NOTES...FROM THE LIBRARY

On the 23rd we'll be showing MARS: THE SEARCH BEGINS. The film gives a fascinating rundown on the beginnings of the search for information about the planet Mars. Made in 1972 before the latest explorations but excellent basic information on all that was known about Mars up to that date. The movie is solid and informative and should be interesting. Come check it out on Friday at 6:15 p.m. in the classroom area.

Tenemos dos libros nuevos: FLASH LOS CAMINOS DE LA DROGA no es solamente un testimonio sobre las drogas pero una maravillosa novela de aventuras. Si desean aprender mas del presidente, ahora tenemos el libro JIMMY CARTER en la biblioteca.

UNMASKING a CONSPIRACY
AGAINST the NEWBORN

Who would have guessed that from the moment of birth infants are often deprived of their right to emotional maturity. Here is how it happens- and what must be done about it.

From the very beginning of life most infants in the Western world face a virtual conspiracy against emotional maturity.

The newborn infant usually is taken from its anesthetized mother, washed, and weighed. After a few brief minutes with mother, the infant is placed in a crib in the nursery, where it spends most of the first few days of life-alone.

Yet it is in these first critical minutes and hours of life that we form our initial emotional attachment to another human being. The crucial importance of close contact between the mother and her child right after birth has been prevented or denied for more than a generation.

Doctors, nurses and psychologists are only now becoming aware of this tragedy.

WHAT REAL-LIFE EXPERIENCES REVEAL:

When mothers in hospitals (whatever happened to the home births?) are allowed direct skin-to-skin contact with their newborn children, they respond to this early, intimate contact with their babies differently from mothers denied such needed contact. A remarkable study reported "they held their babies face to face, talked to, fondled, kissed, caressed, and smiled at them more than the other mothers."

Not surprisingly, "babies of early contact mothers gained more weight, cried less, and smiled and laughed more than the other infants." It was also found that premature babies, who are separated from their mothers for long periods after birth, are more likely to be abused than full term babies (Psychology Today, "The First Day of Life," December, 1977).

In our "enlightened" modern society where only 20 percent of mothers experience natural childbirth, babies generally are taken from their mothers just at the time when they most desperately need to be together. Both mother and child suffer from this early hinderance to emotional bonding through touching.

And yet, this early separation of mother and child is only the beginning of a pattern that carries on into later life.

In many families, parents allowe their children to mature without those all-important physical expressions of life-the warm hugs and caresses that show them they are appreciated and cared for. There are families in which embracing is habitually withheld except in cases of prolonged absence or family tragedy. There exist families whose children rarely if ever seen their parents embrace each other or show physical affection.

Children of such families grow up feeling insecure, inhibited, afraid of being hurt, and therefore afraid of seeking intimacy with others. They may have a hard time in their dating and marriage relationships. They may feel cold and emotionally flat, without knowing why. Later, as parents, they will have hangups about expressing love to their own offspring.

This is not to say that there is no love in such nontouching families-the love is there, usually, but it seems somehow stunted, repressed or hidden.

(However, hidden love is not much better than no love at all).

Humans who are deprived in infancy and childhood suffer drastically from it. From surveys of prisoners and of 49 different primitive cultures it has been concluded that deprivation of physical affection "is the principal overriding factor...in the development of alienation, psychopathy, violence and aggression, and...drug abuse and alcoholism, (Behavior Today, May 15, 1978).

The study is frightening: by depriving infants and children of physical love

parents may, in a sense, produce warped adults who are unable to relate to others-or who are even predisposed to violent or criminal behavior! Lack of love and affection in the earliest years have long range negative effects. Perhaps you yourself come from a family background that was cold, unemotional, and lacking in displays of physical affection. Perhaps you were ignored or even abused as a young child. As a result, you may find in yourself certain fears or inhibitions that you have found it difficult to overcome.

So, remember, mothers-and fathers-by cuddling, embracing and loving your baby or toddler, you are giving him or her the foundation that you may have lacked-the knowledge that he or she is loved, accepted, secure. You can give your children inner resources that will make them more confident, more properly assertive, more affectionate and outgoing as adults. Don't be afraid to add the human touch to the life of an infant-and see the joy that flows from one simple act.

BLACK WOMAN: I SAY BLACK WOMAN

Black Woman: I say Black Woman have you ever dug a question while answering another?

I've been running a few things thru my mind and the answer remains the same, never.

Dig Black Woman all the two-timers, give-uppers and even those woman possessors,

I've got a lasting philosophy that enables you Black Woman to look through them like cellophane paper, to see their not what they profess.

Like how can they stand the B.S. they be putting down, don't they realize, Black Woman, you're the best.

One has to believe Black Woman that the value of true beauty is possessed by you; and yet they abuse you.

Yes, Black Woman, this is a subject that has been long procrastinated. So it is time we rid our blackness of this bacteria with some stomp down action.

Black Woman: I say Black Woman, they have tried to steal your true identity, dealing with your youngness with cosmetics; blinding your heredity with falsehood.

Black Woman, where is your Black Man?

Lady of Color, you got those who abuse you by putting you on 42nd street, yes, the Big Apple.

Which is an insult that deframes your essence, but above all, they degrade the producer of Black Creation.

You're the Goddess and Queen of our race.

Which I should die for that purpose alone if someone was to treat you less.

Reality met me face to face, and I dug not only you being Queen of my people, but myself in retrospect, and must say here today. I have revamped my whole concept of you.

Black Woman: I say Black Woman, people talk about the wonders of the world, and the treasures it contains.

All things to be evil, is to be dark or black.

The only evilness that lies in that Ebony skin of yours, is when one doesn't grasp the significance of you.

Only a true Black Man can give what a True Black Woman needs.

Black Woman, I'm a true Black Man that's deeply in love with you.

This love is not to be mistaken sexually; but pure need of your understanding and soothing words.

You Black Woman, are more than life, food, You are my purpose for existing.

The desire to want to excel in this life, but most of all, to come together as a community: Man, Woman, and Child.

Realize Black Woman, our world must be, a black world, our religion, must be blackness.

If for some reason, it can't include the above; then its irrelevant to your meaning. Our meaning, or even our existence.

You are my Black Woman, and just as you are earthy,
so are you infinite.

You have endured; survived and sustained your blackness; and the depth:
Is to your black-self.

Black Woman: I say Black Woman, have you ever dug a question while answering another?????????????

COMPENSATION

MISAPPREHENSION

Because I had loved so deeply.
Because I had loved so long,
God in His great compassion
Gave me the gift of song.

Because I had loved so vainly,
And sung with such faltering breath,
The Master in infinite mercy
Offers the boom of death.

Out of my heart, one day, I wrote a song, With my heart's blood imbued, Instinct with passion, tremulously strong, with grief subdued; Breathing a fortitude Pain-bought.
And one who claimed much love for what I wrote, Read and considered it, And spoke;
"Aye brother-'t is well writ,
But where's the joke"?

Both poems written by: Paul Lawrence Dunbar;

THE REAL DEAL

Life can be one hell of a trip, if you really don't know the deal
It dictates much of what you think, and even how you feel.....

Head games for mostly one and all
A test of strength in-deed.....

Just like that match that burned your hand
If you're cut, you're gonn-a bleed.....

So in your quest for what you seek Take care in how you choose-----

In the "Real Deal" That lets you win or lose.....

because its your choice

"MIND CONTROL" IS PERILOUS NEW FRONTIER FOR SCIENCE
LIFE MANIPULATION

By David Lygre

We have many ways to control the behavior of others - brute force, threats, advertisements, laws, political propaganda, social approval or disapproval. And now our advancing technology suggests another tool: direct manipulation of the brain.

We might imagine, for example, a ruthless dictator who uses electrical stimulation of the brain (ESB) by remote control to keep his subjects passive; at the same time, he commands a loyal force of soldiers who become aggressive whenever he pushes the right button.

Indeed, Jose Delgado of Yale University has shown that ESB can produce passive or aggressive behavior in animals, and its effects can apply to rulers as well as their subjects. In one experiment, for example, a monkey dictator with implanted electrodes became apathetic whenever he was stimulated by the push of a lever. When the other monkeys in his colony discovered the lever and its effect, their ruler experienced a unique power failure.

A greater problem is deciding when we should use these methods to try controlling human behavior. Beginning in the 1960's psychotherapy has been used therapeutically on people who consistently show uncontrollable and violent behavior. Keiji Sano, a neurosurgeon at the University of Tokyo, reported that 46 of 56 patients (many of them children) with intractable epilepsy plus mental retardation, hyperactivity, and violent behavior became more tranquil after psychosurgery.

Where do we draw the line in using ESB and psychosurgery to curb unacceptable behavior? The answer is not to ban them completely, for someday they may help people with mental disorders return to the mainstream of human life. But we need medical guidelines specifying that we will use these techniques only when drugs and other types of therapy have failed, the brain is seriously abnormal (especially where there is organic damage), and there is a reasonable basis for thinking the operation might help.

Would we ever try to control behavior to that extent? We certainly are not shy about using other methods, such as conditioning techniques, to instill specific values in our children and teach them to behave in socially acceptable ways.

The crucial question, however, is not whether we can control people's behavior - the answer to that question clearly is yes - but whether it is right to do so, whatever the method.

If we are to progress as a humane society, we need the rebels to aggravate us, question our motives, and dispute our assumptions and judgements. Even more important, though, as human beings we each deserve the freedom to think and act within the broadest limits society can tolerate. That may make it harder to maintain order. But a highly ordered society is a poor bargain if the price of admission is our humanity.

Our growing technology for manipulating the brain has the potential both to enhance and to threaten our status as free, rational, and moral beings. Some people may regard mind-manipulating techniques as a way to discover themselves and find meaning in life. The most popular method is drugs, but more sophisticated techniques are on the way.

There is no adequate substitute for the experience of personal exploration, discovery, and growth.

That is what gives life so much of its savor - the chance and challenge to do it ourselves, with our own abilities, striving for our best. When we consider techniques for modifying the brain, we must judge whether they help a person to discover and develop his own ideas, interests, and abilities, and forge positive, genuine relationships with others. For that is the voyage that makes human life worthwhile.

"MY EBONY WOMAN"

It is the mystical power of love that have color my soul with desire to portray my sincere and most devoted thoughts to you. Not really knowing you "Ebony Woman" is my handicap, I do not know of your thoughts, desire and dreams in which leaves me unable to function as a man in all aspects. However Ebony Woman, I am quite conscious of the substantial fact that what happen to the black woman over four hundred years ago still bears a scar in your mind. I also know that you "Ebony Woman" behold many mysteries yet to be conquer.

I intend to up lift fear, misery and lack of understanding from your awaiting spirit and with love I will knock down the major obstacles that have in the past refused us of the happiness and peace of mind that was intended for us in life. Please Ebony Woman, let my heart tell you of this great thing I speak of. No longer will you shed tears in vain or be apprehended by loneliness, bitterness and brutality nor defeated by the wall of poverty. Let me reach out and touch your black soul, heart and give you a priceless gift.

Each night appears to be endless and my thoughts the very same, us together is always my topic, what do your thoughts contain at night? me or him? Let's make love months from now, let's make love now with our minds. Do you really believe that you understand me or are you just pretending so to protect your emotions in fear of being mentally hurt. If love do not exist then I am only a illusion in your mind. Tell me, do dreams ever become a part of reality? or do reality ever become a part of dreams?

Do the birds actually sing a love song or tune in the spring time. Do you hear my lonely heart saying it wants to be a part of your life always. Sometimes I am left confused about you but I always seek for understanding life for me. Ebony Woman, I am a Ebony Man looking for our lost souls that's hidden somewhere in darkness, somewhere in the darkness we will find ourselves and then no longer will our souls be in darkness.

"SALON"

Un pájaro de papel
una pluma encarnada,
y una furia de seda,
y una paloma blanca.

Todo un ramo de mirtos
o de sombras coloreadas,
un mármol con latidos,
y un amor que se avanza.

Un vaivén obsequioso
de momentos o pausas, un salón de Walkyrias
o de demas desmayadas.

Una música o nardo,
o unas telas de arañas,
un jarrón de cansancios
y de polvos o nacar.

Todo dulce y dolido,
todo de carne blanca,
amarillez y ojera,
y pábilo, y estancia.

Amor, Miradas,
sonrisas como alambres
donde la cera canta;

Pájaros, caja, música,
mangas, vuelos y danza,
con los pechos sonando
bajo las llamas pálidas.

Cinturas o saliva,
hilos de finas platas,
besos por los dorados
limones que colgaban.

Tú, calor que ascendiendo
chocas carnes de lata, pones besos o líquenes
por humedades bajas.

Llevas vientres o conchas
o perezosas barcas,
y axilas como rosas
sueltas de madrugadas,

Misterios de mejillas
a la deriva amadas,
y oídos, y cabello,
desmayos, voces bajas.

Golfo ancho detenido junto a la orilla baja, salón de musgo y luna
donde el amor es alga, donde los trajes húmedos son piel que no se arranca cuando entre polka y brisa despunta, lacia, el alba..

De un teléfono cercano, llama a un cerrajero para que abra la puerta.

Hijita — dice la madre que está planchando — Tú crees en la liberación femenina?
Por supuesto, mamá — responde la hija.

Oh, que alivio — suspira la madre.

Porqué, mamá — pregunta intrigada la hija.

Es que acabo de quemar tu sés-tén — contestó la buena señora.

La sabiduría de la justicia China Imperial ha sido siempre legendaria, se castigaba el adulterio en forma especial: La primera vez que una esposa era infiel, se castigaba al amante por haberse aprovechado de la inocencia de la dama. La segunda vez que esto sucedía, se azotaba a la pecadora; y la tercera vez, se ponía preso al esposo, por bruto.

Adular para reinar, es la práctica de los cortesanos de todos los despotismos y de los bufones de todos los tiranos. — Ariel

Un hijo le pregunta a su padre, en el día de su boda.

Papá, que consejo me das sobre el matrimonio?

Hijo mío, — responde el padre — nunca hables de tu mujer con tus amigos y mucho menos de tus amigos con tu mujer.

Estoy aburrida y cansada de todo — dice una dama en su casa — la escasez de gasolina, de azúcar, de arroz, la vida está tan cara, hay secuestros, hay crímenes . . . Oh Dios, quiero oír aunque sea una buena noticia.

Mamá — dice su hijito de nueve años — mañana es mi cumpleaños.

En un bar, hay un señor pasado de copas, entran dos gemelos idénticos; el borrachito, pone cara de asustado.

No te asuste señor — dice uno de los jóvenes — somos gemelos.

Los cuatros? — pregunta el borrachito.

VANISHING POINT 5-24-80

VANISHING POINT (1971)

Producer: Norman Spencer
Director: Richard Sarafian
Cast: Barry Newman, Cleavon Little, Victoria Medlin, Dean Jagger

99 min: (C) $125 PG

"Vanishing Point offers more on-the-road thrills and excitement than any American film since Easy Rider... if you like car chases, you'll love Vanishing Point." — Joseph Gelmis Newsday

The chase film has become an established genre in its own right and few do better justice to it than this one. Barry Newman is cast as an indomitable individualist making a living by driving customer's cars from one city to another on impossible schedules. He is an ex-cop who left the force after attacking a fellow officer, an ex-racing car champ who quit because of a terrible accident, and a former Vietnam hero. One day he casually bets he can deliver a turbocharged sedan to San Francisco from Denver in an unbelievable 15-hours. His trek quickly draws considerable attention, including a play-by-play progress report from soul disc-jockey, Cleavon Little. Crash after crash fill the screen as Newman keeps on the move to keep the appointment with an explosive destiny.

CITY ON FIRE (Avco Embassy)

5-26-80

MPAA: R/106 min./Sus-D

Review date: 10-8-79 Boxoffice rating: Fair

Some young boys are experimenting with cigarettes and accidentally ignite a grass fire, which spreads rapidly. Firefighters under Chief Albert Risley (Henry Fonda) rush to the area. In the meantime, Herman Stover (Jonathan Welsh) is passed over for promotion to foreman at the refinery. When he decides that no one is interested in him, he starts to sabotage the plant. He unscrews a gas pump generator, then breaks off the handle of the main power breaker switch. Gasoline leakage from the refinery runs into the sewers. TV newswoman Maggie Grayson (Ava Gardner) covers the initial fire. Wealthy socialite Diana Brockhurst-Lautrec (Susan Clark) and Mayor William Dudley (Leslie Nielsen) arrive to dedicate a hospital, where Dr. Frank Whitman (Barry Newman) and nurse Andrea Harper (Shelley Winters) work. Suddenly one explosion at the refinery leads to another one, triggering off fires from live wires and flying debris throughout the city. The hospital is caught in the middle of the conflagration. Firefighters, police and ambulance units spring into action. National Guardsmen arrive to help evacuate people. Grayson, who is an alcoholic, is encouraged by co-worker Jimbo (James Franciscus) to prepare her newscast for national television. Brockhurst-Lautrec helps victims. Stover tries unsuccessfully to renew an old relationship with her. Stover and Harper are killed. The others survive. The fire is brought under control.
