Great Selling in Our August Sale of Blankets

It was fortunate that we made such large purchases—else somebody surely would have been disappointed.

Sometimes we can scarcely get them out of the cases before they are gone. Perhaps it was an unusually pretty border. Perhaps it was the "feel" of the wool. Perhaps it was both, along with the August Sale prices—which means low prices—that made them go so quickly.

But, whatever the reason, the fact remains that we are doing the biggest August Blanket business in our history. And this is the sort of values we are giving:

- $1.39 quality at $1.00 a pair
- $1.69 quality at $1.39 a pair
- $2.00 quality at $1.69 a pair
- $2.50 quality at $2.00 a pair
- $4.00 quality at $3.25 a pair
- $5.50 quality at $4.69 a pair
- $6.50 quality at $5.00 a pair
- $7.00 quality at $5.50 a pair

If you wish something still finer, there are plenty other grades to choose from. Pay as much as $17.00, if you care to, for Blankets that would cost you $21.00 in the regular season.

The sale prices start as low as 69c a pair; and they are very good Blankets for that price.

  - All of the Women's $2.00 Oxfords

MILKMEN ARRESTED.

Result of Activity on Part of Milk Exchange.

Daniel W. Wetmore, of 280 Lenox street, was arrested by Detectives McGrath and Dunlap yesterday morning on a warrant issued by Judge Tyler on the complaint of Attorney Carl A. Mears, attorney for the New Haven Milk exchange. He is charged with using milk bottles belonging to other dealers. Mr. Wetmore was later released on $100 bonds.

Yesterday afternoon Lewis C. Palmer, of 57 Lombard street, was arrested by Detectives Daley and Warden on a similar charge.

These cases are specially interesting from the fact that they are the first arrests to be made in the state on such a charge since the passage of a special statute covering such cases by the last legislature. The penalty fixed by law is fifty cents a bottle or can, or thirty days imprisonment, or both.

TO HAVE WIRELESS STATION

ON LAND ACQUIRED AT CITY POINT, THIS CITY.

Apparatus of DeForest System at Foot of Fourth Street—Will Communicate With Passing Steamers on the Sound and Send Messages to New York.

The American DeForest Wireless Telegraph company has secured land on Hallock avenue, City Point, fronting the harbor, for the erection of its wireless station in New Haven. The lot is at the foot of Fourth street. It was the original plan of the company to install its station here at Lighthouse Point. Negotiations were commenced with the government, but it was decided that the station there would be inconveniently far from the city.

A mast of 180 feet high will be erected and the station house will be located near its base. This house will not be over twenty feet square and of one story for the wireless apparatus is small in compass. A number of wires will extend from the apparatus within through the roof of the building to the top of the poles. It is probable that as much as 1,000 feet of wire will be used, which will be spread out in "a fan," as it is technically called, in order to expose as such surface as possible for the radiation of the wireless impulses. The New Haven station is to be built for communication with the DeForest station at New York.

The New York DeForest station is located on the roof of the 20-story skyscraper at 42 Broadway. The 100-foot mast placed there can easily be dis-

OTHER DOSE OF EGG-FRUIT OR O'Rourke's ORATORS.

Haven Defeats Them 6 to 0 and the Teams Are Now Tied for First Place—Fight at New London-Norwich Game—Captain Keane and Unre Durnbaugh Arrested—Holyoke Takes Double-Header from Hartford.

Bridgeport, Aug. 23.—New Haven won in the Orators to-day by the score 6 to 0 and tied the latter in the race for the pennant. With the exception of first inning, when the visitors scored runs, the game was a sharply led contest. After the disastrous first

Wade did not allow any of the batters to get further than second base. Coran, who pitched against the Orators yesterday and shut them out, was the point to-day and repeated his stout performance. The score:

WORTH READING. M. Hanotaux's Article on the Future and Power of the United States. In a review of a new book just issued among the Annales Politiques et Littéraires of the Académie Française, M. Hanotaux, member of the academy, has a remarkable article on "The Future and the Power of the United States."

The publication of the present volume and of the work of which it is a part, says M. Hanotaux, is one of the signs of the times. It is a veritable and practical encyclopedia of commerce. Who would have dreamed, twenty years ago, of a work of such proportions? And yet publicists as well as men of affairs have known, for a long time, in what point works of this kind are weak and how very hard it is to combine the most rudimentary notions involved in international relations. To whom shall we turn? Where shall we knock?

On this point I have my own opinion. I have given expression to it as often and as loudly as I could. The great evil in France is the reading of the home, or perhaps better expressed, the indifference to travel. The French do not travel, hence everything surprises them. The only cure for insularity and narrowness is travel. "Travel! Go outside!" I say again and again to my fellow citizens. "The reward you will reap will be rich indeed." This is my way of imitating the elder Cato's cry, "Carthago delenda est!"

"Go outside, travel!" Now, the book under review would dispense with travel, were that possible. It puts facts before us just as they are. In reading it one lives among realities. It is not only a compilation of statistics, facts and figures to be carefully considered, it is life itself. Each branch of commerce, each industry is reviewed. The origin, cause for existence, progress, methods, strength and weakness of each one of these is recorded. One is made to understand why one nation or man succeeds and the other fails. Here are the names of sellers, buyers, banking houses, and even in certain cases the methods of procedure. To know is not all that is needed; it is necessary to act, and to know how to act. Such ought to be the motto of the authors of this work. They have created an authority, a living book—one that speaks to the man of business in a business-like way. It teaches two nations that which above all things it is important for both of them to know; not only what they are, but what they may be. Having to discuss their interests, they engage in a carefully worded and concise dialogue, having facts and figures well in hand. In it each participant puts forth his best efforts, shows what the situation actually is and makes his offers. In the first volume of this work France and Italy are coupled together. In the last it is France and the United States which appear hand in hand. Is there a more important or a nobler subject?

The great American republic is already high above the horizon of the commercial world. Its attitude is menacing. All eyes are turned toward it. One word will express its position, "power," and one word will justify it, "organization." Power is shown nowhere so much as in a mere enumeration of the elements which make up the present and future greatness of the United States. Its territory is as large as that of Europe. It has eighty million inhabitants. It touches the world's two great oceans. Its climatic conditions range from tropical to arctic. All kinds of minerals, from gold to coal, are found in its mines, along its rivers, and in alluvial deposits. All kinds of plants, from the cedar to the hyssop, are there; so, too, are all kinds of animal wealth, from the whale to the bird of paradise. The articles of primary importance, iron, coal, cotton, cereals, all kinds of machines, from those harnessed to Niagara Falls, to those which dress a hog in five minutes, are there. Above and over all permeating the life of the people, is an active and fertile genius, a spirit of enterprise, an assiduity of labor, perfect liberty and equality of all the citizens. If these are not the elements of a people's progress and prosperity, what are? Here there is a vast army armed to the teeth for the arts of peace, and even for the arts of war, lifting itself beyond the oceans, not a month from the ports of the old world, but a week. If one considers the question of freight, the United States is nearer to the Mediterranean than Liverpool is to Marseilles. The narrowest this colossal empire, master of the Panama canal, will interfere in some way between Europe and Asia. It will control the commerce of the west and the east, for it will hold the principal way. Such, then, is its power.

In the matter of organization the republic rules by means of a voluntary discipline which watches over all the larger industries, which subordinates them to very careful calculation and to ripe reflection. It follows the materials of commerce from their origin up to the very last step in their manipulation of preparation for the world's markets. It combines the efforts of all, and it concentrates all the forces of domestic production for the purpose of pushing its products with an irresistible impulse upon the markets of the world.

This is the discipline that organized the trusts, that created the enormous fortunes always associated with the labor when they are derived, that is only one weapon more in the hands of the men of genius who know how to create them. This discipline has created a still more intelligently wielded and terrible weapon, the graduated tariff continually changed to meet changing conditions, and modified to coincide with the progress of the country. Sheltered behind this fifteen years the American republic has been forging ahead, with astonishing rapidity and success. The republic knows what it wants and whither it is marching. It is well posted as to its resources and as to the resources of its adversaries. It opens and closes its gates as the stranger is considered useful or harmful; in other words, treaties of reciprocity must really be the means of reciprocal trade.

The admission of immigrants, or, in other words, the importation of labor, is carefully watched as is the importation of goods. On the battlefields of international trade clever strategists have organized a trust vaster than any heretofore conceived, which binds the different states and different industries therein. I refer to the great national trust, the tariff. Thus, at the beginning of the twentieth century, the United States faces the world as a most desirable market, on the one hand, and as an awful menace to manufacturing nations, on the other. The nation or the individual that will make any effort to establish vast commercial relations in the future must be prepared to measure forces with the two great elements of the Union's power—its strength, based on its resources, and its organization. To what conclusion will a careful study of those two factors lead us? Is Europe in general, and each particular power, doomed to inevitable and irremediable defeat? Is the battle that is to be fought hopeless? Will the prosperity and progress that have marked the American republic's movements during the last decade or two continue until they obscure all else?

In other words, are we to be confronted by an American peril more terrible and more pressing than the "yellow" peril, one that is to wield against the old world the weapon before which that old world is to go down to irretrievable defeat?

The peril exists. Of course this there is no doubt. Everybody will remember the feeling that spread over France twenty years ago when the first shipments of American wheat menaced the farmers of the north and center of France. The only way we were able then to resist the invasion was by keeping step with its progress by the imposition of tariffs. At the present time it is hardly certain that French agriculture can hold its own or keep up the competition.

Germany has passed at different times through similar perils, notably when American pork, invading the empire's markets, threatened by its abundance and cheapness a great public danger. The empire defended itself as best it could, but not without exciting considerable resentment on the other side of the Atlantic.

Finally England has had her hours of doubt and difficulty with the same or similar dangers. Think of what she had to endure when she saw herself attacked and beaten in her own markets. Think of what she must have felt when she saw the first shipments of American coal landed in her harbors in 1893.

The peril exists. It is absurd to try to deny its existence. It would be silly more absurd to lose hope or believe that there is no remedy. The fight for first place in the world's trade is not necessarily disastrous to either party thereto. Progress has in it profit for the whole world. Nor is this profit limited to the gain of a single day or to one transaction. Progress brings continual prosperity. There are well-known cases in which competition has enriched all parties participating in the struggle. In a word, every conquest over an enemy is to be measured as a gain to mankind. All participate in its advantages. It is not necessary in peaceful battles that industrial and commercial rivals be vanquished.

Other words than "war" and "vanquished" would better fit the friendly contests called competition.

Having no desire to embrace in an article of this kind the whole vast field of competition between the two continents of Europe and America, I limit myself to a consideration of the commercial situation in France and the United States. It seems to me that in spite of all that has been said and done the matter can be looked upon with serenity and confidence. It is true that our power is incontestably less than that of our rival. We have neither the vast stretches of territory nor the great natural resources nor the prodigious equipment in machinery nor the vast number of men possessed by the United States. France appears in comparison with the United States insignificant. Its future appears somewhat restricted. At least this is the conclusion to which one must come finally who looks upon the matter from the standpoint of the relative positions of the two countries in regard to their natural resources and forces already developed. It is otherwise, perhaps, if one looks at results based upon possibilities. Temporarily, the balance of power in commerce is in our favor. We are at present, and will still remain, exporters to the United States; this is an actual fact. For the future there are some considerations which are of great weight. In the first place, French products are not of a class that come into competition with American products.

America, entirely occupied in exploiting its own territory, produces and exports above all things the raw materials which our industries consume, as petroleum, cotton, iron, coal, etc. These are the most considerable articles of her commerce, things that we neither make nor consider of the highest importance. As a matter of fact, we are menaced with competition only in the matter of foods, but upon this point our production and consumption will so regulate themselves that we shall be able to meet competition successfully if it comes. Besides, our market is sufficiently rich, sufficiently sought, sufficiently important to permit us to secure concessions to foreign parts in favor of our own productions by making concessions to parties seeking sales in our markets. In other words, we could exercise a rigorous retaliatory control over petroleum if our wine trade should be threatened. On the other hand, every increase in population and in the public good fortune of the United States is profitable to us because of the increased sale of our products. Our trade in articles of luxury increases when the resources of the consumer increase. We need general good will; we must preach with smiling faces. Our wines, our champagnes, our fine oils, our fruits, our liquors, our hats, our gloves, our perfumery, our woolen cloths, our objects of art always seek a refined, elegant and cultured purchaser. Our wish therefore is very sincere when we wish good fortune to our friends.

Then, again, quantities do not speak at all times. It is necessary to consider also the qualities and results. On this point statistics are insufficiently accurate. If they were able to set forth the real secret of the business transactions of each merchant they would certainly confirm our optimistic belief. As a matter of fact, industry and trade advance, without ceasing, toward the production of the highest grade of goods, and there are excellent reasons for this fact. The natural movement is the elimination of encumbering weights, of uncertain transactions and of bad debts; it tends to the least effort—that is, it seeks the lines of least resistance. It desires a minimum of tonnage with a maximum of gain. This is the trend of French commerce. It is able to profit by all those circumstances which might prove great difficulties to its competitors.

Nor is this all. France is to-day restrained within her own confines. Will it be so to-morrow? Is it not even now assured of its future in reserving for itself on this planet territory almost as vast perhaps as that of the United States, which can become in the future very prosperous? I refer, of course, to our colonial possessions. In them will be found an extent of territory, a diversity of climate, an abundance of natural resources which will furnish to human activity and to the commercial world a new and unexplored field.

It was new land that made the fortune of America. Why should not these new lands possessed by us make the new fortune of France? Already Algeria, Tunis and Indo-China are claiming their places and rank among other possessions. To-morrow the Congo, East Africa, Madagascar and New Caledonia will offer to strangers openings no less vast than those in America. These acquisitions were made only yesterday, but their progress has already been remarkable.

Why deny the possibility of their future? The pessimists, who are perhaps not only powerless, but idle, shrug their shoulders and smile. Let me tell them a simple story. In 1823 the commander of Fort Dearborn, a pessimist of that time, wrote to the secretary of war of the United States as follows:

"I have the honor to inform you that this post should be abandoned, because the country surrounding it is such that it is impossible for a population to live here sufficient to justify the expense of keeping a fort at this place.

In 1853, seventy years later, the place where that fort stood had a population of a million and a half, and twenty-seven million people visited her exposition. I refer, of course, to Chicago.

It is neither resources nor a future which France lacks if she does not prove untrue to herself. Books such as these I have presented to the public are useful because they are excitants to energy, and I should like to see them in the hands not only of business men, who would be able to draw information from them, but also of professors, to give instruction from them. A very valuable point concerning this particular book is that it is printed in alternate columns in French and English. This will assist the student.—Published in the Journal de St. Petersburg, an Influential Russian Paper.

THE MAID AND THE MUMMY. The opening attraction of the year in New York city, "The Maid and the Mummy," which fired the first gun of the present season on July 25, is playing to the capacity of that playhouse at every performance, something very unusual at this time of the year and were it not for prior contracts there is but little doubt that the entertainment would remain at the New York theater for many months to come. In the second place, while there are few novelties scheduled for immediate production, the revivals which go on in the near future, already have many advances orders for seats. The success of "The Maid and the Mummy," and the advance industry for the revivals make a good augury for the new theatrical year, especially in New York. "The Maid and the Mummy" is one of the early attractions for Bunnell's New Haven theater.

Several things can be done. The other afternoon, after putting away two cases of beer, a gang of young hoodlums broke into a magazine at Fort Winthrop on Governor's Island in Boston harbor, juggled out some sticks of dynamite and began to toss them around—baseball fashion.

President Woodrow Wilson of Princeton University tells of a certain mathematician who was remarkably absent-minded. One day he was walking along in the gutter instead of on the sidewalk, when his way was barred by a carriage which was standing in front of the store.

Charles J. Bateman, a descendant of President Polk, asked to tell of some ancestor, told the following story: "It was said that when President Polk visited Boston he was impressively received at Faneuil hall market. The clerk walked in front of him down the length of the market, announcing in loud tones: 'Make way, gentlemen, for the President of the United States! The President of the United States! Fellow citizens, make room!'"

A Japanese newspaper says: When Iyeyasu captured the Osaka castle from Hideyore and Lady Yodo he found there 300 ingots of gold having a value of $500,000 in the currency of the present day. This gold he bequeathed to his second son Yoshiano, the first of the Owari feudal chiefs, with the injunction that it should be kept for use in any national emergency.

ANOTHER WARNING.

The gypsy moth continues to scare Massachusetts, and we were told the other day that all New England ought to be scared by it. We guess it will have to be if what Professor Morse of Salem says about the work of the moth-egg destroyers is true. From four trees alone, where they had been scraping off the eggs, he collected nearly a third of a cupful, numbering over seventeen thousand. The ground was fairly strewn with the eggs. He says that, if citizens even faintly realized the misery in store for them, they would devote a few minutes each day to their destruction.

There are those who hint that as long as the appropriations hold out in Massachusetts the gypsy moth will hold out there. The situation is an unpleasant one for Connecticut as well as Massachusetts. No gypsy moths wanted here. Why can't good old Massachusetts honestly and thoroughly wipe them out?

NOT SPACIOUS.

The Japanese navy didn't do the Russian navy up as quickly and completely as the United States navy did the navy of the poor Spaniards, but it has managed to make the Russian navy pretty innocuous. Its work is much admired by naval officers in Washington, who are reported as saying that the Japanese have shown that they care nothing for the spectacular features of warfare. They adapt business principles to their battles and that is all.

Perhaps when the Japanese are about to conclude their careful arrangements, or prearrangements, they may throw in something spectacular. Perhaps they have some good words all ready to say when they get ready to "make history," etc., etc. They are wonders.

WAKING UP.

England is waking up. One of the signs is the establishment of a faculty of commerce and administration at Manchester University. Its aim is to give a systematic training in the higher commercial subjects, methods of government and administration, and in economic and social investigation. Among the languages in which instruction is offered is Chinese, including writing and pronunciation, and Arabic, including spoken dialects.

England and the United States may yet know as much about some things as Germany does.

The Excelsior of Kuropatkin.

The shades of night were falling fast. When through Manchuria there passed A general with flashing eyes. Who bore this banner proudly high: "Entempuski."

A few days passed, again he strode With fierce demeanor up the road: Another banner now he bore, Changed somewhat from the one before: "Watabitski."

The weeks rolled on, again he came And bore a banner, much the same. On which was written this design, Before his awesome battle line: "Notyetski."

More weeks elapsed, and on the track He rode, now forward and now back. A waiting world watched eagerly. But this was all that they could see: "Afterawhileki."

More months elapsed, but still no sign Of battle from that dreadful line; And now before his army vast This banner he carried proudly fast: "Tomorrowski."

A year had gone, no battle yet. The world came waiting for the fight. He rode, with sabre in his hand, And valiantly gave this command: "Backupski."

At last this grim and dreadful man Grew busy, and a message ran To the home folks, who freely shed Their bitter tears, the while they read: "Gonebumpski."

BUSINESS WOMEN.

The business woman is none the less a woman because she is in business, and there is, I think, nothing more honorable than the woman who boldly goes out, because necessity prompts her to do so, and makes her way in some financial undertaking, say Lady Henry Somerset in the Philadelphia Bulletin.

Again and again I have known instances of men who have failed in business who have had homes of ease and comfort, whose wives have never flinched when it has been necessary for them to become bread winners and have opened shops in the most fashionable thoroughfares. They have not been ashamed to serve behind their own counters and to sell to the friends whom they often met in the equality of social intercourse. For such I have nothing but admiration.

Moreover, there are many brave girls who find it necessary to earn their living by working in banks, in the Post Office, in Government offices and financial houses today.

There is, however, as I have already said, one form of business life which I strongly deprecate, and that is only too common at the present time.

A girl, perhaps, has a good home and nothing much to do. She wishes to increase her annual income in order that she may have more to spend upon her pleasures, and consequently it comes about that one of the greatest handicaps to the success of the wage-earning woman is created by the fact that there are hundreds, especially of young women, who go into the labor market from homes of ease and comparative affluence simply to eke out their pin or pocket money.

By accepting less than a living wage they do an incalculable injustice to their sisters who require a living wage in order to live. Every woman who sets out to earn her own living ought to see that the fact that she does so injures no other who needs the same provision in order to exist.

But to turn to the strongest objection against business life for women. I recognize, in spite of all that may be said or denied, that there is no question to my mind that in business life the serious handicap to woman is generally health. It is useless to minimize this aspect of the question. It exists. They do not run an equal race with men in respect.

Then there are other difficulties connected with clothing, with right feeding and with the treatment of the physical side of existence, which must occupy a larger space in a woman's life than in man's. Anxiety and uneasiness break a woman quicker than they do a business man. She puts her whole soul into her work with greater eagerness, expends more of her vital force, gives herself to whatever she undertakes and

ENTRIES FOR THE SHARPLE REGATTA SATURDAY.

The Death of Miss Burton—Progress on the First Church—Dr. Sneath to Return by September 4—Death of Frederick Smyth—Address Before the Templars of Honor by Rev. E. C. Tullar.

Not a few yet remain in Fair Haven and in this city in general who recall vividly the splendid impressions made by the eloquent and brilliant sermons preached by the late Rev. Dr. Nathaniel Burton, of Hartford, at the Congregational church in Fair Haven, of which he was pastor in the early days of his ministry. In fact the Fair Haven church was his first charge after his marriage and Dr. Burton and his wife came directly after their wedding, which was in Middletown in 1854, to the church in Fair Haven. Later Dr. Burton accepted a call to Hartford, and there as pastor of Park church thirty years of his life were spent. He was a brilliant preacher and a beloved pastor. Mrs. Burton's death occurred in Hartford last Tuesday, and the funeral services will take place this afternoon in that city. Rev. Francis Goodwin will officiate. Interment will be in Cedar cemetery, where the family has a mausoleum erected by friends of Rev. Dr. Burton. Mrs. Burton had only one child, Richard K. Burton, until recently professor of English literature in the University of Wisconsin. He was for seven years on the staff of the Hartford Courant, and is at present literary adviser for a Boston publishing house.

Although Mrs. Burton lived to an unusual age she was always delicate in health. She continued bright, however, until April, when she began to fail. Mrs. Burton had considerable literary talent, especially for verse writing. Although she never ventured into professional writing, she composed many poems for special occasions, such as anniversaries and inners. Several small collections of her poems have been published for private circulation. Mrs. Burton was a woman of remarkably fine character and had a wide circle of friends. Mrs. Burton was seventy-eight years of age. She was born July 23, 1826, in New York city, the daughter of Rev. Henry Chase, a Congregational minister, who worked among the seamen in the port of New York. She was one of nine children. She grew up in New York and was graduated from Facker Institute, Brooklyn, then and still one of the leading schools for girls. The Chase family was always noticed for its longevity and one brother and one sister of Mrs. Burton are still living. The brother is Hon. Daniel Chase of Middletown. He is ninety-one years old and is the oldest living graduate of Wesleyan university. The sister is Mrs. Jane E. Morrow, formerly of Brooklyn, but now living at 44 Capen street, Hartford.

There will be held a regatta on Quinnipiac river above the drawbridge Saturday afternoon. The start will be made at about 12:30 o'clock. There are already three boats entered, the sharpie Alice, Frank Larabee, and two round bottom boats owned by the Sears Brothers. It is also expected the sharpie owned by Barney Rowe, will participate in the contest and possibly others. The committee consists of John J. Dayton, Alvah H. Grannis and Bert Bradley. Good progress is being made on the improvements upon the interior of the Grand Avenue Congregational church. The painters are now engaged in repainting the pews, which will be finished in white enamel. It is expected that the Rev. Dr. Sneath, who is spending his vacation in Pennsylvania, will return so as to preach the first Sunday in September. Undoubtedly the first services will be held in the Sunday school room, as it is not expected the auditorium will be ready until the second Sunday in September.

Freddie, two years of age, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Smith, died at his home at Fort Wooster Park terrace yesterday. The funeral will be held this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock, and the Rev. Mr. Topley of St. Andrew's M. E. church will officiate. Mr. and Mrs. Frank M. Crawford and son, Warren, and Miss Florence Butterfield, leave to-day for Ocean Grove to remain one week. B. E. Mulvey, superintendent of the Fair Haven station, goes on duty tomorrow after his fifteen days vacation. He has been in Boston attending the festivities of the G. A. R. week and visiting several of the seashore resorts in that vicinity. Dr. E. M. C. Hall and son, Harry, have gone to Mooshead lake for a stay of three weeks. Letter Carrier Maurice J. Cain, who is now taking his vacation, went to East Wallingford yesterday for a stay of a few days. The Rev. E. C. Tullar gave an address yesterday morning before the supreme council of the Temple of Honor and Temperance at its annual convention in this city. Angelo De Matty is home from his vacation, which was spent in Boston and vicinity. Miss Blanche Hume of Ferry street has gone to Setauket, L. I., for a vacation trip. Columbia castle, K. G. WAS SHE A NEGRO? A Woman Forced To Leave A Washington Hotel.

The guests of a hotel north of Pennsylvania avenue were thrown into a state of mind recently by a strenuous presentation of the race issue, which was precipitated by a religious discussion and followed by the ejection of a woman boarder, who claimed that she was a Spaniard, and the daughter of Sagasta, the late Prime Minister of Spain, says the Washington Post. The denouement was the result of a quiet investigation by the hotel management and some of the guests and which, they say, disclosed the fact that the woman was the daughter of negro parents. At the usual parlor gathering after dinner she was interrupted by the gentleman who had led in the investigation, who, during a spirited colloquy, told her she was of negro blood. Seizing an umbrella she attacked him, striking him across the face. The umbrella broke at the second blow and the enraged woman jabbed her denunciator in the left ear with the part remaining in her hat. The man explained last night that he could not strike a woman, and had to take out his resentment in telling her all the things claimed to have learned about her. The woman and her daughter were ordered to leave the hotel, which they did the next morning. The alleged Spanish woman of high degree had been a guest of the hotel months before suspicion as to her antecedents was aroused. She became acquainted with most of the people who resided in the house, and whom she met in the parlors. Much of conversation was about Spain and "her people."

One day a business man of the locality asked the proprietress why she was entertaining a "negro." The landlady thereupon instituted an investigation as to the antecedents of her guest. Two of the male guests volunteered to conduct the investigation and unravel the genealogy of the woman. They discovered, so they say, that instead of being what she represented herself to be, she was the daughter of a negro, whose widow is living in this city. One of the investigators declares that the woman married a negro, a former employe of the Postoffice Department. It is claimed that the woman at one time was employed at the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, from where she is said to have been discharged. FEWER PARIS GOWNS

AMERICAN DRESSMAKERS GAIN IN ART AND SKILL.

Husbands and High Tariff Principal Causes of the Reform—All a Question of Ideals—North Seeks Suggestions.

Husbands and high duties are two reasons which are causing many women who dress well and spend small fortunes each year on their clothes to have their gowns made at home instead of abroad. This is not the whole reason, for so handsome gowns are to be found here and in advance styles, that the French frocks are no longer considered necessities by all women. When a woman comes from abroad and pays $3.00 duty on a few frocks it may readily be understood that she might demur, but it is more difficult to understand what husbands have to do with gowns of home manufacture. The men of the family are not supposed to have much to say about these important questions, but there are a few who are sufficiently considered by their families while abroad as to think it worth while to give them some time instead of devoting a large part of it to the milliner and modiste. It is certain that more and more beautiful gowns are being made on this side of the water. The ideas are not all French, either.

One woman who does beautiful and original work in this line says that her annual trips are for general cultivation. She does not study gowns, but the combination of colors in fine old paintings, and she says that the best color combination she ever produced she found in a stained-glass window one Sunday at church. That is a hint which might be used by the milliners who are advertising for congregations these days with the bait of shirtrwaists and no hats for church costumes.

PROBLEM ONE OF IDEAS.

"We are doing better and better work all the time," says a man who knows gowns, "and the women appreciate it. We look everywhere for ideas; we have people who have them, and are always looking for others. No one person could originate ideas enough to make elaborate wardrobes. The best people do not try to do it. They get ideas wherever they can. Worth does this. I have seen his advertisements for ideas, and he has shown me the results. He wants, for instance, something new in hats, and he puts an advertisement in a paper offering a prize to the peasant girl who can bring in the most satisfactory ones. Those girls have wonderfully good ideas, and they will bring in beautiful things, and everything worth while will be used or adapted."

"It is the same when a new collar is needed. The peasants do marvelous embroidery, and an advertisement will bring in exquisite designs in needlework, which are used on handsome gowns."

"That is where ideas for many beautiful things come from, and then to make them useful they must be adapted to the women who are going to wear them. Many women know a great deal about dress nowadays, they know what is good in material and styles, and it would not be possible to give them anything that was not the best. On the other hand, there are women who feel that they know everything, and who are entirely certain about their own tastes, but if their ideas were carried out they would spoil the finest models."

"As a rule the courtier prefers to have a woman allows herself to be guided almost entirely in matters of dress. People who make the best gowns have studied the work. It is a profession of a large scope. It is marvelous what a change can be made in a woman who allows herself to be dressed properly. Beauty has very little to do with the result. Frequently a plain woman, if properly gowned, is finer looking than one whose face is prettier, but whose gowning is incorrect."

OFTEN HAVE QUEER NOTIONS.

"Women often have strange ideas about dress, and it is hard to believe when so much thought is given to the matter that such blunders can be made. Women are continually saying that they wish a gown on the order of that of another woman who has appeared charming in a style which would be entirely incongruous for them. Short, woman like the gowns of slender sylphs, and vice versa. Once in a while there is a woman who believes in promiscuous shopping, and her costumes are apt to have the same quality I know one woman who has plenty of money, spends any amount of it for clothes, and she is the worst dressed woman I know. She gets her clothes here, there, and everywhere, and looks it."

"Money does not count always. A woman who uses discretion can dress better on $1,000 or $1,500 a year than other women who spend four times that amount. A woman can be very well dressed on either of those sums. That does not mean the society woman, who only wears her gowns a few times. She will give an order for ten or fifteen at a time, and spends any amount—$15,000, $25,000. But hard times make a difference to even a society woman, and when stocks are down in Wall street she runs over to Europe perhaps and skips a season, and the season's frocks and her expenditures will vary very considerably."

AS TO READY-MADE GOWNS.

"There is always a certain demand for ready-made gowns, and a great many persons buy them but the best dressed women will probably always have individual gowns made. There are some women who are too nervous to stand the fittings, but they are the exception. A woman who has a gown made to order knows what it is going to be as much as if it were ready made for she sees a small model which is altered to suit her, and the gown is made from that. But there is always a time, now and again, when there seems to be no particular gowns for a particular purpose, a change in plans makes something of another style imperative, and there are beautiful frocks in original styles that are smart and individual and fill the need. The same rules apply to hats, and when they and the gowns are made for each other, so much the better."

"An advantage a woman has who does not do her purchasing too promiscuously is that in the places where her gowns and hats are made she is kept always in mind. Materials are purchased and models made with a view to their suitability to her particular style, and when anything individual is found that might appeal to her she is informed of the fact. Individuality and specialization are the passwords of the day, and they are worth the while."—Washington Post.

A NEW CONNECTICUT BOOK.

W. H. Gocher of Hartford has just finished the preparation of a book which will be sure to interest all students of Connecticut history. He has gathered together and put into readable form a large amount of material concerning the family of Capt. Joseph Wadsworth of Charter Oak fame, beginning with the earliest comers of that name to this country, and their associates; also concerning the methods adopted to procure and preserve the Charter "in a very troublesome season." The traditions of New England show that Captain Wadsworth was well equipped by nature for the part assigned him on All Hallows' Eve in 1687, when the Charter was taken from the Council Chamber after the candles were snuffed out, as well as for the fight with Gov. Fletcher of New York. The author says that he was truly:

A village Hampden, that with dauntless breast and adds that he has prepared this book because the era in which Capt. Wadsworth lived, and especially the Connecticut portion of it, has been so largely skipped by those who make a specialty of New England subjects.

The book, which will be entitled "Wadsworth or the Charter Oak," will be ready for delivery about the middle of September. It will contain 400 or more pages, handsomely printed, bound and illustrated, and will be sold by subscription only. Orders may be sent to Mr. Gocher at Hartford. The price is $3.

According to the prospectus "Wadsworth or the Charter Oak" opens with an introduction in which reference is made to the founding of Hartford, Windsor and Wethersfield, the Fundamental Orders of Constitution of 1638-9, and sketches of Thomas Hooker, the preacher, Roger Ludlow, the lawyer, and John Haynes, the colonizer. This is followed by sketches of William Wadsworth, his voyages and companions in the Lion who came to Hartford, Cromwell, who was at one time expected and his ancestors, the Regicides, Whalley, Goffe and Dixwell and their sojourn in New England. The titles of the other chapters are as follows:

The Charter Oak. The peace tree of the River Indians—the story of the twin brothers—Saweg and Nowashe—the coming of the Mohawks—the tribute in wampum—the quarrel—the withered branch—the fort at Roaring Brook—attacks and repulses of the Mohawks—trailing the enemy—the fort taken—Nowashe slain—the transfer of the land to the English.

The Royal Oak. The career of John Winthrop, Jr., at home and abroad—the pine tree shilling legend, and a narrative attributed to Winthrop giving an account of Charles II's escape from Worcester.

Patent, Charter and Deed. The Warwick patent—Winthrop appointed Governor—Leon Gardner and his family—Pequot war—Edward Hopkins—founding Saybrook—the Fenwick sale—settlement with his heirs—seeking a charter—petitions and addresses—Winthrop at Court—the Charter—its keepers—the Indian deed—the second deed.

Hiding the Charter. King Philip war—Connecticut in the Narragansett Port fight—Maj. Treat—Sir Edmund Andros and his career—Gershom Bulkeley—at- tacking the Charter—Randolph's articles—the quo warrantos—correspondence with Andros—Charters brought in—the supposed surrender—the tavern—the night session—people present—Treat, Wadsworth, Andros and Letee speeches—how the Charter was taken—Wadsworth's flight—his hiding place—the story of Westogue.

The Man. All that will ever be known of the man who preserved the Charter of the Colony—his will and inventory of his estate.

The Tree. Its fall by I. T. Stuart—reference to it by daughter of Secretary Wyllys, Mrs. Sigourney and George D. Prentice.

The determined manner in which the people of Connecticut resisted the power of the crown and persisted in governing themselves under a charter which was to belong to them and their successors forever, and the promptness with which they resumed their local institutions upon the advice that James II had fled from England and Andros was under arrest in Boston is ample evidence that the seed of American democracy sown broadcast by Hooker and Ludlow had not fallen on barren ground, and in a measure mirrored the resistance which took a much more successful form a century later. This self-reliant spirit runs through every line of the original documents in the controversy between the colony and the king, and is a striking outline of Connecticut—diplomacy almost to the point of yielding—that failing resistance if there is a chance to win.

BOOK ON WALL STREET.

By H. L. Bennett of Jacob Berry & Co.
An interesting and well gotten up book has just been issued by Jacob Berry & Co., which deals with Wall street. It is by H. L. Bennett, a member of the firm of Jacob Berry & Co., and its title is "A Glimpse at Wall Street and Its Markets." The book, which contains 251 pages is divided up under the following heads: Security investments; speculation in securities, methods of trading; speculation in produce futures; in cotton and coffee; and description of properties. Each of these heads is in turn subdivided and each division is treated most carefully. There are also sections devoted to fluctuations in the past and to general directions for the investor to follow.

IN AND ABOUT THE COURTS

"OLD" DEMOCRATIC TOWN COMMITTEE SUSTAINED.

Decision by Judge Wheeler Yesterday—No Cases Heard in the U. S. Court—Charles W. Wright Examined in Bankruptcy—News of the City Court—John Glennon Held on Murder Charge.

In a sweeping decision, Judge Ralph Wheeler, of the superior court, yesterday confirmed the position of Chairman Albert Welles and the "old" democratic town committee against the assaults of Chairman Edward J. Maher and his fellow local members of the state central committee who have for some time insisted that they had been named as the legal town committee by action said to have been taken at an adjourned session of the town convention. The memorandum on the application for dissolution of the injunction obtained by Mr. Maher reads as follows:

Superior Court, New Haven County, August 23, 1904.

Edward J. Maher, et al., vs. Albert F. Wells, et al.

"Memorandum of decision on motion to dissolve temporary injunction. "Fearing over any disputed question of fact as to the number of votes given, in the democratic town convention, in favor of the proposed new rule relating to the town committee, and taking into consideration the language of the call for special primaries issued April 6, 1904, and the then existing rules of the democratic party governing its primaries in New Haven, I am unable to hold to be regular or valid any action by which that convention assumed, in effect, the authority to remove the regularly appointed town committee and appoint another in its place.

"The plaintiffs certainly have no such clear right as, upon the principles of equity, entitles them to a temporary injunction.

"The temporary injunction is hereby dissolved. (Signed) 'R. WHEELER, J.' Unless Mr. Maher should now change his mind and his attitude, the matter will be tried out in the superior court, to which the case was made returnable. In the meantime Chairman Welles' committee will undoubtedly receive the recognition of the local democrats, with the exception of the score of those who still cling to Mr. Maher and his committee.

UNITED STATES COURT ADJOURNED.

According to statutory provision the August term of the United States district court was opened yesterday morning at ten o'clock under the direction of United States Marshal Edson S. Bishop, of Norwich. Judge Platt was not present and United States Marshal Bishop adjourned the court until ten o'clock September 20. At that time both the grand and petit juries will be present and all business pending disposed of.

ILLICIT DISTILLERY CASE CONTINUED.

Jacob Eisenberg, of Montville, arrested by the United States deputy marshals, on complaint of the civil authorities of that place, for conducting an alleged illicit distillery, had his case continued until the September term of the United States district court yesterday morning.

SUIT FOR DIVORCE.

Attorney Edwin S. Thomas has brought suit for Mrs. Rachel C. Butler against Thomas H. Butler on the grounds of intolerable cruelty. The plaintiff's maiden name was Miller and she asks permission of the court to resume that name.

RUSSIA'S FLIGHT.

Staff Officer in the Czar's Army Tells Why Japan Wins.

The following extract from the letter of a Russian staff officer at the front, addressed to a journalist who who has distinguished himself by his Chauvinistic articles in a St. Petersburg journal, appeared in a recent number of The Osvozhdenie, the organ of the Liberal Opposition, published at Stuttgart:

If our official sources of information are occasionally compelled, for political reasons, to observe silence, we can all understand the reason. We can all understand why silence was maintained as to the loss of nearly 8,000 men at Wangkiang (Tellsen) and also as to the loss by one regiment of its colors, that sacred object of military honor. We can all understand why nothing was said as to our hasty retreat before an enemy only equal in numbers. But what we cannot understand is the effort made by our officialists to keep the public in an optimistic frame of mind to distort facts as much as possible, and to write of that of which they know nothing. If you will read attentively the official report, you will see that on June 14 the enemy had only two incomplete divisions, while we had two and a half. Moreover, with us a regiment consists of four battalions, save in the East Siberian units, which have three. We had also two brigades of artillery—that is 96 guns, besides a Cossack horse battery with nine guns (sic.) the Primorsky dragoons, and two regiments of Cossacks.

Our force, as you see, was not a small one. To the assistance of the Japanese came a division—the staff report says a brigade—of infantry with two or three batteries, while three regiments were sent to us by rail. But you talk of this as our heroic battle was an antagonist three times our strength! We have all known how to die, (with some exceptions) but this does not mean that an enemy so rare on a military point of view, as the Japanese is not to be feared or despised. The contempt which our custom is to shower upon this civilized nation. I have right to speak, for I have spent a considerable time in Japan, and I tell you frankly that I often blushed for my country when I compared many things there and here.

An enemy so dangerous, whether as regards persistence, readiness for war, or moral strength, Russia has never met. Japan is a dangerous enemy for this reason: Our soldier, unfortunately, despite valor and resignation, is inferior to the Japanese soldier in discipline, and what is still more important—fights with indifference, under compulsion. For the Japanese this is a war for an idea which penetrates all without exception from the minister to the husbandman. Here you have the reason for such incidents as occurred at Chonchu—you are probably unaware of this—where the Cossacks refused to charge, and as a result we lost three officers. It is from this fact and not from the color of the uniforms, which, ever since Kuropatkin's arrival, have been indistinguishable from those of the men, that the true reason is to be found for the large percentage of losses among the officers.

Our Trans-Baikal and Siberian Cossacks are our weak point. In consequence of their loose behavior and want of preparation for active service, they are of little use to us. The army awaits with impatience the arrival of the 51st and 49th (752d) dragoons. It is hoped that they will help to place the scouting on a proper footing.

Our officers, as a whole—especially those trained in the Junker schools—are undoubtedly inferior to the Japanese as regards professional training. The majority, it is needless to say, go under fire not for the sake of an idea (the only thing that could have any force with us) but for the sake of tradition or for distinction. But they do not consciously die for their country's sake, for its good, because it is evident, upon anything like an attentive consideration of the matter, that we are in the wrong. If you only knew what we did during the Chinese campaign! One's heart bleeds. It is not without reason

STATE LIQUOR MERCHANTS

HOOD ANNUAL MEETING AT SAVIN ROCK.

Business Session Held at Stanford's Hotel, Followed by a Banquet—List of Officers Elected—Post Prandial Exercises Follow Banquet—Matter of Legislation Not Acted Upon.

The tenth annual convention of the Wine, Liquor and Beer Dealers' association of the state, which has branch locals in all the large cities, was held at Stanford's hotel at Savin Rock yesterday afternoon.

The business meeting, which occupied most of the afternoon, was called to order at noon and at that time there were about 220 delegates present. A number of things of interest to the trade were talked over, after which the annual election of officers occurred. The result of the election was as follows: vice president, Frank P. Quinn of this city; president, John B. Sullivan of Bridgeport; recording secretary, John E. Casey of New Haven; financial secretary, C. H. Olcott of New Britain; treasurer, P. J. Griffin of Meriden, and sergeant-at-arms, P. B. Gillem of this city. The matter of regulating the appointment of executive committees was left in the hands of the local associations.

The reports read at the meeting show that the association has just passed through the most successful year of its existence, and it is now in a sound financial condition.

The matter of legislation was not acted upon nor was there any discussion about the bartenders' association.

At the conclusion of the business meeting about 6 o'clock, a splendid banquet was served to all present on the lawn of the hotel grounds, a large tent having been erected for the purpose. At the conclusion of the feast post-prandial exercises followed, with State President Frank P. Quinn acting as toastmaster. After a few introductory remarks he introduced Mayor Studley of this city, who welcomed the visitors in a most hearty manner.

The following programme was then given: "Our Trade and Its Interest"—J. B. Sullivan of Bridgeport. Song—Selected—Thomas F. Ahearn. "The Benefit of United Efforts"—John Schumacher of Ansonia. Song—Selected—John J. Kinney. "The Dealer as a Citizen"—Past State President John C. Long. "Our Organization"—Thomas Guest of Waterbury.

CAMP NO. 4, P. O. S. OF A. Entertainment Last Evening—Outing at Merwin's Point Wednesday.

Washington Camp, No. 4, P. O. S. of A. held their regular meeting in their hall in the Courrier building last evening. There were three candidates initiated and seven propositions were received. The president appointed two members as captains and they in turn chose sides for two teams to try and outdo each other in getting the larger number of new members before January 1. The camp has a large membership now and is in a flourishing condition.

After the business session last evening an entertainment was given. The programme was as follows: Solo—Rocked in the Cradle of the Deep—Charles E. Serviss of Camp No. 12. Oration—F. Mills. Piano solo—M. Portell. Patriotic address—Col. Thompson. Violin solo—C. F. Smith. Address—John Boeking. Solo—F. G. Smith.

America—By the Camp. After the entertainment refreshments were served.

The camp has made arrangements for a grand camp fire at Merwin's Point Wednesday evening, August 31. The members will leave the central place at 7:30 o'clock on special cars. There will be a shore supper upon their arrival at the point and a camp fire on the beach afterwards. An orchestra will furnish music during the evening and a grand good time is anticipated. The state board has been invited to attend and the members will have this chance to get acquainted with them. It is expected that fully three hundred will be present and the committee having the affair in charge say "the more the merrier."

ENGLISH IN THE PHILIPPINES.

The Fearfully and Wonderfully Constructed Sentences of the Far East. "English as she is spoke" by foreigners is a fearful and wonderful thing. Even those whose native tongue it is often make havoc with its perplexities; but when a foreigner is turned loose among English roots, something is apt to break. I always reproached myself for laughing at the absurdities of people struggling so earnestly with our idiom, but laugh will come first and the reproach after. Other nations are so courteous to us in our bungles—which are out of all reason, for English speaking people are undoubtedly the poorest linguists on the globe—that it seems very unkind to laugh at their mistakes. If there is anything funnier than my Spanish, seasoned with a French or German or Latin word from my long-forgotten vocabulary, I have yet to hear it. And yet these kindly Filipinos or Spaniards will hear me without a smile, while I mope culpa, give way to visible mirth at their slips.

One of the teachers came home recently in great glee. "I suppose I really am that, but at first when I read a note from one of my Filipino teachers beginning, 'Respectable Lady, I felt almost insulted. Poor thing! You can see she tried so hard and that is very near the Spanish form.'"

"Here's a good one," chimed in a department clerk, "some provincial official put on a pamphlet returned to our office: 'Do not fling and it is taking back to her proceadence.' It suppose he meant the party was not there, so he returned the package to the sender."

"I had a private pupil," said another teacher, "a dignified, middle-aged Filipino, a man of position, and we were riving the changes on verbs. We had the word eat and he slowly evolved, 'She—was—eaten—when—I—came.' I had a bad fit of coughing just then and left the room to compose myself before explaining that, not being a cannibal, he probably meant she was eating."

"One of the Filipino copyists in our office made our chief talk about a 'wooden mortar' when he was meaning to mention a 'wooden mortar,'" said Mr. X.

"That's not so bad. It seems sometimes as though half the men you meet are wooden mortars," said our cynic. "Did you ever fool people with that old catch about the clock striking?"

"No. What is it?"

"There was a clock on one side of the room and a wooden man on the other with a mallet in his hand. Every time he heard the clock strike he struck. How many times would he strike in twelve hours?"

"Oh, that's arithmetic. I can't do that."

"Just add one, two, three and so on up to twelve. That's easy."

"No, that's not it."

"Say that again." (Said again slurring words together.) "Oh, I see, sure. A wooden man couldn't hear, all could he?" (Chorus of oh's.)

"One of the ministers," said a printer, "had an article set up in which he spoke of Muslim theology. It came out Muslim theology. Pretty good definition of much of the stuff. It's Muslim when it isn't cast iron. I've no use for the article at me, for he likes to get me 'riled.'"

"You may talk all you please against theology for that's a man-made thing, but religion every man has in himself, even if he doesn't know it, and he can't get away from it. It may be only a seed now, but some day, somewhere, it will grow and grow."

"Speaking of misused words," said Mr. X, who dislikes "plous talk," "have you noticed some of the signs down town? Evidently the civil service board did not correct the English or the spelling. I saw this sign, and it was an American firm, too—'Good work did.' It is rather rough on a 'native son' to have his dray announcing the 'California Company.' I saw another firm had a placard about C-o-o-u-t-e-s. Hope the goods in his coats were as strong as the spelling. I always wonder, too, why the Golden Gate place is painted a fiery red, and why that man in the English dogcart on a certain harness sign is so carefully hopped in his English laprobe. There doesn't seem to be any immediate danger that he would freeze without it. I heard some Filipino laughing about it and about the funny little windows in some American houses in Ermita. They spy out all the weak places in our armor, you may be sure." Having thus effectually turned the current of conversation, Mr. X stopped, quite out of breath.—Manila Sun.
