore no shoulder straps, and were dressed as privates. Mr. D. C. Gilman writes from Washington to the Tribune as follows, respecting this regi-

Colonel, Lieut.-Colonel, Major, Adjutant, Quartermaster, Sergeant-Major, and many captains and lieutenants fell, either mortally wounded, or so disabled as to be taken prisoners. Capt. Corliss, of the color company, fell pierced with ten balls. Majo was seen surrounded by a group of th enemy, fighting desperately. He has not been heard from since. Lieut.-Colonel Stone is also missing. Col. Chapman and Quartermaster Whitney (as already announced) have reached Rich mend as prisoners—both slightly wounded.

Adj. Smith was buried on the field, and the grave marked.

The bodies of Capt. Corliss and Lieut. Du ton (son of ex-Governor, now Judge Dutton of New Haven) were found and buried on the field. Capts. Packer and Lane and Lieut. Daniels, seriously wounded, have reached the Clay House, Washington, and are comfortable. Sergeant Shufeldt, badly wounded, is at the Mansion House Hospital, Alexandria. been successively shot down, were borne from the field torn to rags. These facts need no comment. They are glerious eulogy upon the bravery, endurance, and patriotism of the Connecticut 5th.

Capt. H. W. Daboll (Co. H,) is now in con mand of the regiment, near Culpepper. Company E and F were not engaged in the battle, being detailed, one for signal service, and the other as provost guard.

Steamboat Accident.

The steamboat Traveler on Saturday night while on her regular trip from New York for that your hand and heart helped to save your this city, when just above Captain's Island, nearly off Norwalk, broke the crank pin of her engine, and was unable to proceed. She was turned about and slowly made for New York, reaching Hurlgate about 7 o'clock a. m. A ferry boat here undertook to tow her, but the regards neither high nor I.w., officers or soldiers machinery became more disabled and she struck once or twice, breaking the wheel buckets. Fortunately, the steamboat Virginia Seymour, with a party of the Provost Marshal's force on came to the assistance of the disabled boat, towing her to the foot of Tenth street, East river, where she arrived about 9 o'clock.

Capt. McNeil and Mr. Denslow, the clerk were unremitting in their attention to the passengers, of whom there were over sixty or board; refunded them their passage money and provided an excellent breakfast, free of charge. The steamboats on this line are just now carrying many passengers and a great deal of freight, and the delay of repairing the steamer will cause them some loss, but it was an acci dent of that nature that no foresight could have prevented, and the loss will have to be patiently borne.

Archbishop Hughes. Archbishop Hughes having just returned from Europe delivered a most patriotic and able sermon, vesterday, in St. Patrick's Cathedral, in New York. After reviewing his own course while in Europe and showing that much of his time had been devoted to the cause of the country, he proceeded to show that no immediate danger of foreign interference existed, and that if any were made it should be resisted with the sword. The uprising of the North had done much to keep Europe quiet. He was heartily in favor of the draft, and if three hundred thou sand men were not enough, he desired to see three hundred thousand more called for.

"It ought not to be left to the government to plead with the people, to call upon them to come forward, and to ask if they will permit themselves to be drafted. No; but the people themselves should insist upon being drafted, and be allowed to bring this unnatural strife to

Col Corcoran.

This gallant son of the Emerald Isle arrived in Washington Sunday morning, after over a year's confinement in Southern prisons. He comes back to the North at a favorable time. The nation needs men; and Col Corcoran's voice, heard, as it will be, portraying the hardships, sufferings, and inhumanities to which he has been subjected at the hands of Southern rebels, will stir up the hearts of his fellow Irishthem will be found speedily in the ranks of our ange street, when called for. S. D. PARDEE. army, determined to avenge his treatment. Col. Corcoran, in a brief speech at Washington, said that, "for himself, he was ready to seize in his hand either the sword or the musket, prepared these times when charities are liable to be bestowed at once to take any position where he could be in other directions. of service to his country."

Clark Roberts, of Winsted, employs a good many hands about his harvesting, and uniformy on the appearance of a man for work, inquires whether he has a certificate. If he has, he offers 75 cents per day wages; if not, he gives $1 25. And from this rule he won't budge.

The American Institute of Instruction will bserve its anniversaries at Hartford on Wedneslay, Thursday, and Friday, the 20th, 21st and

The Adjutant of the Harris Light Cavalry. Benj. Gregory, writes us from Falmouth, Va. lenying in strong terms a statement recently made by a correspondent of the Hartford Pres that the officers of that corps are addicted t gambling, drunkenness, &c. Nothing could be farther from the truth, and the slander is the work of some person who desires to inflict inury upon men every way worthy of confidence. Mr. Gregory calls upon the Press to give the ame of its correspondent.

Gen. Hunter's Negro Regiment. Gen. Hunter has disbanded his regiment negroes at Hilton Head, after having on the the 1st inst. given them their free papers. It is not definitely ascertained what were his reasons for this step. One report has it that the white soldiers were so abusive to the negroes pel proper treatment of the negroes. Another the rest showed a disposition to run. This may be true, but it is more reasonable to suppose that Gen. Hunter has abandoned his project because he found the policy of the Administration was against arming negroes as soldiers.

Second Lieut, W. C. Faxton, of the 1st Conn. Artillery, who was captured by the rebels has been released.

A Call to Temperance Men. BROTHERS: The voice of our noble Presiden s again heard, calling on the strong men of our country, both young men and middle aged, to rush to the rescue, to preserve from the hand of the ruthless destroyer those sacred rights and liberties which our beloved Washington and his compatriots secured to us through blood and suffering, and which they handed down to us as the richest legacy they could bestow, and without which, home and friends and even life itself loses its greatest happiness and enjoyment. Hundreds of thousands of your fellow countrymen, both native and adopted, are already in the field, and they have accomplished much. Covering themselves (both the living and the dead) with the glory of a righteous cause, but they are now scattered far and wide, their numbers diminished by death, wounds and dis-

We need (and I trust not in vain.) your prompt and ready assistance to drive them from their strongholds, to take possession of their capital, and to follow them up promptly until ey are willing to give up the unrighteous struggle and come back to that government that has for nearly a century protected them, and all they possess, and is ready still to grant them all the blessings which a free government alone can bestow. Come then, and show your love for the dear old Flag, and the principles of which it is the emblem, by enlisting under its folds; then, when the work is accomplished, you can more fully enjoy all the rights and privileges of freemen, with the proud satisfaction of knowing country from destruction, that millions yet unborn might enjoy its glorious benefits. But this is not all we want. There is a in our armies, even in our very midst, that is as much to be dreaded as the Southern traitor. and far more to be dreaded than the missiles of the war. It is the demon of Intemperance that any rank or capacity, but often enters the marque of the commanding officer as well as the tent of the subordinate officer or the private soldier, and often compels an abject submission to his terrible sway, or at the least, unnerves board, was passing at this time and promptly the strong arm, blinds and debases the passions of those who come under its baneful influence, often unfitting the generous and patriotic soldier for the proper discharge of his high and responsible duties, and leaving him at the mercy of every bad passion; thus exposing him to disgrace and punishment of every kind. To you then we call, who dare say nay to the very offer of the tempter, and who will wage unceasing war against the tyrant alcohol (whose more common name is Whisky,) until our noble army is purged from the dreadful stain and blight of intemperance. Then shall we be fully prepared to enjoy the richest blessings of civil and religious freedom. Let it not be said of the citizens of Connecticut, "Curse ye Morez, because he came not up to the help of the Lord against the mighty.'

Roll on the Union Ball till the rebellion is crushed, both root and branch to rise no more. A PRIVATE IN Co. A.

"I've kissed him, and let him go." He's my only boy, and this is my plea:
Pethaps it is foolish and weak,
But mothers, I'm sure, will have pity on me,
and some word will tenderly sieak.
The lighto my home—my tears fall like rain—
Is it wonder I shrink from the blow!
That my heart is crushed by its weight of pain?
But I've kissed him and lef him go.

There are some, I know, who feel a strange pride In giving their country their all,
Who count it a glory that boys from their side In the strife are ready to fall.
But I, sitting here, have no pride in my heart;
(God forgive me that this should be so!)
For the boy that I love the tears will still start,
Yet I've kissed him, and lethin go.

Last night, with soft-steps. I stole to his bed As off in his childhood I'd done: On his pillow I bowed my poor, stricken head Till out of the east rose the sun. His dreams were of me; for he turned in his sleep And nurmered "dear mother," so low! I bit my pale lips lest they'd cowardly speak "O, my darling, I can't let you go!"

This morning I blessed him: I stifled my pain
I bade him be true to his trust:
To stand by the flag till his country again
Should raise its proud head from the dust.
I knew by the light in his beautiful eyes.—
By his long with true. By his face with true courage aglow— He'd fight to the last. I choked back my sighs, While I kissed him and let him go.

But O, sitting here this desolate day, Still there comes no feeling of pride art One knows my need, and to Him will I pra I can trust Him whatever betide. And if he shall fall—(0, faint heart be still!)

I know He will soften the blow.

HIMTHON Fair Haven. Up to Saturday, Aug. 18th, this small village had enlisted 224 men into the service of the Unite States. There are some probably who have gon from there whose names are not included in th above-possibly enough to swell the number to 230. Enlisting is still rapidly progressing.

We learn that the War Committee has determin to pay all citizens of New Haven who enlist for three years, the sum of $100 for bounty, being the sam as that paid to volunteers who have joined the Fifteenth Regiment. This is just and proper, and the nducements thus held out cannot fail to go far to reclude the necessity of a draft.

Damon and Pythias. Manager Jarrett will produce this magnificen ama this evening at Music Hall. The company omprises a great array of histrionic talent, among hom Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Davenport, and M Chas. Barron are bright stars. On former occasion Mr. Davenport has appeared before New Haven au diences, and has acquitted himself to satisfaction.

This heavenly visitor, known to the astronor s the Tuttle comet, is plainly visible in the arcti sky and may be distinguished any clear evening a 1-2 o'clock. It appears as a star of the first mag nitude, situated about seven degrees below and to the northwest of the Polar star. Its brilliancy will increase for a few days and then it will gradually fade from sight again.

Police Affairs. The Police Court room was graced to-day by arge number of the most notorious nymphs d ave that frequent this city, including a newly ar ived importation from Springfield. It appears that Sunday evening the police made escent upon five of the dens of prostitution that disgrace this city, and fourteen females of a char acter and reputation not the most enviable, were scorted to the police station. They were brought p this morning, and bound over for trial.

Presentation. Lieut. W. J. Sherman of the Scranton Guard, 14th egiment, was to-day presented with a regulation word,sash and belt, by Messrs. Bushnell, President nd Hotchkiss of the Board of Trustees of the Shore Line Railroad. His fellow conductors and the em ployees of the road intend furnishing him a uni orm and side arms to be presented soon. We learn that the young men of Madison

Our Troops on the Rapidan,

THE ENEMY BECKIVING REINFORCEMENTS.

On Saturday, a construction train, in charge Major Fifield, went to Rapidan Station, but he enemy being within gunshot of the river in force, it was deemed injudicious to commence operations until the forces of Gen. Pope, then on the march, should arrive to cover the workmen. Major Fifield learning that a quantity of flour was stored within a short distance, sent a force, and secured over one hundred bags of flour marked Confederate States.

We now occupy the line of the Rapidan from Raccoon Ford on the east to Crane's Ford on the care for the wounded. As fast as possible away the very foundations of our great and left, with picket and scouting parties beyond these points. Contrabands from Gordonsville report the con tinuous arrival of troop trains there from Rich mond. Heavy bodies have been sent out right and left of our main body to protect them against flank movements. There was a general advance towards the Rapidan Sunday morning. If the rebels intend to dispute our possession of the Orange Railroad, they will probably endeavor to driv us back. Up to 1 o'clock Sunday afternoon, n news about any fight had reached Culpepper.

A painter without arms, a Mr. Fela, in Be gium, is exciting general admiration by the exellence of his works now at the exhibition of the Brussels Academy. He was born without arms and paints with his feet.

A curious petition was discussed in French Senate last month. A M. Leon Valrey prayed for the restoration of the old "turning poxes." in which women who wanted to get rie of newly-born children might deposit them for nurture in an hospital, without making themselves known. The petition was in verse; in fact, nothing more than an adaptation of an ode which lately obtained a prize at Toulouse. The Senate voted that the petition should be referred to the Minister of Justice and the Minister of

A lover of statistics has, according to the last number of the Theater Archio, counted how often the exclamation "O Heaven!" occurs in Scribe's pieces. In the "Verre d'Eau" he found it twenty-five times; in "La Chaine, thirteen times. Adding up the number in the other comedies, operas, and operettas, he calculated the words by lines, and found that the exclamation "O Heaven" has brought the poet just thirty thousand francs.

HENRY AND CAROLINE

OR FILIAL WORTH REWARDED.

My tale is simple and of humble birth, A tribute of respect to real worth."

"You are too parsimonious, Henry," said Mr. D, to one of his clerks, as they were together in the counting-house, one morning, give me leave to say that you do not dress ufficiently genteel to appear as clerk in a fashionable store." Henry's face was suffused with a deep blush, and, in spite of his endeavors to suppress it, a tear trembled on his mauly cheek. "Did I not know that your salary was sufficient to provide more genteel habiliments," continued

Mr. D—, "I would increase u.
"My salary is sufficient, amply sufficient, choked wi sir," replied Henry, in a voice choked with ful in that?" emotion, but with that proud independence of feeling, which poverty had not been able to divest him of. His employer noticed the agita-tion and immediately changed the subject. Mr. D. was a man of immense wealth, an simple benevolence; he was a widower, and had but one child, a daughter, who was the pride of his declining years. She was not as beautiful as an angel, or as perfect as Venus; but the goodness, the innocence, the intelli-gence of her mind shone in her countenance, and you had but to become acquainted with, to admire, to love her. Such was Caroline Delancy when Henry first became an inmate of her father's house. No wonder that he soon loved her with a deep and devoted affection and, reader, had you known him you would not have wondered that love was soon returned, for their souls were congenial; they were cast in virtue's purest mould-and although their tongues never gave utterance to what their hearts felt, yet the language of their eyes was too plain to be mistaken. Henry was the very soul of honor, and although he perceived wit oleasure that he was not indifferent to Caroline ne still felt that he must conquer the passion that glowed in his bosom. "I must not endeavor to win her young and artless heart,' thought he. "I am pennyless, and cannot expect that her father would ever consent to our Inion-he has ever treated me with kindness, and I will not be ungrafeful." soned, and thus he heroically endeavored to subdue what he considered an ill-fated passion. Caroline had many suitors, and some who were her love," fully worthy of her; but she refused all their overtures with a gentle yet decisive firmness. Her father wondered at her conduct, yet would not thwart her inclination.

He was in the decline of life, and wished see her happily settled ere he quitted the stage of existence. It was not long ere he suspected that young Heary was the cause of her indiffer ence to others; the evident pleasure she took in hearing him praised, the blush that over spread their cheeks whenever their eyes met, all rved to convince the old gentleman, who had not forgotten that he was once young himself, that they felt more than a common interest i each other's welfare. He forbore making any remarks upon the subject, but was not as dis pleased at the supposition as the pennyless Henry would have imagined.

Henry had now been about a year in his em ploy. Mr. Delancy knew nothing of his family but his strict integrity, irreproachable morals his pleasing manners, all conspired to make him wished him to appear in dress, as well robe, for although he dressed with the most scrupulous regard to neatness, his clothes were hink that this proceeded from a niggardly dis position, and he determined to broach the subject, and if possible, ascertain the real cause ; this he did in the manner before related.

Soon after this conversation took place, Mr. D. left home on business. As he was returning and riding through a beautiful little village, he alighted at the door of a cottage and requested drink. The mistress, with an ease and poiteness that convinced him that she had not al ways been the humble cottager, invited him to nter. He accepted her invitation-and here a not, indeed you could not.' scene of poverty and neatness presented itself, such as he had never before witnessed. "This is your father, I presume," said Mr D., addressing the mistress of the house. "It is, sir."

"He seems to be quite aged." "He is in his eighty-third year; he has sur

"Henry W——."
"Henry W——!" reiterated Mr. D— Why, he is my clerk! I left him at my hous not a fortnight since." Here followed a succession of inquiries, which vinced an anxiety and solicitude that only a nother could feel; to all of which Mr. D. re olied to her perfect satisfaction.

"You know our Henry?" said the old man aising his head from his staff; "well, sir, ther you know as worthy a lad as ever lived; God will bless him. He will bless him for his good ness to his poor old grandfather," he added in a remulous voice, while the tears run down hi

"He is a worthy fellow, to be sure," said Mr D., rising and placing a well filled purse into the hands of the old man; "He is a worthy fellow, nd shall not want friends."

"Henry," said he, as he entered the counting house, "you expect to visit the country shortly, do you?"
"Yes sir," in about four weeks."

"If it would not be too inconvenient," re joined Mr. D., "I should like to have you defer it a week or two longer."

"It will be no inconvenience, sir," and if it

"It will most certainly oblige me, for Caro line is to be married in about five weeks, and I would not miss of having you attend the wed-

"But you said it would put you to no incon enience, and that you would wait with plea "Command me in any thing else, sir, but in this respect I cannot oblige you," said Henry, rising and walking the floor with rapid strides. Poor fellow, he had thought his passion sublued; but when he found that Caroline was so soon so irrevocably to become another's, the latent spark burst forth into an unextinguishable flame; and he found it in vain to endeavor to conceal his emotion. The old gentleman regarded him with a look of earnestness—"Henry," said he, "tell me frankly—do you love my girl?" "I will be candid with you, sir,"

Henry, conscious that his agitation had betrayed him, "had I a fortune such as she merits, and as you, sir, have a right to expect, I should think myself the happiest of men, could I gain "Then she is yours," cried the delighted old man, "say not a word about property, my

The transition from despair to happiness was great. For a moraent Henry remained si was great. For a mornent Henry remained silent; but his looks spoke volumes. At last,—"I scorn to deceive you, sir," said he, "I am poorer than what you suppose. I have a mother and grandfather who ere—."

"I know it, I know it all, Henry," said Mr. D. interrupting him, "I know the reason of your parsimony, as I called it, and I honor you for it; it was that which first put it into my head to give you Caroline—so she shall be yours, and may God bless you both!"

Shortly after this conversation. Henry avowed his love to Caroline, and solicited her hand. and it is needless to say he did not solicit in vain. Caroline would have deferred their union esteem him highly. He was proud of Henry, and exorable. He supposed he should have to as in own one falsehood, he said, and they would manners, as respectable as any one. He had often wondered at the scantiness of his wardendure it; he had told Henry that she was going to be married in five weeks, and he should almost thread-bare. Mr. D. did not wish to not forfeit his word. "But perhaps," added he apparently recollecting himself, and turning to Henry, "perhaps we shall have to defer it after all; for you have important business in the country about that time. "Be merciful, sir," said Henry, smiling, "I

NEW YORK, Aug. 18, 1862. The steamers North Star and Roanoke, from New Orleans the 10th, have arrived, bringing particulars of the defeat of the rebels at Baton Rouge, and the destruction of the Arkansas. A letter from Baton Rouge says Nim's battery thrice repulsed the foe, and did them great
