

ACTION WAS DEFERRED

SPECIAL MEETING OF ROAD COMMISSIONERS LAST NIGHT.

Agreement Presented by Fair Haven and Westville Railroad Company in Reference to Relaying of Tracks on Chapel and State Streets and Grand Avenue Referred to Corporation Counsel.

A special meeting of the board of public works was held last evening for the purpose of considering the petition of the Fair Haven and Westville Railroad company for permission to lay new tracks on Chapel street from York to State street, on State street to Grand avenue, and on Grand avenue, from State street to Mill river.

The provision was not agreeable to the railroad company and they declined to sign the agreement demanded by the city. At the meeting last night the railroad company was represented by President Parmelee and Attorney George D. Watrous.

Commissioner Johnson—Well, what I want to know is what action will the company take if the city orders a new pavement laid on the several streets?

Will the company agree to pay for its share of the pavement or will it do as it did when York street was paved with vitrified brick?

Finally, after some further discussion at the request of Commissioner Johnson Attorney Watrous drew up the following agreement:

It is hereby agreed between the city of New Haven and the Fair Haven and Westville Railroad company that no rights which said city has against said company in relation to pavement requirements shall be deemed to be in any way affected or impaired by reason of the permission this day given to said company to relay its tracks on Chapel street, State street and Grand avenue from York street to Mill river.

Commissioner McGann—Why not dispose of the matter now. It is all right in my opinion. Why do you want to prevent this road from doing what it wants to, and yet the other roads are allowed to do practically as they please?

Commissioner Bishop—I do not want to stand in the way of this company, and am willing to do anything for them that I can, but I don't intend to do anything until I am sure the city's interests won't suffer.

Commissioner Hoyt—I don't believe in giving the company another right until they pay the bill they owe us for the York street pavement.

Commissioner Johnson—If we should order a better pavement next year or any other time we have no guarantee that the railroad company would comply with our orders.

Commissioner States—There is no law to compel the company to obey and I think the agreement offered is a good one, much better in fact than I expected.

Commissioner Johnson—Well, gentlemen, the cry in almost every town in the state is that too many street privileges have already been given free to electric railroad companies and here we are discussing whether we shall let the Fair Haven and Westville company do as it pleases in this matter.

Commissioner States—I move that the agreement be adopted. This motion was promptly seconded by Commissioner McGann.

"I move as an amendment," said commissioner Hoyt, "that the agreement be referred to the corporation counsel for an opinion."

ALL CLASSES SURPRISED

NEW ACTION TAKEN BY THE NEW-FOUNDLAND GOVERNMENT.

The White-Whites May Appeal to the Court. The fact that the White-Whites are now appealing to the court is a surprise to all classes.

Commissioner Johnson—I will now follow a precedent set by Mr. States when he was president of the board last year. As president I will vote again on the amendment, dissolve the tie and declare the matter referred to the corporation counsel.

Commissioner Grant—Well, I see Mr. Bishop that you have taken your vote. Only a little while ago you thought that the corporation counsel's opinion was not needed and so voted and now you vote to refer it to the corporation counsel.

Commissioner Bishop—Well, I think that's the best way to untangle it. Commissioner States—it seems to me if this board can't do business without running with everything to the corporation counsel it had better adjourn immediately sine die.

Commissioner Bishop—I now move in order to expedite the matter that the clerk be instructed to obtain the written opinion of the corporation counsel as soon as possible and if the opinion is favorable to the railroad company, the acting superintendent of streets shall forthwith notify the railroad company that the work may be begun immediately.

This motion passed unanimously. Next Commissioner McGann wanted to know why the order requiring D. M. Welch & Son to lay a walk at the corner of Congress avenue and Commerce street had not been carried out.

Commissioner Johnson—Well, what I want to know is what action will the company take if the city orders a new pavement laid on the several streets?

Will the company agree to pay for its share of the pavement or will it do as it did when York street was paved with vitrified brick?

MAJOR B. F. BLAKESLEE.

Death of One of Hartford's Leading Veterans of the War—Was on Governor Verrill's Staff.

Hartford, April 25.—Major B. F. Blakeslee of this city died at the retreat for the insane at 1 o'clock this morning from general paresis. He was committed as a patient in December, 1891, and was not thereafter in a condition mentally to admit of his return to the activities and surroundings here, in which he was an influential factor for twenty-five years after the war.

Major Blakeslee was one of the best known veterans of the Sixteenth Connecticut, and was prominent in Grand army circles in the state. He was a native of Southington and was one of the original members of the Hartford City Guard. He was badly wounded in the head at Antietam, and again in the head at the battle of Mansfield.

After the war Major Blakeslee engaged in business in the city, and for years was an active member of the Hartford board of brokers. He was on the staff of Governor Jewell, holding the position of assistant quartermaster general. He occupied the same position on the staff of Governor Henry B. Harrison of New Haven, the chief of the quartermaster general's department at that time being General Arthur L. Goodrich.

He was the historian of his regiment, and its only published history is from his pen. It was one of the first regimental histories that was issued in the state.

Major Blakeslee was never married. He leaves a sister, Mrs. Corbin of New Britain. His life was one of Christian sincerity and fidelity.

Novel Steps Taken. New London, April 25.—The Consolidated railroad has taken novel steps in a case in Groton, protesting against the granting of a liquor license to a saloonkeeper named Hitchcock, who intended opening a saloon near the railway station. The officials of the road have sent in a protest to the county commissioners against granting the license on the ground that a saloon in the vicinity of the depot would be objectionable to the patrons of the road.

Excitement at a Fire. Waterbury, April 25.—While the fair of St. Andrew's church of this city was in progress in the city hall this evening, a French flag, which was suspended just over one of the lighted gas jets, caught fire, and the flames communicated immediately to four streamers, which ran up to the center of the hall, to a bunch of decorations of bunting. Several men quickly seized the burning bunting and extinguished the fire.

Found Dead in Her House. New London, April 25.—Mary E. Latimer, aged eighty-five, widow of the late Benjamin Latimer, was found dead this afternoon at 8 o'clock this afternoon in the old Hempstead house where she resided. The woman was found by her granddaughter, Mrs. Latimer was last seen alive at 9:30 yesterday morning by the neighbors. Death resulted from heart failure.

It Was a Close Call. South Norwalk, April 25.—William Burr, a lineman employed by the Norwalk Electric Light company, received a shock from a live electric light wire this afternoon and narrowly escaped death. He was engaged in repairing a wire on an iron pole and in some way he came in contact with the live wire.

Another Strike On. Woonsocket, R. I., April 25.—Eight weavers in A. L. Sayles & Sons' mills at Pascoag refused the offer of a 5 per cent. raise in wages to be effective in June and have struck.

FEARFUL GAS EXPLOSION

FORTUNATELY THOUGH NO ONE WAS FATALY INJURED.

In the Restaurant Where the Explosion Occurred There Were Many People and Every One Was Thrown About—Windows Shattered and Glass Broken.

Boston, April 25.—A terrific gas explosion took place in the cellar of Verocelli's saloon, at the corner of Tamworth and Lagrange streets, about 7 o'clock to-night, causing a damage of at least $1,000. Although the saloon on the first floor and the dining room above had been crowded all in the building with the exception of Joseph Verocelli escaped uninjured, and he was slightly scorched about the face and neck.

A few moments after 7 the crowd of diners, to the number of probably sixty, in the dining rooms up stairs and a dozen or more men in the saloon on the street floor were startled by having every gas jet in the building suddenly extinguished. Everyone upstairs rushed into the street, while those in the saloon rose to their feet.

As they reached about for their hats Joseph Verocelli, who was behind the bar, ran to the corner of the room and opened the cellar door. An explosion followed instantly, and everyone in the room was thrown about like a cork. The glass in the basement windows were broken, while crockery, bottles of liquor and furniture were wrecked. A fire followed the explosion in the basement, but it was so quickly extinguished that the damage from this cause was trifling.

The explosion was due evidently to a leaky gas pipe, but no one is known to have a light anywhere near it.

A SPLENDID AUDIENCE

Will Witness To-night the Presentation of the Oratorio of St. Paul by the Gounod Society—A Grand Musical Event—A Big Audience Also for the Matinee.

This afternoon and evening at the Hyperion theater will occur the long anticipated performances of "St. Paul" to be given by the Gounod society. This event is easily in its way the important one, musically, of the entire season. Its preparation has required weeks of hard, unremitting devotion and study on the part of each one of its 250 or more members of the society.

It is apparent that this undertaking is to be reckoned at its true worth, as a splendid audience in point of culture and fashion will assemble to-night to do homage to the great Mendelssohn. Everyone will be there, and the boxes are all sold.

It will be hard to say which will create the most interest, the rendition of the solos or the performance of the chorus. Curiosity is of course rife as to the handling of some of these choruses, which are accounted the most difficult in all oratorio music.

The Gounod society is making a great test of its ability and endurance. Many of the numbers require stupendous skill and power, others the most careful quartet shading and finish.

It goes without saying that such soloists as Madame Jennie Patrick Walker, Miss Stein and Messrs. Davies and Mills will amply fulfill the expectation aroused by their fame.

Miss Pickett. Song—Measuring the Baby.....Anon Wallace S. Moyle. Gondolier's Love Song.....Helmold Miss Sadie M. Thompson. Arthur D. Perkins and his Pipeophone. Song—Rock of Ages.....Thomas L. James. Recitation.....Miss Alice D. Richards. Song—Cross and Crown.....J. R. Thomas H. W. Pickett.

SUICIDE IS NOW ALLEGED

LIPE INSURANCE OF CASHIER RISLEY HAS NOT BEEN PAID.

It is Because of the Rumor That He Did Not Die a Natural Death and It is Probable that the Body of the Deceased May be Exhumed to Settle the Matter.

Hartford, April 25.—It has been learned in this city that the Astoria Life insurance company of this city, in which Cashier Risley held a policy, has not yet settled with the heirs of the deceased, the amount which Risley carried upon his life, $30,000. The delay in settling by the insurance company, it is rumored, is because of the suspicion that Risley committed suicide and that he did not die a natural death.

In connection with this there is another rumor to the effect that the body of the deceased cashier may be exhumed and an examination be made of the stomach for the purpose, if possible, of finding traces of poison. The physician who attended Risley regards the story of suicide as absurd.

The officers of the life insurance company which, it is said, is to have the examination made, will not talk regarding the matter.

FASHION NOTES.

How Height is Suggested. The new style of blouse fronts for bodices has won tremendous favor and is really a very clever trick.

The Punch cartoons, about 170 in number, which are now to be seen at the Fine Arts society's rooms in New Bond-street, illustrate more than anything else the unique position occupied by Sir John Tenniel. "Apropos of the peculiarly American tendency to explain things," he was saying, "there occurs to my mind the attempt sometimes made to account for the derivation of the compound word Welsh-rabbit. I regret to notice that Webster falls into the common error of considering the word rabbit a corruption of rarebit. Now, as shown by lexicographers who have had the advantage of a technical acquaintance with facts relating to the origin of the word, Welsh-rabbit is merely a slang term."

Course of Prices at the Opening Marked by Irregularity.
New York, April 25.—Irregularity marked the course of prices at the opening of the stock exchange to-day because of a sharp break in the anthracite coalers, due in turn to the refusal of the New York coal companies to accede to the demands of the Reading for 21 per cent. of the coal tonnage.

and the greatest part of these are employed in working marble; there are four hundred quarries, employing many men. This fine stone marble is sent to all parts of the world. The ancient Romans appreciated this same marble, for they worked these quarries in the early days of their history. On our return to Florence we will turn aside to visit the well known Badia di Fiesole, a famous monastery which was built nearly nine hundred years ago; this pleasant pile of stone buried in trees and flowers offered the quiet of its retreat to Benedictine as well as to Augustinian monks. The garden is a pretty spot, and when one enters here and rests amid the shade trees and abutment roses, it seems actually to have left the world for another sphere; for quiet, peaceful and restful ease, with brilliant views of Florence embowered amid its green trees and bright flowers, commend me to this peaceful and secluded garden. We cannot linger longer; the sun is sinking behind the hills towards Florence. That fine castle on the hill below us belongs to an American, who with a sharp eye to business, for which we Americans are noted in every corner, allows visitors to inspect it two days in each week for payment of a fee of twenty cents! Not far away is the Villa Pratolino, which was built by one of the Medici for the reception of the beautiful Bianca Capello, the wife of Francis I. The vicissitudes of her history form an interesting chapter. In half an hour we are once more in the city of flowers, having had a thoroughly delightful excursion, and many trips equally as delightful can be had daily in the vicinity of Florence. But "Fusca" of the Romans yields her laurels to none.

Now as we are passing to our domicile let us stop to visit the National Library, where are three hundred thousand volumes and fourteen thousand manuscripts, most of which are very important and rare works. Some very old works are to be found here, among which are the first printed book of Florence—a Homer of 1485; the first printed book of Venice, a Cicero of 1489, and a Dante of Florence, 1481. Two remarkable books are those of the Bible which were printed in Mayence in 1462, also an autograph by Leonardo da Vinci, with illustrations or illuminations in imitation of cameos. Among the most remarkable manuscripts kept here are the autograph notes by Verchi of his history, the art of War by Machiavelli, and a fine collection of letters and autographs of renowned scientific and literary men who have lived within the past five hundred years.

We have now seen Florence pretty thoroughly, and I think after writing you more of it which I will particularly mention the Barocco Academy and the fine old church of St. Croce, we will say farewell to this lovely city on the Arno and turn our eager eyes towards Rome, which, of all cities in the world, I consider, by a combination of many causes, to be the most interesting and attractive. VIATOR.

The Plaza of the town is a prominent feature to be noticed, and the views from that spot are most delightful. The cathedral is a place of great interest; it was begun as long ago as 1012, and it possesses a number of paintings and frescoes which deserve special study. The old crypt with its tombs and frescoes carries us back nearly a thousand years. Close by the cathedral is a portion of an old Etruscan wall, and the entrance to an ancient tunnel. This was discovered twenty years ago, and many there are exposed to view. There is one thing which every visitor to Fiesole ought to see, and that is the old church of St. Maria Primitiva, which was built over one thousand years ago; in this church is preserved a remarkable tabernacle of terra-cotta executed by Luca della Robbia about 1475.

his tools, household furniture, pictures and original designs. It is one of the most interesting places to visit in the city, and M. Angelo was the most wonderful man that ever lived in Florence. A person visiting this pretty house, as he walks through the dining-room and inviting little studio, and out into the quaint kitchen, very likely looks about for the former master, for there are his plans and papers spread on the tables as if awaiting his return. To return to St. Lorenzo again; connected with this church is the most precious relic, which is so styled to distinguish it from the old one. The new sacristy is not so very recent after all, for it was built by M. Angelo in 1535 and the construction of this beautiful building consumed not less than fourteen years of constant toil. This is in fact a mausoleum for the Medici. Here we see the tombs of the two members of that distinguished family who had last died, Julian and Lorenzo II Magnifico. Julian is represented as a general of the church; below is the sarcophagus adorned by the world renowned statues of Day and Night; who having once beheld these wonderful life-like figures can possibly forget them; almost who can describe them. The second monument erected in memory of Lorenzo de Medici. The statue is called "Il Penseroso" (Thought) and it is a work of the greatest refinement and power; the beautiful figures of Twilight and Dawn adorn the sarcophagus just beneath the statue. These two tombs mentioned above are worthy of being the handiwork of the celestial beings. I know of no works in the world which can surpass them in beauty of refined design, or in the magnificent results which have been achieved by the combined forces of the sculptor's brain and chisel. The figures themselves are allegorical (I refer to those figures on the sarcophagus), and appear as life-like as human beings; they seem almost to possess the breath of life. Let us now enter "the Chapel of the Princes"; this is the burial place of the Medici family; it adjoins San Lorenzo and a passage connects it with that church. It is an eight sided building with a lofty dome and lined throughout with splendidly colored marble. The figures in the dome are very beautiful and represent many scenes in Scripture history. There are six niches which contain six splendid granite sarcophagi placed on the marble vaulting.

To give some idea of the grandeur of this building and its contents I will state that the Medici expended for their private fortunes no less than $4,500,000 on the marbles and decorations of this beautiful Chapel of the Princes. I know of no such beautiful sepulchral chamber as this; one loses the thought of death as he enters this delightful place; it is more like a chapel than a mortuary chamber; there is all about it an air of cheerfulness which pursues depression to its complete overthrow, and one would willingly linger here for hours if permission were granted to do so.

The suburbs of Florence are very attractive, and being on high ground the views to be obtained are superior. One of the finest is the glorious Certosa, San Miniato, Bolognardo or Vallombrosa? These are lovely indeed, and a trip to Fiesole is an experience not soon to be forgotten. An electric tram now runs from the Piazza St. Marco direct to Fiesole (just imagine the hurry of the nineteenth century rushing through the hills of Fiesole) and very many tourists avail of this inexpensive and picturesque manner of reaching that beautiful place; or one can easily take a stroll thither by foot. The road which but three miles. A very pleasant drive can be taken to Fiesole by carriage; in fact it is a delight to go out to Fiesole, and it is a pleasant excursion any way you choose to get there. We left Florence at the "Porta St. Gallo," near the old Triumphal arch, which was erected in 1738, and we traveled along the bank of a pretty stream which dashes down the steep incline in his hurry to leap into the Arno; in the spring of the year this little stream, the Mugnone, swells with pride with its accumulated waters and becomes a powerful mountain torrent carrying destruction in its path. In a short time we pass the Villa Palmieri, in which Queen Victoria has spent two or three seasons. The narrators in the Decameron resided here in 1348. The views which open to our eyes at this place are charming indeed. Mountains and high plains extend far away, as far as the eyes can penetrate, and the bright sunlight of Italy clothes the mountain sides and bare rocks with a cheerful mantle of color. The exhilaration which comes from the view itself brings its own reward. In half an hour after passing this Villa we reach the old church of St. Domenico; in the monastery near by Fra Angelico resided previous to his long visit to the monastery of St. Marco in Florence. In a few moments we reach the Villa Spence; this is a fine residence and once was the country home of Lorenzo II Magnifico. There are numerous villas in the region near Fiesole belonging chiefly to English people of wealth and culture. One of these is the Villa Lander, in which Walter Savage Lander died in 1864; a sweet place to die in, as it were to close the eyes upon charming landscapes to again open them lovely views of Paradise itself.

At last we have arrived at Fiesole, which even in the time of the Etruscans was an old city, and at the present day one may see the Cyclopean wall, portions of which are still preserved. The Plaza of the town is a prominent feature to be noticed, and the views from that spot are most delightful. The cathedral is a place of great interest; it was begun as long ago as 1012, and it possesses a number of paintings and frescoes which deserve special study. The old crypt with its tombs and frescoes carries us back nearly a thousand years. Close by the cathedral is a portion of an old Etruscan wall, and the entrance to an ancient tunnel. This was discovered twenty years ago, and many there are exposed to view.

There is one thing which every visitor to Fiesole ought to see, and that is the old church of St. Maria Primitiva, which was built over one thousand years ago; in this church is preserved a remarkable tabernacle of terra-cotta executed by Luca della Robbia about 1475. The Franciscan monastery near by commands a fine view of the surrounding country, and the valley of Florence as seen from this point is most lovely. The Carrara mountains which loom up beyond the summit of Mount Albano form the setting of the city panorama, and beyond this is the city of Carrara with a population of twelve thousand.

Most Delightful Strolls Can Be Made Through the Quaint Streets—The Impositing Strozzi Palace is the Most Beautiful in Florence.
Dresden, April 8, 1935.
To the Editor of the JOURNAL AND COURIER:
I propose to-day to visit some of the places of interest on the left side of the Arno; we are living on that side of the river, and feel quite familiar with that section of the city. Let us go down first to the Piazza St. Maria del Carmine, where is situated the grand old church of the same name as the Piazza. This church was built in 1423, and was the possession of a Carmelite monastery close by. Here are to be seen the celebrated frescoes of Filippino Lippi and Massaccio, which represent certain traditions regarding the apostles. These are among the finest objects in Florence. They represent the expulsion from Paradise, Peter taking the piece of money from the mouth of the fish, Peter preaching and baptizing, and again the same disciple healing the sick; Peter healing the cripples and raising Tabitha from the dead. Here is also represented the crucifixion of Peter; and Paul and Peter before the procurator, and again Peter in prison. It is not necessary to dwell upon these wonderful frescoes; they are truly wonderful and show marvelous power.
