

EIGHT THOUSAND

MURDERERS—RUSSIAN PENAL SETTLEMENT

On Sakhalin Probably the Worst Place in the World—The Corrupt Officials and the Brutal Treatment.

Recent English papers contain reports of an interview which a Reuter representative had with Charles H. Hawes, who has just returned from the Russian penal settlement of Sakhalin, an island off the east coast of Siberia.

Mr. Hawes had been traveling in Korea when he decided to visit the island, with a view to studying the natives and also of observing the condition of the criminal settlers. He proceeded with a convict of the name of...

"Immediately after my release I spent several days in Alexandrovsk, where, as in the other settlements, murder goes on with impunity. During my stay four people whom I met were murdered, including a boy who was living in the same house with me.

"In Siberia—apart from the Arctic settlements, of which I know little—the exiles, as is now well known, are not cruelly treated, but their lot in Sakhalin is indeed bad, this being due not so much to the system itself as to the condition of life and the great distance from any central controlling influence.

"I went over some of the prisons. Despite continued contradictions that such a thing exists, there are still two wretched prisoners chained night and day to wheelbarrows. In Alexandrovsk prison there were many convicts packed in four apartments, each constructed to hold about fifty persons.

"The whole of Sakhalin is under martial law. In one of the prisons, out of a total of 600 prisoners, 500, mostly chained, are kept in enforced idleness, so that many convicts consider their term of confinement in Sakhalin followed by six years' enforced residence in the island as exile settlers, and a further six years in Siberia as penance.

"The one bright spot on this island is the presence of an heroic woman, Eugene de Meyer, a young, attractive, and enthusiastic lady, who is working alone amid these terrible surroundings. She has no hope for danger, and lately spent a long time in the interior with a band of 200 convicts.

"At the present time I am able to attend to my household and family duties, pursue music which was formerly my profession, besides reading and studying, all of which I was totally unable to do at the time referred to."

officials in Sakhalin as might be expected. Speaking of one of his expeditions in the island, Mr. Hawes said: "In proceeding from Alexandrovsk to the far north of Sakhalin we first traveled through sixty miles of dense forest, and then proceeded for 300 miles out and another 200 back in native dug-out canoes. The two chief difficulties we met with were bears and escaped convicts. Of the former, we saw the tracks of a 100 in two and a half days' paddling. The escaped convicts were numerous, and we dared not light fires at night to keep off the bears. When we were on the point of returning from the Pacific coast the officials sent word by the natives that five convicts had escaped from the Rikovsk prison in the interior, and were known to be bent on killing our hosts, a native headman and two engineers, whose hut we had shared. We were armed with Winchester rifles, and we received instructions instantly to fire on any Russian we saw in the forests. Eighteen of these escaped convicts were shot in two and a half months. They are exceedingly dangerous, their condition being so desperate that they will willingly murder anyone they meet merely to obtain possession of a pair of boots.

RESUME WORK TO-MORROW

and capital have learned a lesson from the miners' strike which will enable them to adopt peaceful, humane and business methods of adjusting wage differences in the future.

After Mr. Mitchell had notified President Roosevelt of the action of the convention and had received a reply to the effect that the commission would meet in Washington on Friday he sent out the official announcement through the press to the strikers that the strike was off. It was addressed to all miners and mine workers in the anthracite region and was as follows:

"You are hereby officially notified that it was unanimously decided to-day by the delegates attending the special convention that all mine workers should report for work Thursday morning, October 23rd, and that the issues which culminated in the strike should be referred for adjustment to the commission appointed by the president of the United States.

"We are authorized by the executive officers of districts 1, 7 and 8 to caution all those who resume work to exercise the same care in order that no accidents of this nature and kind be averted. Owing to the condition of the mines after an idleness of five months there will be great danger when work is resumed. We are prompted to offer this advice by the fact that at the close of the strike two years ago many more accidents and deaths occurred than take place when the miners are operating regularly.

President Mitchell has not made any arrangements regarding his future movements. He will act as attorney for the men at all sessions of the commission and will have with him several assistants. Headquarters here will be kept open probably until after the award of the arbitration commission is announced.

Public Reception to Mitchell. Indianapolis, Oct. 21.—A movement is under way to give President Mitchell, of the United Mine Workers, a public reception when he returns here, ten days from now. The labor unions of the city will take the initiative.

RACING AT MEMPHIS. Weather Ideal and Track Fast at the Opening of Meet. Memphis, Tenn., Oct. 21.—The Memphis Driving association's fall meeting was opened auspiciously here to-day with an attendance of five thousand people. The weather was ideal and the track fast. The free-for-all pace to wagon, the last event on to-day's programme, was postponed because of darkness. The card opened with the Magnolia stake. Charley Mac won the first heat handily from Ferenzo, but the latter had no trouble in passing the wire first in the two succeeding heats.

DR. KOCH'S THEORIES.

To be Discussed Again by International Tuberculosis Congress. Berlin, Oct. 21.—Dr. Koch's tuberculosis theories will come up for discussion again before the International Tuberculosis congress which opens to-morrow evening with a reception in the Prussian parliament house. Professor Koch, who wrote a book last spring embodying six years' observations and tending to show that human and animal tuberculosis were intercommunicable, will state his present position in the controversy, and Dr. Rocard of Alfort, France, will speak of the transmission of consumption through milk. Whether Dr. Koch will take part in the subsequent discussion is uncertain. His name is not on the programme.

NORTHERN SECURITIES CASE. James J. Hill Continues His Testimony for the Roads. St. Paul, Minn., Oct. 21.—James J. Hill continued his testimony to-day in the suit of the United States against the so-called railway merger. He went into the matter of rates and joint rates considerably in detail.

On rate reductions again he said rates were always reduced as traffic increased, which had followed the Burlington purchase. He had made no attempt to influence rates on the Burlington.

The acquisition of the Burlington had not diverted traffic from other lines to the Northern Pacific and Great Northern but actually created new traffic for them. All railroads have recently increased their business but others had increased to so great an extent as his line.

INTERNATIONAL GOLF. Harvard Puts Yale Out—Some Cracks Beaten. Morristown, N. J., Oct. 21.—Harvard put out Yale, holder of the title, in the team championship to-day of the intercollegiate golf association. The matches were played on the new links of the Morris County Golf club, which have been extended to 5,311 yards since the spring and completely changed by the re-arrangement of the holes, making a new course, and the scores made to-day were therefore new records.

being a heavy man he went through and struck the ground with terrific force. Paul Kauris also broke through the net but was not badly hurt. The officers of the company when informed that the two smaller buildings had been destroyed and that the four-story building was damaged, would not make an estimate of damage. One of them said: "It may be anywhere between $15,000 and one million and that is all we can say at this time."

TRAITS OF THE RED MEN. Curiosities of Character That Puzzle the Pale Face Strangers. "Few white men know how to trade with an Indian," remarked C. E. Ward of this city, who has made a study of Indians for ten years past. "I once met an Indian with a magnificent mountain lion skin. He was willing to part with the ornament, but his price was too high. I offered him $12.50, but he indignantly refused. Later, on the same day, after I had learned to trade with an Indian, I bought the skin for $1.50."

One of the survivors who reached the ground in safety after a perilous journey down the fire escape from the fourth story, said: "I do not believe any of the men on the top story could have escaped. The flames drove me from my post and but for the fact that I was near the fire escape I would never have reached the ground."

Frank Rothenberg, a foreman working on the fifth floor of the drying house, met his death in making a jump for and missing a net held by the firemen underneath the window where he stood. His skull was crushed and he died instantly.

Joseph Rutkos, who escaped with his life, but is badly burned and bruised, had better fortune in striking the net when he leaped from another part of the fifth floor. He hit it squarely but banks of a stream that flows into Stinking Lake, twenty-five miles from Dulce, N. M. Two large brush arbors are by it, one on each bank of the stream. The women take their places in one arbor and the men in the other. The ceremony lasts two days. "It commences at sunrise when the men and women are seen lying on the ground with their feet in the water. They lie perfectly still, the water moving past and, according to their belief, carrying their sins of the last year down the lake. On the morning of the second day we were warned to hold our horses, and had hardly secured them right when in an instant at a signal the two lines of men and women arose to a standing position and began flapping their blankets in the air. The noise was almost deafening. The flapping was continued while the Indians stood with their toes in the water. They were shaking the evil spirits into the stream and causing them to be carried down to the lake and drowned. The ceremony is somewhat in the nature of an atonement of the Jews. After the religious part of the business, over all join in dancing and gambling, and a season of feasting and enjoyment follows. These Indians are Catholics, but no influences can prevent them from continuing their ancient practice."

under an arbor in the garden of a wheezy old Turk, whose donkey kept us company near by, while the sought of the waves splashing on the beach, soothed us gently to sleep. The next day we were free to explore the ruins of Troas, which lie scattered about in prodigal fashion, though not any of them imposing and majestic as are many of the remains in Syria or Egypt. Pillars, capitals, plinths, et cetera, lay around on every side, half covered from sight in the thick groves of the valonia oak. The remains cover many square miles. On the beach lies some of the stone cannon balls which the Turks have left there as relics of the ordnance of a past age. Constantine thought of founding his capital at Troas instead of at Stamboul, and to this day the name which Troas goes by is Eski Stamboul—Old Constantinople. It is a very impressive place—that spot where Paul beheld the Macedonian vision—and yet most of the scholars or curious travelers who visit the Plain of Troy never essay to go on to Troas, and still fewer ever pass on as we did to the hardly less interesting Assos.

Troas to-day is deserted save for a few farming Turks or wandering shepherds, or hee and there a prowling bigand. It is quite difficult to trace the outlines of the city, because of the undergrowth that stretches out on every side, except as it is threaded here and there by trails which suggest the paths leading to Siboney and San Juan. However, the remains of a gymnasium may be made out, 413 feet by 224, formerly a massive and pretentious edifice, now broken into fragments, from which the Turks of the neighborhood, with their proverbial disregard for antiquarian treasures, have been appropriating building materials for many generations. Indications of an aqueduct, and of a Doric temple, are also discoverable, with suggestions of other ambitious structures. Somewhere in the neighborhood may be lying the ruins of the house from the upper story of which Eutychus fell, overcome by Paul's long preaching, and of the dwelling of Carpus, in whose care the apostle left his cloak, and his still more valued parchments—as we would say, his wraps and his note-books.—Rev. Charles A. G. Dwight in the New York Observer.

Professor Ledochowski, the Austrian meteorologist, says the winter in Europe will probably be the severest in fifty years. "We may," he says, "expect the lowest temperatures, the fiercest winds, and the heaviest snowfalls extending for an exceptionally long period. This applies to all of Europe, including the British Isles."

There is no other man in this country, it is said, who enjoys the distinction which James Welr of Boone, Iowa, possesses, as the father of eleven pairs of twins—twenty-two children. It is said the mother was partial to girls, while the father preferred boys.

At last the government of India has decided that no more bird skins and plumage shall be exported to be offered up at the London feather market—the principal one in the world—on the altar of fashion. Among the visitors who have passed through the acres of dock warehouses off Houndsditch on the days preceding the sales, held once every two months, none could have failed to be profoundly touched by the awful tributes exacted from India.
