

HELD UNITED SERVICES.

CONGREGATIONALISTS WORSHIPED IN CENTER CHURCH.

Strong Sermon on a Timely Topic Preached by Rev. Frank H. Luckey, Pastor of the Humphrey Street Church.

The Congregational churches of this city held their united Thanksgiving day service in Center church yesterday morning. There was a good sized congregation and the services were very impressive.

To-day it offers to the Church of Christ a sphere without any rival. And even if we wished to do it, we cannot divest ourselves of our solemn responsibility to love our land not only with a love far-brought from out the storied past, but with a love to be used in the present, and transfused through the future by prayer and effort.

as wide as that claim, but it does not follow that the pressure of obligation is the same over the entire world area. Our direct interest as Christian churches lies in the ethical and religious problems, and the emphasis falls chiefly on our duty along those lines.

best and surest sign of the advent of a better sense of brotherhood in the nation will be a growing spirit of love among the followers of our Lord; that spirit which in the early church broke down all barriers of class, of race, and made them one in Christ Jesus.

not be recovered from in a year. And yet, despite this dark picture we still have cause for gratitude, even here. In all industrial history there has never been such a victory for peace as against war, for arbitration against the strike.

UNION SERVICES AT GRAND AVENUE BAPTIST CHURCH.

Rev. Dr. Phillips of St. James' P. E. Church Delivers Interesting and Instructive Discourse—Death of Mrs. Parnell F. Gaylord, One of Fair Haven's Oldest Residents.

Union Thanksgiving services were held in the Grand Avenue Baptist church, yesterday, at 10:30 a. m. The pastor, Rev. E. W. Stone, was in charge of the services, which were participated in by the local pastors. The services began with the singing of the Doxology, followed by the Lord's Prayer. A Thanksgiving hymn was sung and the scripture lesson in the chapter of First Thessalonians was read by Rev. Alex. F. Irvine, of Pilgrim church. The choir sang the hymn "Vox laus Dei, O my Soul," and following prayer was offered by Rev. Andrew Burns Chalmers of the Grand Avenue Congregational church. The choir response was "Hallelujah, O my God, God Most High." Kipling's recessional hymn was sung as the offertory by Miss Maclean. The sermon was preached by the Rev. Dr. Phillips of St. James' P. E. church. It was an interesting discourse and listened to attentively by the large audience present.

"There is nothing more beautiful than the primitive Christian's treatment of the poor. The poor among them were considered as special entrusted and charges, and were lovingly cared for. They did not need to beg from house to house, very far. There was a warm atmosphere of charity in the early church. Modern benevolence is a secondary thing. It generated the number of the poor increased.

"Labor is necessary to the well-being of man. It is the appointed lot of man. There is a general aversion to work as being distasteful. Few love it. Those who do have some very high motive and wish to accomplish a lofty object. Labor is the construction of nature itself.

"We now come to two questions: First, Why is labor necessary? Man has wants, such as food, raiment and shelter. The trades of the cobbler, carpenter and the like all result from these wants. Civilization advances and man develops a desire for luxuries. These luxuries create new trades. House architecture rises to an art, and men leave monasteries and build them in the houses of others. Labor has been and always will be necessary, and varieties of trade must exist to meet the varied wants.

"The second question is, What renders labor a necessity? Man's physical wants are of a type of the spiritual. Unless he takes his improvement in his own hands, he falls below the level of men. His mind will be ignorant while he sees others about him educated. A boy idles while in school and has no purpose. The habit grows, and soon with a definite purpose look about them in a few years for their old comrades. Where are they? Lost. They preferred pleasure, and in the constitution of man himself. The mind exercises itself through the body. Without application and labor, aspirations sparkle and flash, but soon are so more. Capacities are brought to consciousness and developed by application and labor.

"Moral culture is necessary. Work is essential to moral well-being. Labor does not impart moral virtue, but negatively, without it man becomes a victim of self-indulgence. Other things are also necessary, but labor is essential. No struggle to man's taste, yet without it he cannot secure a comfortable and useful life, and an inconvertible. An idler has no recourse to pleasures upon occasions for they are chiefly portions of his own life. They soon pall upon him and he seeks worse and worse pleasures until nothing pleases him—nothing has any charms for him. Pleasures are enjoyed, but the excitement fades, and they find in them what is necessary for their well-being.

place. On the first attempt he tore through Cornell's line for five yards. Gardner made four, Mitchell four more and the Bennett carried the ball over for a touchdown, tying the score. The touchdown was made far to the left of the goal posts and Dale was chosen to punt out to Gardner for a free catch. There was almost a deathlike stillness when this scene was being enacted, but a moment when the ball dropped safely in Gardner's hands immediately in front of the goal posts, pandemonium seemed to have broken loose. Just as the crowd had begun to settle down Gardner kicked the goal, scoring the point which eventually won the game. As the ball went between the posts hats, canes, flags, and almost every object within the enclosure, which was not fastened down flew through the air indiscriminately. It was a glorious moment. There were only five minutes of play remaining and Cornell worked desperately to snatch victory from defeat, but Pennsylvania's defense at this time was impenetrable and a game which the Ithacans had confidently expected to win was recorded against them.

It was Captain Warner's last game in his college career and he will never have cause to regret the part he took in the contest. His line bucking, breaking through, and tackling in the open have certainly never excelled on Franklin Field, while his run of 50 yards, from the kickoff through the Pennsylvania eleven was remarkable. The game was free from unnecessary roughness, but that it was unusually fierce is shown by the number of substitutes. Three times Cornell had the ball within striking distance of Pennsylvania's goal in the first half. Twice the Quaker line held, and once the ball was taken from the Ithacans for interference.

Of the Pennsylvanians, the work of Dale and Baird was the most brilliant. Three times the former got around the Cornell ends for gains of 18, 20 and 22 yards, while Baird seldom failed to gain when given the ball. There was scarcely any fumbling, a remarkable fact when the muddy, slippery condition of the ball is taken into consideration.

There was not a vacant seat at 2 o'clock, the hour scheduled for play to begin, and long lines of persons were waiting at the two entrances. About 22,000 persons witnessed the game. It was 2:02 when the Pennsylvania team came on the field, followed a moment later by Cornell. After a brief signal practice, the captains were called together and the coin tossed. Captain Gardner won the toss and chose the west goal with the wind at his back. A moment later Coffin kicked off and the game was on.

Play had progressed but a few minutes when Brewster for Cornell heeled Bennett's punts on Pennsylvania's 30 yard line. He held the ball while Coffin dropped a goal from placement. Toward the close of the first half Cornell got the ball on her 53 yard line and by brilliant runs by Tydemann, Purcell and Warner scored a touchdown. Coffin kicked the goal which closed Cornell's scoring. The teams lined up as follows:

was genuine regret shown in the way Columbia men carried him off the field on their shoulders to-day and cheered him again and again. The line-up was as follows:

score of 23 to 6 Michigan to-day defeated Minnesota on Perry field and earned the undisputed title to the western football championship. It took seventy minutes of furious play to finish the game. At times both teams, especially Michigan, were brilliant; at times the game on both sides was ragged, but it never ceased to be desperate.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27.—The Georgetown football team went down before the Indians from Carlisle on the Georgetown campus to-day and suffered defeat by the score of 21 to 0. The visitors' victory, however, did not commence until the opening of the second half and then the game resolved itself, not into a contest for supremacy, but numerical greatness. The whole twenty-one points chalked up to their credit were made in this half.

On the Bridge at Midnight.
I stood on the Bridge at midnight
As the clock was striking the hour,
And the moon rose over the city
Behind the dark church tower.

Along that stretch of car tracks
The wavering shadows lay,
I'd sworn to myself—yes, often,
I would never come this way.

How often—O, how often,
On the nights that had gone by,
I had stood on that Bridge at midnight,
Filled with joy when my car I'd spy.

For my heart was hot and restless,
And my life was full of care,
But to stand up in a street car
Was more than I could bear.

Yet, whenever I cross the river,
On the Bridge with the great stone pier;
Like a friend I have long forgotten,
Comes the thought of earlier years.

And I think how many thousands
Of care-cumbered men,
Each bearing his package or bundle,
Have crossed that Bridge since then.

Complaints and hard-neck stories—

In order to meet the cost of these reforms, Baron Sonnino suggests the maintenance of the price of salt, the reduction of which would give no relief to Sardinia or Sicily, and the hypothecation of the budget surplus and 50 per cent. of the prospective savings on the conversion of Italian consols in favor of the South.

VERY JOYOUS OCCASION.

MR. AND MRS. E. B. BRADLEY CELEBRATED GOLDEN WEDDING.

Eventful Day at the Residence on Chapel Street—Family Dinner in the Afternoon—Several Hundred Callers in the Evening—Hiram Lodge Attended in a Body.

Yesterday was an eventful one in the history of the lives of Mr. and Mrs. Edward B. Bradley of 227 Chapel street. It marked the passing of the fiftieth milestone of their journey through life as man and wife, and it will be long remembered as one full of pleasure and joy.

The celebration of the joyous event was begun yesterday noon with a family dinner when the sons and daughters and their children and a few invited guests gathered around the festal board in their home.

Large tables were placed in the front parlors and there the family party spent several very delightful hours. It was certainly a happy and proud moment for the celebrants. At the conclusion of the meal a picture of the entire party was taken.

The public celebration for which a very large number of invitations had been issued was held from 8 until 10 o'clock in the evening and during those hours the residence was thronged with friends and acquaintances who desired to join in extending their heartiest congratulations and felicitations on the event.

IT BEGINS tomorrow, Saturday, and will last until the stock prepared for the occasion (nearly $5,000 worth at regular retail prices) has been disposed of.

Every umbrella in the lot has been purchased expressly for the sale from a manufacturer of known reliability.

There is no trash. You can rely on every one. Even those that are offered at 50c each will be found solid, strong and worthy.

Prices will run from 50c to $3.50. At 50c you can get an umbrella that usually sells at 75c. For $3.50 you get regular $5 goods.

It is such a sale as none but Malley's can plan or carry out successfully. It is based on very heavy and carefully-studied purchasing—purchasing so big that the largest store in the country would consider it with respect.

But there will not be an umbrella too many. The prices are too low—and here's Christmas looming in sight already!
