"ANOTHER NEW EDITOR!"

Here we go again! They say a new broom sweeps clean, well that remains to be seen. It appears there has been one problem after another of late, but I am confident that I have the full cooperation of the entire Staff. So hopefully we can start anew and bring a more interesting publication each week. Of course the highest quality and integrity will be maintained, the change will be in diversity. The goal we are striving for is to bring something of interest to the entire population. Having just accepted this position this past Wednesday, we have already kicked around several new ideas, but we need YOU. This is your paper, your articles, poems, stories, cartoons and ideas are what we need to maintain your interest. Help us to put out the best Weekly Scene ever. This desk is always open; all ideas and suggestions can be dropped in the Weekly Scene Box in the main corridor. From this day forth there will be a daily pick-up. So lets hear something from everyone.

RECYCLE THAT CAR

From June '73 Book
Magazine

It's difficult to talk about cars with the interest or even enthusiasm that was once common among men (and, yes, women). We all recognize that pollution is a problem, and that some better forms of transportation should be developed. However, at present, most of us are driving cars, and most people seem to have new models; if we are interested, really, in eco-systems, it would seem that we should 1) want to keep our cars in top condition to minimize exhaust pollutants, and 2) keep them running for as long as possible.

I'm always amazed how we use up things, especially new cars, which represent a big investment of time, labor, money, materials. We wear out a new car in two or three years, while in some countries the backseat would last a thousand years. I personally enjoy older cars, and I feel that ecology has something to do with making things last-that's only part of the bigger picture, of course, but it's the part that each of us can control.

I suspect that one reason people keep buying new cars is because it's difficult to get anyone to make satisfactory repairs, at a fair price, on their failing auto. For the past fifteen years I've had my car in various garages only a few times, but every time (with one exception) I've come away feeling that a lousy job was done for too much money. Therefore, I stay away from garages and do my own repairs; it's cheaper in the long run to make my own mistakes, and every time I learn something which makes the next job easier.

Whether you're interested in tinkering with your new car, or rebuilding an old one-to drive or as an investment-or if you just want to understand your car in order to avoid garage rip-offs, there are some excellent books to help you.

The oldest auto repair publications are also the most comprehensive: Audel's, Dyke's, Motor's, Chilton's, and later, Glenn's and Coker's Auto Repair Manuals. Dyke's, I believe, is out of print, but the others are in print and current. All are very useful; they contain certain basic materials--trouble-shooting, practical mechanics, etc.-and then focus on specifics. The information deals with the current model and year, and is then up-dated, so it's possible to get what you need to know about your own car, and also get a survey of auto-memorabilia. I remember learning to drive with a Chilton's Manual on my lap-it contained driving instructions which had been printed years before, and kept referring to the spark and throttle levers, which of course had gone out of use about twenty years earlier. That section has no doubt been updated.

If you have a newer car, you'll want to get Motor's Auto Repair Manual (Motor, 250 W. 55th St., NYC 10019); the thirty-fifth edition covers all makes of American cars from 1966-72. I should emphasize that while this book is written for professional mechanics, the writing and the layout are so clear anyone should be able to use it. Section one covers general service information, section two focuses on specific information by make and model, section three has tune-up data on cars from 1946-65; this kind of organization, plus the cross-references, headings, diagrams and photos make a complex subject very clear.

This is a big book (1065 pages) and worth its price ($20); however, since it's available in most libraries it might be more economical to read/xerox what you need.

Another good reference book is Chilton's Auto Repair Manual, which is similar in content to Motor's. This however focuses on cars of a particular year, and is priced lower ($10). To indicate the usefulness of the Chilton's Manual and the growing interest in old cars, some reprints have been issued. One covers all popular American cars made between 1940-1953, and another those between 1954-1963; these manuals contain information that's difficult to get elsewhere, and they are not reprinted for sake of nostalgia. They're big books-750 pages, with some 500 illustrations- and cost about $15 each. Another reprint is Chilton's 1931 Auto Repair Guide, which covers every American car and truck made in 1931, as well as data on cars from 1913-1930. This one is 400 pages, and sells for $4.50.

WHAT SHOULD BE THE GOALS OF OFFENDER POSTSECONDARY EDUCATION?

In Answer To NEW GATE HIGHLIGHTS, HACKENSACK, N. J. by Phil Hoxie

To answer your four (4) proposed questions, I can only do it as an individual, lacking any administration or educational authority or formal wisdom, I can express only my point of view and only in a nonauthoritative capacity.

Question 1: What do you mean by "postsecondary education?"

Answer: The furthing of an individuals education (learning) in anyway of his choosing, that will be productive in helping him to conform to the norms of our society. This should include various programs as well as the increasing of his formal education.

Question 2: What should be the goals of an offender postsecondary education program?

Answer: That which will profit the individual in his quest for becoming a productive and accepted citizen. Any program of formal education that will be advantageous to the offender in helping him to better understand himself, his community - in the free society, and the other individuals he meets in his everyday life.

Question 3: What elements would be most important in assuring that the program reach its stated goal?

Answer: Amore intensified public relations program. Educating the public to the fact that those incarcerated are human beings and not animals, that the offender is actually their next door neighbor. A more intensified counseling program for the individual in any and all areas where he has a problem. A program where a greater family relations could be established, increasing the family harmony, thus returning to the individual some of his lost dignity. Programs geared around vocation; realistic on-the-job-training, and apprenticeships that will enable the individual to earn his way in the free society. The opportunity to carry his formal education on through to a Degree if this is his need and desire. These programs should all be designed for the individual, giving him a chance to identify with success, that he may feel and know his accomplishments. This in turn would give a feeling of self-fulfillment, this would decrease his inferiority complexes giving him the necessary equipment to cope realistically with the complexities of our greater society. It is my belief that after the individual has had several successes and is ready to cope with society, not as he did before, but in an enlightened way, he should not be subjected from the environment of incarceration to the free society, in one huge step. In its place should be a series of programs, each complimentary to the other, which will enable the individual to re-enter society gradually. This way when the transformation is completed it will not come as a shock and the things learned will be easily applied to the new way of life.

Question 4: In terms of geographic area what do you perceive to be the major and realistic obstacles to the development and success of the program you would design?

Answer: The greatest obstacle appears to be public opinion. In that, why should an offender be given more opportunities than those who abide by the law? Also because of the indifference which is displayed by all bureaucracies, the offenders individualism is lost, he is given little if any chance for success and continues to identify with failure. The isolation of many of the institutions makes many lucrative programs difficult if not virtually impossible. This is why I believe community based programs are so important. Effort on the part of those who are in secondary positions, those who are in daily contact with the individual. For the most part, if an effort would be afforded the individual offender and his needs, instead of that of self-improvement or advancement of those in these positions, they could instill upon the offender the motivation that would help the individual to help himself. One of the greatest factors lacking in most offenders, that which helped him to become incarcerated, is the lack of motivation. THE MOTIVATION OF SELF-IMPROVEMENT! This I believe is the

THE INSIDER, C.C.I. NEW HAVEN, CONN. - Go Get-um Russ! Your article on the Gas Shortage certainly has the situation in the proper perspective. Isn't this what the youths and the young adults are rebelling about? The monopolies and the materialistic values of monetary things have got to start taking second place. The individual, the right to his individualism, is what the change in our society is all about. The problem, those inpower refuse to recognize the requirements of our changing society. By denying the "little guy" and curtaining individualism the hierarchy is forcing the social change for identity to be much slower. Word has come to me in the form of a question; does your Roving Reporter still carry a Tape Recorder?. What is meant by this?

ANGOLITE STATE PRISON ANGOLA LOUISIANA - enjoyed Miller's Column immensely, our problems are not nearly as pronounced as yours, but the complaints are similar. Our Educational Department, although still quite inadequate, is far more advanced than several of the others through-out the country. The recognized need of educational and vocational training has become a primary factor here. Beginning last October, The Literacy Volunteer Program was introduced and began here, the program is working. It is, qualified inmates, working with illiterate and semiliterate inmates, on a one to one basis, bringing them up to a fifth grade reading level. More information, I am sure, can be obtained from the home office, address your letters to; Helen B. Crouch, President, Literacy Volunteers of America, Inc., 222 Onondaga Street, Syracuse, N.Y. 13202. It is worth looking into, especially for those of you who have little or nothing, it could be a beginning. We found your whole publication most interesting, just wish space allowed us to comment on each article. Because it don't, let me say, You've got it all together!

THE TIER TRIBUNE, C.C.I. BROOKLYN, CONN. - liked your By-Line on the bottom of cover page. Question? How can we both have that distinction? The plaques we have say, We are "First Place" for those years.

Best Wishes and Good Luck To All,

greatest individual obstacle, that which must be overcome. The individual must be made aware of his short comings and problems, then given the motivation which will lead him to those programs which are available and will benefit him in changing his previous role, into the acceptable role ones needs in order to participate within the guidelines of our society.

In this short analogy, my only hope is that all or any small part may be used, if only in concept to help those who are incarcerated. I firmly believe that anything that can be used to reduce the recidivism rate of those incarcerated offenders should be explored to its fullest depths.

TAKE BACK YOUR CONVICTS

I employ over eleven hundred men, and there is not an ex-convict among them. There isn't going to be an ex-convict among them. I do not care if a man was unjustly imprisoned and if his sponsor comes to me with proof of it. Whatever his story, I do not want him.

My "hard boiled" stand is, I hope, constructive. I am no more lacking in feelings than those who extend their sympathy which does the ex-convict no particular good. I merely look at a public problem from a different angle; I bar the ex-convict because when a penitentiary gets through with a man, innocent or guilty he is unfit to hold his place in industry with the men I've hired from the world of free workers.

I have visited penitentiaries behind the grim, grey walls. I have seen human lives timed to a brutalizing routine; I have seen men jammed together in badly ventilated cell blocks. I have smelled the smells to which they are constantly exposed, seen the unbelievable crude sanitary systems in operation and talked with prison wardens about the ever-pressing problem of finding sufficient work to keep their charges constructively employed during the day and decently tired at night. Talk about your problems of "made" work in the world outside and its effect upon the men who do it; have you ever considered the many useless, wearying, depressing jobs by which nothing is accomplished? Jobs to which a man can bring no spark of interest? The men who face the grim problem of controlling many crowded, desperate men, cannot afford to think in terms of "redeeming human values". To avoid outbreaks they must enforce a discipline carefully pointed at bringing the human brute into subjection. Not every man who enters prison is a brute, but everyone pays the penalty of association with brutes. The big men in convict thought are the men serving the longest sentences, the men who have committed the most serious crimes. A new prisoner's philosophy, his ideas of life, and his conversation about even the most trivial affairs become colored by the viewpoint of the underworld, the world that thinks in terms of preying rather than producing.

I don't care if an ex-convict has paid his debt to society. He has spent a certain number of years in the packed, unhealthy, plotting atmosphere of the pen. I owe too much to the workmen I already have in my plant. He won't do!

He has had the initiative ground out of him. He has lost the sense of pride in productive work. His mind is teeming with ideas that he may not have accepted fully, but that he cannot purge from the brain that was forced too long to live upon them, for lack of other nourishment. He has been trained in intrigue and to conspire for even the simple things that other men take for granted: tobacco, reading matter, a few extra minutes of conversation.

The argument piles up indefinitely, a sordid array of sorry facts. I do not even bother to present them to the average ex-convict. As he stands, he does not belong in a plant like mine; but no end is served by me telling him so. I address my challenge to my state and to the nation: KEEP YOUR CONVICTS OR MAKE CITIZENS OF THEM.

If the end of prison is punishment and the means of punishment is calculated to rob the men of initiative, pride, decency and self-respect - then let the state find a use for the human junk that is left. Don't ask industry to do it.

No man should serve his sentence and then step out into the world. There should be a period of preparation. If society's debt must be paid to the hilt, then add a year of rehabilitation. During that year, let the convict put the dull, demoralizing routine of penitentiary life behind him. Let him become accustomed to wearing the clothes of the free world again. I would slip him away from the prison that had witnessed his shame and the comrades who had shared it. I would give him work to do that he could take pride in doing and I would give him a free man's reward for that work.

I would let him become accustomed to earning money before money becomes his necessity. I would teach him to save that money and pay his bills. He would have a pay envelope every Saturday night and he would be submitted weekly bills for board, lodging and incidentals...

"If you businessmen do not provide honest work for these men, they will be driven back in spite of themselves to a life of crime."

I hear that too often. It puts the responsibility on me, where it does not belong. I know that he may be driven back to crime, but if the state has prepared him for nothing else, the problem is too big for me to handle.

As a taxpayer, I contribute to the support of every convict in the state and nation. They have to live and I do not begrudge my share, but I would like to pay a little more - if it would cost any more to provide each of these men with a year of training, not in the manual arts of breadwork, but in the theory and practice of being a good citizen. Let us make citizens of them.----- VIX PENAL PRESS.

(The article you have just finished reading was reprinted from "ABOUT FACE" it was written by a U.S. businessman and addressed to penitentiaries everywhere.)

The Root of the Matter.....by Daryl Sanders

I'm always reminded of the 79 year old man who turned 80, a reporter asked him how was it to be 80 now, and the old gentleman replied, "Considering the alternatives, its fine."

Even if one could go back in time and age, to what age would they return? Certainly not as a teenager because youngsters now have many major issues to contend with, the question of war and peace, international diplomacy, the devaluation of the dollar, and the unnecessary task of surviving the generation that preceded them. They have to grow up with some level of hope despite the gut knowledge that almost everybody is lying to them, they have to make decisions based on what they know is misinformation.

I think that one should grow old gracefully, each stage has its beauty and fills its own needs, if you don't go through it when you should, you will definitely go through it when you will.

Anybody who says that times were better is deluding himself, the only better times are in our minds, life is HARD--the question is, is it "fair". I don't think "just" is a good word to describe life because to be "just" one must weight sides. There's a song that says, "Lord, don't move the mountain, just give me strenght to climb", that's not just, but its fair.

Most of us are afraid, not of the other person but of ourselves, most of us are borderline crazy, although sane enough to recognize it, most of us are poor and can't make ends meet but are ashamed to admit it, most of us are bored out of our skins and don't know what to do--neither do I but I know that we must try something, we must find a way to nourish our young and protect our old and get a little love and give some.

Don't regret the invention of the Radio and Television, just regret that we aren't using them adequately for a shared experience. Leisure is not a problem today, meaningful employment is, and the most meaningful employment is always with people.

But people are vicious and they hurt, and the more you do , the more they try to hurt you, because if your life is meaningful and theirs is meaningless, then its a comment on their lives.

People should care less about getting old and more about getting better. We all need a wall against loneliness, which should not be a wall of silence and indifference but one of strenght and deeds. A lot of people, maybe even most, will be born and will die having never really enjoyed anything, there isn't anything that says we all have to be like that-- We must find a way to get and give love, regardless of what stage of life it is in, this truly is the root of the matter.

CHAIRMAN'S MESSAGE

As we move into the next half of our calender year we are faced with many problems that can and will be corrected. It will take a maximum effort from all members and officers but by working collectively---

" IT CAN AND WILL BE DONE !"

In the past, we have shown to all -- who have a sincere interest in us, that we are able to achieve that which we have set out to accomplish as a Group! We must learn to work together as a Group, towards gaining self-respect, pride and the dignity that comes only through sobriety.

It is my privilege and honor to offer a "Sincere" well done to the officers that myself and fellow officers replaced. It is our promise to help and direct the Group in a positive direction, so that all of us may obtain our goal, ---SOBRIETY!

Patrick A. Paluga

Chairman - Today's A.A. Group

The proof of the sincerity of the Today's A.A. Group, can be seen just by attending a meeting. The Group has come around full circle; we join A. A. to attempt to better ourselves, as we progress, and achieve more understanding, humility and compassion, the Group as a whole improves, as it to one of Unity. As we learn to respect ourselves, those around us see it and inturn offer us respect. The hand of fellowship is offered in A. A. won't you accept it?

And your future

And your secrets
Ready for telling

Come to me
When the night and day
Don't matter
When your thoughts
Are ready
To be harvested
When you can follow
Any river
That calls you
When no goal
Seems too far away
And no tear
Seems too sad
When nothing keeps your interest
From wandering free
And I with my hand
Will greet you
And say "I've been Waiting so long"
And I'll give you the keys
To my empty heart;
And together
We'll walk along.

Walk your crooked smile
Why love did you leave me?

And departed are you aware that

Walk your crooked smile the rent

Poet Corner

As an outsider it is impossible for me to speak of the truth. But, then what is the truth? We can look it up in a dictionary and get many glamorous meanings, aside from its principle meaning; "that which is fact, what is a reality." I have heard, over heard, and been told so many different truths over the past several weeks, I can only arrive at my own conclusions. Keep in mind that in the vast collection of stories I have heard, each perpetrator, in his own mind has spoken the truth. So in purely a philosophical sense, aside from reality and fact, truth is as one sees a thing or believes. As my eyes and ears have seen and heard over the past several weeks, the only thing that has been transpiring in the C.C.I.S. Jaycees Inc., (INCORPERATED! Thats another story for a later date.) has been dissonance, phthistic and ridiculous power struggle that has accomplished nothing but disunity and anomosities between all factions. Being one of the "Old Men" of the Jaycees, who was very active during its original inception, a time from birth to maturity, a time when the only thing in mind was the betterment of our COMMUNITY, and because I was one of the originals I can't help but have that parental feeling for the Chapter, and it irks me immensely to watch its degradation. During the first years everyone worked for a common goal, many community changes and good things came from the effort. Lets now hope with a Special Election the smoke will clear, and instead of a "better than thou" attitude, the efforts will be placed on the betterment of the Chapter, which in turn will be for a better community in which we live.

Special Election? This was suppose to have eventuated last Friday evening. The disinterest has reached such a pinnacle that because of lack of quorum the Chapter remains inoperable. The Chapters membership is at such a "LOW" that it only took twenty-five to make a quorum, of this small number only thirteen were interested enough to show up for the Special Election. If they have this little interest, and are unable to help themselves, how, and I ask in all humility, can they help our Community?

The first rule of life is; you only get out of it what you put into it. It is obvious there has been little, if anything, put into the Jaycees these past several months. I for one hope all their, both huge and petty, problems are soon resolved, and they have enough initiative to come out of their dormat stage and begin once again to show some life. I don't believe the present disinterest can be completely dissolved by the present membership. As I see it, it is going to take a lot of new blood. This is directed especially to the new men entering the institution, perhaps this is something for them to look into, out with the old, rebuild with the new. Think about it all you non-Jaycee members, a good way to occupy your minds, at the same time you will be helping yourself as well as helping your community.

In just a few words, the Jaycees are an organization designed to help young men better understand their community, themselves, and be a functional part of their envitonment. Our Jaycees here have served in many useful ways, in the past they have been friend to the vast population. They have been instrumental in many of the good changes here in the institution. Their planned year for this year had many good and useful ideas, ideas that would have greatly benefited the entire population, instead they decided the heck with the Jaycee principles, they would work only for their own egotistical gains. What difference did it make if they draged the Chapter down into the depths, as long as they reached their own individual recognition. As a plea, lets get with it! If it takes as entire new membership, then do it, but lets get the C.C.I.S. Jaycee Inc. Chapter back into a congenial, viable community group whos only goal is to better the whole inmate population, instead of just trying to better a few individual members. Our Jaycee Chapter has sunk to the bottom, there is no place to go but up. SO LETS GO! If this can't be accomplished, (and I have my doubts) then stop insulting ou intelligence and dissolve. The only intelligence that is really being insulted is those few who are in (HA) command. This is a challenge; I wonder if there are individuals in the institution, men enough to accept it? Or am I right and the Jaycees are now having their wake, and are just waiting to be buried.

From The Hartford Times:

WASHINGTON - A 27 year-old Quaker war protester arrested at the White House Aug. 14 and held in the District of Columbia jail was released Thursday after what he said were two days of "terror" in which he was beaten and raped more than 50 times by jail inmates.

Robert Martin, who says he is a former reporter for the Norfolk, Va., Sun, Associated Press and Overseas Weekly, held a press conference at Quaker House here Friday night "in the hope" that rapes of inmates can be prevented in the future.

D.C. Corrections Department officials said the assaults are under investigation but said that jail guards do not usually venture into cellblocks during nightly recreation periods-when Martin allegedly was attacked-because the guards themselves might be attacked.

Martin was taken to D.C. General Hospital late Wednesday night but had to wait for treatment, he said, while D.C. jail officials unsuccessfully sought to get the police department's sex squad down to investigate. They were told, and police officials confirmed that police no longer investigate crimes committed at the jail or any district corrections facility, except for homicides.

Corrections officials expressed ignorance of this new policy, adopted by police June 12, although police say copies of the policy were delivered to corrections officials.

Martin, currently unemployed, said he became a pacifist and Quaker after getting out of the Navy in 1972. He was one of a number of protesters arrested after they sat down in the White House visitors line to pray for a halt in U.S. bombing in Cambodia.

He was rearrested Aug. 14, the last day of the protests, but refused to post bond because, he said, "I wanted to see what jail conditions were like."

He was held for a week in a "quiet" cellblock along with many older inmates and convicted Watergate conspirator G.Gordon Liddy until he was transferred to a different cellblock late Tuesday Afternoon.

When the recreation period began at 6 p.m. less than two hours after he arrived in the new cellblock, Martin said a gang of men came into his cell, began beating him, forced him to strip, and then raped him for almost five hours until the recreation period ended at 11 p.m.

At no time during the five hours did a guard come near Martin's cell, he said, despite a large crowd outside the cell. Martin said he did not scream because he was told he would be killed if he did.

Corrections officials said their preliminary reports show that a guard saw Martin sitting in the cellblock at breakfast the next morning, surrounded by a group of men and called Martin aside because "it looked like Martin might need assistance."

When the guard asked Martin if everything was allright, officials said, Martin replied that he would handle it himself.

Martin said he was too terrified to tell the guard because the inmates had said they would kill him if he mentioned a word about what had happened. "I was threatened with death if I talked... I was terrified... Something inside of me snapped."

WASHINGTON (AP) - Federal prisoners who are turned down for parole would be told why under a reorganization plan announced by U.S. Parole Board Chairman Maurice H. Sigler.

Sigler said the reorganization, approved by Atty. Gen. Elliott Richardson, would be completed by November 1974 if Congress provides the money.

In addition to being given written reasons for denial of parole, inmates would have the right to be represented by attorneys at parole hearings and would have a means of appeal.

Under the present system, the entire eight man board hears all parole cases. In fiscal year 1971, the latest for which figures are available, 17,600 cases were decided. Reasons for denials were not given.

The reorganization calls for the use of examiners to hear applications for parole.

Five of the eight board members would be designated as regional directors and would hear appeals from decisions of examiners in their regions. The other three members would hear appeals from decisions of the regional directors.

The plan would require hiring up to 22 more hearing examiners at $23,000 to (cont.)

$30,000 a year. The board now has nine such examiners.

Sigler said the board would seek $650,000 to put the program into effect in the first year. Sources said yesterday he plans to meet with Justice Department budget officials Tuesday to see whether a supplemental budget request is needed.

The new plan has been in effect on an experimental basis since October, 1972 at facilities for men at Petersburg Va.; Lewisburg, Pa., and Danbury, Conn., and at the womens institution at Alderson, W. Va., and youth centers in Morgantown, W. Va.
