

GEN. HARRISON IS MARRIED

The Wedding Trip. After the wedding General Harrison and his bride were driven to the home of a friend of Mrs. Dimmick's, below Fourteenth street, where they received the congratulations of those present at the ceremony.

Mrs. Dimmick's going-away gown is of blue-gray cheviot, made with a full plain skirt and Louis Quatorze coat, over a silk blouse of black and crimson plaid, with tiny gold buttons as ornament.

General Harrison and his bride drove to Jersey City to take a train for Indianapolis within two hours after the ceremony. They went to the Pennsylvania railway depot, where the private car of Vice President Frank Thompson was in waiting.

When the train arrives at the Broad street depot in Philadelphia the friends of General Harrison and his bride will leave them to proceed on their journey to Indianapolis alone.

After a visit to the west General and Mrs. Harrison will return east, and spend the summer in the Adirondacks. General Harrison recently purchased a place at First Lake, in the Fulton chain of the mountains, and ordered a picturesque log cabin to be built upon the site.

General Harrison's Gift to the Bride. Mrs. Dimmick has received many valuable presents. The principal gift from General Harrison to Mrs. Dimmick is a necklace made of seven rows of pearls.

The bridegroom's gift to his bride is a walking stick which General Harrison has prized for years, owing to associations connected with it. Its history dates back to the War of the Rebellion and General Tracy is said to have long desired to possess it.

Among those who were invited to attend the wedding were Mr. and Mrs. Almerio Hugh Paget, ex-Secretary of the Navy Whitney's daughter and son-in-law, and all of those living of General Harrison's former cabinet.

Governor Morton, accompanied by his military secretary, Colonel Marvin, attended the wedding. Governor Morton and party return to Albany to-morrow.

Story of Mrs. Dimmick's Life. Mrs. Dimmick is well known to Washington society. She is a brunette and has an attractive personality. She has been a widow for fifteen years.

Mrs. Dimmick is a charming woman. She is modest—almost plain—in her dress, and she wins friends easily by her gentleness and womanly goodness. Mrs. Dimmick was born in Honesdale less than forty years ago.

While in Honesdale Mrs. Dimmick met her late husband, who was Walter Dimmick, the son of a former attorney general of Pennsylvania, and prominent throughout the state as a lawyer.

Up to 1888 Mrs. Dimmick had but a slight acquaintance with General Harrison. She visited him and her aunt in Indianapolis occasionally, but in those days General Harrison was a busy man and spent little time in helping his first wife to entertain.

In 1888 Mrs. Dimmick's health was not the best. At the late Mrs. Harrison's request she went to Indianapolis to pay General Harrison and his wife a visit. It was during the presidential campaign that she was there.

Mrs. Dimmick's mother, Mrs. Lord, died soon after President Harrison was inaugurated. Mrs. Harrison then persuaded Dr. Scott and Mrs. Dimmick to live at the White house.

Mrs. Harrison had all through her life been noted among her friends and relatives as an excellent housekeeper—more of the old school. She personally looked after the servants of the White house, and devoted much of her time to the details of the culinary department.

On the contrary General Harrison was fond of long walks and his figure was a familiar one on Pennsylvania avenue. Mrs. Dimmick was extremely fond of walking, and in this way the two spent much time together.

Her Talent for State Affairs. Mrs. Dimmick, while living at the white house, developed an unusual taste for the affairs of state and relieved General Harrison of much of the routine of his office, which would otherwise have been put aside or pigeonholed by his secretary and corps of assistants.

Together, she proved herself invaluable to General Harrison in a thousand different ways. The president like to have her about, and often consulted with her in matters pertaining to his office.

During the late Mrs. Harrison's illness, which resulted in her death in October, 1892, Mrs. Dimmick gave strong evidence of her gentle, self-forgetful nature. She was continually by her aunt's bedside, and at the same time shared with Mrs. McKee the duties of the household.

After Mrs. Harrison's death. When General Harrison and the other members of his family left the white house, and went back to Indianapolis, Mrs. Dimmick was one of the party.

AT ST. PAUL'S. The Oldest Communicant at Easter Service—Mrs. Sanger, Aged Ninety.

Mrs. L. A. Sanger, mother of Mrs. Joel Peck, was probably the oldest communicant attending service in the Episcopal church—St. Paul's—on Easter day.

She was baptised by Rt. Rev. Benjamin Moore when six months old, ninety years ago. While at school in Albany, N. Y., at the age of fourteen, she was confirmed by Rt. Rev. John Henry Hobart.

The offering of the Daughters of the King at St. Paul's was for the improvement of the chancel, $68. Other gifts were given by members of the chapter.

Bismarck, Beethoven and Wellington. Kings and Queens innumerable, nearly all the minds that have changed the course of affairs in the world for centuries have been to Carlsbad for bodily aid. Not everybody can go even in these times of fast travel, but everybody can have the benefits of Carlsbad at a small cost at home in the Carlsbad Sprudel Water, or the Carlsbad Sprudel Salt (which is evaporated from the Sprudel Spring).

Indispensable In Diphtheria. is Bovinine, as has been attested by thousands of physicians. One of the many testimonials we have received is one from Dr. Arthur P. Ginn of Omaha, which reads, "I used Bovinine in several cases of diphtheria, and was successful with the cases. This to me is sufficient evidence of its value, no other food being used during treatment, except the milk used as vehicle for its administration."

Bovinine being a food product, made by a special cold process from lean beef, is easy to take, quickly assimilated, speedy in its life-promoting properties, is invaluable as a life-giver when it is necessary to maintain strength to carry a patient over the crisis of a disease. In diphtheria and other throat troubles where it has become impossible to take nourishment by the mouth, Bovinine has sustained life for weeks, administered as an injection.

PROMPT ACTION. Moved by timely and praiseworthy public spirit, the Board of Aldermen last evening unanimously passed a resolution instructing the Board of Public Works to fight the elm-leaf beetle by the best system of spraying and to spend $5,000 in the warfare.

This is a good and a prompt beginning. The aldermen have done their duty and done it well. Now let the councilmen do theirs and when the members of the Board of Public Works get a chance to act let them act promptly and vigorously.

The time to fight the beetles is before they have destroyed the leaves and damaged the trees. If the councilmen and the members of the Board of Public Works do their part as well as the aldermen have done theirs the attack can be made when it ought to be made.

Save the elms! A stitch in time saves nine, and spraying in time will save more than nine!

A CALIFORNIA CAMPAIGN. Woman is putting on her high-heeled shoes in California. The women of that State desire the adoption of the November election of a constitutional amendment striking out the word "male" in the present section, which grants suffrage to every person in the State except women, Chinese, idiots, insane, criminals and those convicted of embezzlement or misappropriation of public money.

A great campaign is to be carried on in California by the advocates of equal suffrage, and it is the opinion of well-informed politicians of the State that the amendment will be adopted.

A DISHONORABLE DOCTOR. Everybody in England is talking about the Kitson-Playfair case, and talk about it in this country has a good start.

Dr. Playfair warned his wife not to associate with her, and also induced Sir James Kitson to cut off her annuity of $2,000 a year.

American lady. Victoria's daughter was disconsolate. She asked the address of the purchaser, and at once wrote Mrs. Gardner a letter, expressing her desire to purchase of her at any price the picture of the Duke, and expressing the hope that the American owner would appreciate her desire to possess the picture of her ancestor, which she wished to add to the collection at Windsor Castle.

Mrs. Gardner replied that she was extremely sorry to refuse the Empress Frederick anything, but that she could not possibly part with the portrait of Monmouth, adding, "and your imperial Majesty will understand my desire to retain the portrait when I tell you that I, too, am a Stewart."

Queen of Flowers Is of Ancient Lineage and Distinguished History. Some indication of the origin of the rose, both in time and in country is probably given in its name.

But theories, however, of the name agree with all other indications that we can trace in placing the original home of the rose, much as that of our earliest forefathers, on the central or western central district of Asia.

to the Thermæ. Then there were the Thermæ of Domitian, Livia and Commodus. No doubt these were all built upon a grand scale, but we can form no adequate idea of their sumptuousness, for their crumbling ruins are quite meagre. Let me refer to the Baths of Titus. These were built upon the side of a hill near the Colosseum. A few years before these were built Nero constructed upon the site of the villa of Maecenas his magnificent golden house, which certainly must have been one of the wonders of the world.
