any part of closed cars being prohibited. The practice, however, was a common one. CHAPEL STREET BURGLARY. Tailor Store Entered and $500 Extracted. A burglary that was committed early last Sunday morning in Chapel street just cropped out yesterday. The tailoring establishment of I. Weinberg at 1048 Chapel street was entered and a tin box containing some $500 in cash and some checks was taken. This was the returns of Saturday's business which could not be deposited with a bank and had been left at the store. The front and rear doors of the establishment were left wide open by the burglar on his exit. The case was reported to the detective headquarters and Detective McGrath has been on the case. An arrest may be made shortly. MRS. GEORGE ROCKWELL. The many friends of Mrs. George Rockwell will be pained to learn of her sudden death, which occurred early Friday morning at her late residence, No. 7 Lyon street. Mrs. Rockwell was for many years identified with St. Thomas parish in this city, where she has been a constant attendant. She was the sister of Mrs. Peck Sperry, who died in this city about seven years ago. Mrs. Rockwell was in her eighty-first year. She is survived by her husband.

SMOKING STRICTLY PROHIBITED. Patrons of Trolley May No Longer Carry Cigars Into Cars. Ansonia, Sept. 25.—With the placing of the closed trolley cars in use, new signs appear directing that there be no smoking on any part of the car, and forbidding the carrying of a lighted cigar, cigarette or pipe inside any car belonging to the Connecticut Railway and Lighting Company. The man who brings his cigar into the car and holds it between his fingers to keep his hands warm when the frost covers the window panes, and the temperature is down to freezing, will now be in despair. So will the man who braves the icy winds of winter and stands out on the platform puffing on his cigar or pipe, preferring his pipe to the comforts within. It is said that similar notices are being placed in all the cars of the Connecticut Railway and Lighting company over their entire system. Some say that the rule is not a new one, and that the notices only are new, smoking on

Hon. Henry G. Davis of West Virginia has been visiting New York city again. "I enjoy life better to-day than when I was half my present age," he told a newspaper man. This Princess Ena has for her full name Victoria Eugenie Julia Ena of Battenberg and is the prettiest girl in the royal circle of Ferdinand.

There is such a thing as carrying a sad too far, says the London Chronicle. The simple life, for instance, is all very well from the point of view of our western civilization, but it is conceivable that there are places on the earth's surface where the simple life would be de trop, as it were. Yet one of these faddists, on being asked to subscribe toward sending out a missionary to one of the cannibal islands of the Pacific, is reported to have answered, in the most discouraging manner, "Certainly not. Before his departure, the Emperor and his family granted him a special reception, and gave him presents and decorations, including the Order of the Rising Sun, which is seldom bestowed on any one.

The United States is walking all over 'em. "One of the most popular stores in Hull," writes Consul Hamm from the English town of that name, "sells nothing but shoes made in America or on American models. They are shapely, comfortable and durable. They range in price from 10 shillings (about $4), and they compare favorably with the boots and shoes sold in America at the same prices. The basis of their popularity is contained in the following remarks frequently heard from men and women: 'I never wore a well-fitting, comfortable shoe until I put on one of American make.' This is probably the main reason, and not the price of leather; why the boot and shoe trade in England is in an unsatisfactory condition. English boot and shoe manufacturers get their hides under a free trade tariff. The American manufacturers pay a duty of from 15 to 35 per cent. on their imported material. And yet the latter are underselling the former and getting possession of the world's markets."

A GEOGRAPHICAL DIVERGENCE.

We have received the following: To Editor of the Journal and Courier:

Referring to your ably-written article on "Grass," I beg to state that while far from having the pretensions of being able to form the same correct judgment as to quality and healthy growth that some others may have, I nevertheless, in the same modest spirit of your article, do affirm it as my humble opinion (subject to revision) that the best grass grows out Madison way.

Through the spirit of our opinions is identical, the opinions themselves diverge geographically. "But every difference of opinion is not a difference of principle." (See Jefferson's first inaugural address).

I, too, sometimes have occasion to go Wallingford way; and I presume, Mr. Editor, that the words revise and reconsider are in your vocabulary, also. I presume, also, Mr. Editor, that you attended the recent Branford and Guilford fairs. I did, I did, and I, even I myself, did see, while gazing with admiration at other things, fair grass.

We shall find no sour fault with our correspondent's courteously expressed opinion. We know that Madison is a great place for grass, that Farmer Scranton grew and grows there, and that it has other claims. But we must gently yet firmly decline to revise and reconsider our own opinion. That is as final as the end of the old State House was, or as we hope the end of the Cut discussion is. It would not be at all consistent in us to preach about and glory in New Haven's ability to make up her mind, and then practice wavering in our own mind. We persist in the assertion that the best grass grows out Montowese, North Haven and Wallingford way. The "geographical divergence" to which our correspondent so delicately alludes will have to continue so far as we are concerned. Of course we do not insist that our correspondent ought to geographically converge, but we guess he would if he should take a few more looks around the grassy scene. We cordially invite him to do that, and if it converges him we shall feel a little true joy.

SMART GERMANS.

Heavy shipments of goods from Germany are being reported from all the ports of entry. The volume of goods from the Fatherland has been unprecedented for the past two months, and continues without any material let up. In some quarters the great inpouring of German manufactures is believed to have a considerable influence on the surplus of the present month. There has been a gain of $3,500,000 in the customs receipts in September of this year, as compared with the same month a year ago. That figure also represents the amount of the September surplus. "I think a reason can be found for the heavy shipments of goods from Germany," remarked a treasury official. "If inquiry were made, I believe it would appear that the German manufacturers are preparing for the storm which will break during the next few months, and which is bound to have a bad effect on German shippers. There will be a great outcry in this country along in February and March next, when the new German tariff law goes into effect. It was aimed at American agricultural and farm products, and will cut off many millions of trade. There will be a demand for retaliation, and the chances are that a tariff war will ensue. Such a struggle will certainly be precipitated unless it is averted by a reciprocity treaty. But the crafty and long-headed Germans are taking no chances on the future, but are piling their goods into the United States under the existing friendly tariff schedules."

German business men are showing great skill and enterprise in getting their goods inserted into many parts of the world, and it is not surprising that they are taking advantage of our tariff now. But in the long run the United States will doubtless be able to hold its own.

HEALTH, WEALTH AND WISDOM.

Young man, go to the dirt and be healthy, wealthy and wise. Prof. Andrew M. Soule, of the Virginia Agricultural College, has compiled statistics of the live stock industry in the United States which will be a revelation to many. Under the heading of live stock he includes fowls as well as cattle. In his view, no vocation offers greater opportunities than the breeding of stock. In 1899, according to his statement, there were 215,822,338 domestic animals in the United States, of which 17,130,673 were classed as dairy cows, which returned a yearly profit of at least $170,000,000 to their owners. This amount, it is estimated, might be almost doubled by scientific feeding. Here, in Professor Soule's opinion, is a good field for young men who are looking for a chance to establish themselves in a profitable business.

Professor Soule points out that Chicago, the metropolis of the Middle West, would sink into insignificance commercially if it were not for its trade in live stock and its manufactures, among which are included the packing and curing of meats. The wholesale trade of Chicago in 1904 was $1,781,000,000. The live-stock transactions aggregated $300,000,000; poultry products, butter and eggs, $261,000,000; slaughtering and packing, $330,000,000. The aggregate is $991,000,000, and if Chicago were deprived of this trade its commercial importance would dwindle greatly.

Americans are prone to think that their country owes its greatness and prosperity chiefly to its manufactures. Professor Soule gives some figures concerning this which are suggestive. In 1899 there were 10,851,105 persons engaged in agriculture and 7,085,962 in manufactures. There were 512,329 manufacturing establishments with a total capitalization of $9,835,096,000, a large proportion of which was watered. The net value of the manufactures, deducting the cost of crude materials, was $5,851,545,000. The value of farm products and live stock in 1899 was $4,729,118,000. The manufacturer would have enjoyed little prosperity if the farm products had been reduced by 50 per cent. The moral of Professor Soule's article is that the United States needs more farmers, and that the right man in agriculture is sure of his reward.

A BAD SITUATION IN BOMBAY.

Bombay is paying for some things. The prevalence of plague, cholera, and other dirt diseases in Bombay is causing some awakening of the public conscience with regard to the miserable condition in which the working classes of the city are living, or rather perishing. Mill owners and others are beginning to realize that it is useless to hope for lower death rates until the situation is improved. Formerly the hours of labor in the Bombay mills were limited by the duration of the daylight and did not exceed twelve hours. Now, however, that electric light has been introduced, the work can be prolonged indefinitely, and consequently some of the mill hands are now kept at their tasks for fourteen or fifteen hours a day, and this with a temperature in the shade of from 85 to 95 degrees. Finally, when these wretched people have finished their work, they go home to jerry-built houses of so miserable a character that they are equally insanitary and unsafe. A member of the Bombay corporation pointed out at a recent meeting that last year 202 notices were issued by the municipal authorities for the removal of unsafe buildings; that in the last five years 122 buildings had collapsed, killing twenty-six and injuring thirty persons; that nowadays frame buildings in Bombay are made with inferior wood, the work is scamped, and the structures are shaky and jerry-built. Some idea of the insanitary condition of these hovels may be gathered from the fact that a by-law was proposed recently to establish forty superficial feet and 300 cubic feet as the legal minimum of space for each inhabitant. But to enforce this rule it was calculated that it would be necessary to displace 255,000 persons out of a total population of 718,650. Of this population of Bombay the greater part—namely, 89.56 per cent.—occupy one-room tenements, and the average number of persons living in each room is 4.21. That cholera and plague should prevail in no wise surprising.

The mall is full of letters. And the soup is full of peas. And the sugar in the coffee. And the yard is full of trees; The fields are full of stubble. And there's grass upon the ground— But the world is full of trouble. If we only look around.

The corn is full of kernels. There are lilies in the brooks; The towns are full of people. There are stories in the books; The orchard's full of apples. And the meadow's full of hay— But what troubles we discover. If we're only built that way.

The hills are full of blossoms. And the trees are full of leaves. The meadow's full of clover. And the fields are full of sheaves; The bread is full of flour. And the rain is damp and wet— But how much there is to fret us. If we really want to fret.

FOLLOWING A TROUT BROOK.

It was a September day, intensely bright, with a fresh wind which sent a fleet of soft, white clouds scudding swiftly toward the east, across a sky of gentian blue. I had been walking all morning along the wooded ridge of Crocydon Mountain, hunting for signs of moose. I had been unsuccessful in my quest, but scarcely disappointed, since I had seen and enjoyed a dozen interesting sights, including a hollow-troof of flying squirrels, a snow-shoe rabbit, a barred owl and a nest of wood-mice in a mossy stump. I had stopped for lunch on the rocky, treeless summit of Old Bald, the highest point of the range, and now, in the early afternoon, had reached the Mountain Marsh, a dark, spruce-girdled slough, whence my course lay westward and homeward down the mountain side.

At the northwestern corner of the marsh, a little water filtered through the soil, dripped into a patch of bright green moss, trickled on into a bed of spruce needles, and trickled out again into a little hollow beneath a fallen tree. Into this hollow, so many leaves had fallen that they almost hid the bucket-full of water it contained, but at one spot on its rim, slightly lower than the rest, was crossed by a silver thread of water. It had already worn for itself a tiny channel, and down this it ran through without sufficient force to move the little pebbles from between which it had washed the soil. Forty feet lower down on the hillside, another little rill of similar origin, joined the first, and with united force they pushed aside a tuft of coarse grass growing close to the channel and moved down the hill with ever-increasing speed. This was the beginning of a trout brook, and as it was going in my direction I followed it. Not far below, a third tiny streamlet pushed out from beneath a hemlock root and joined forces with the brook, which seemed to announce the fact with a rather noisy splashing as it leaped from a jutting stone into a clear pool, whence it raced over a pebbly bottom, and turned sharply round a rock projecting from the mountain side.

HAIR MACHINES.

THEY always sell best in the Fall for several reasons. The law is off on mince pies after the first frost and even hair is a little more reasonable, often masquerading as croquettes and other savory things. The Food Chopper becomes a hard worked friend of the cook now-a-days and pays its cost in a week, for it chops everything except the kindling wood. We have the four best kinds that are made, each one has its particular friends, and no one sells them lower than we.

One can hardly believe, without actually watching its progress, how quickly such a trout brook grows. In a distance of less than a mile, this stream I was following had grown from a few drops trickling through the moss, to a noisy, splashing, spurting, foaming force of water, such as would delight the heart of any lover of the fly-rod.

Presently I came to a spot where a large boulder literally split the brook in two, turning one stream to the right and the other to the left, to meet again some fifty yards below, forming a little island. The latter was covered with trees, and on the ground beneath them were ferns and mosses of many kinds. I had been almost unconsciously looking for a spot in which to lie down and watch the brook, and this green little island seemed the very place. I sprang across the stream—it was less than six feet wide—and lay at full length upon the moss with my elbows resting on a flatish stone and with my chin in the palms of my hands. I was looking up stream and could see three of the tiny waterfalls I had lately passed. The nearest was the largest and the most beautiful, the small cascade of sparkling water leaping from the edge of a shelving rock to a clear pool fully two feet below. From the bank and close to the fall many ferns were growing, and as they were pelted with the spray, they glistened and nodded. Above the sound of the water, I could hear the loud tapping of a pileated woodpecker, and as I turned my head to try and get a glimpse of him, I saw a deer walking among the trees. He was evidently a fawn of the present year, but he had lost his spots and his red coat, and was already attired in winter gray. He sauntered along, now dropping his head to nibble a tuft of grass; now lifting it to browse on the leaves of some twig above his head. Soon he reached the brook, and stood, just above the nearest waterfall, quite unconscious of any presence but his own. He sniffed the water, took a drink, and then proceeded, with his toilet. First he raised his right hind leg, and craning his neck backwards to meet it, daintily scratched his ear with his hoof. Then he licked his side with his long tongue, rubbed his face up and down his fore leg, and then raising his hind foot again, stretched it as far forward as possible, and licked the leg as far back as he could reach. Then he gaped, as though tired from his exertions, and dropping on his knees, lay down on the moss by the side of the brook, and calmly chewed the cud.

For many minutes I watched the fawn, and had about decided that I should have to move in order to reach home by daylight, when I became aware of something moving below the little waterfall. Whatever it was, I saw it only indistinctly out of the corner of my eye, and turned my head to get a better look. Beside the pool into which the water splashed, there grew a large spruce tree which partly overhung the water. Just below it there was a hollow in the bank, extending back among the partly overgrown roots of the trees. In the shadow of this hollow, some small white object passed, and at once was followed by another. Both objects passed out of sight; but I watched, hoping for their reappearance, and in a few minutes I was rewarded by seeing one of them return. This time it came right out into the sunlight, and I saw that it was the white patch on the throat of a large mink. He ran to the edge of the water, sat up on his hind legs to the full height of his long body sniffed the back to the hollow under the bank, around the roots of the spruce and out air suspiciously, and dived back under the bank. Soon he came in sight again, and close behind him was another one much smaller and doubtless the female. He seemed to be trying to keep out of her way for she was bent on catching him, which she presently did, and grappled with him. Both rolled over and over each other, playfully biting and clawing as two kittens might have done. Then they jumped to their feet and began chasing one another again, down to the water (Continued on Page Five.)

Have you ever seen a hen Sneaking round a chicken pen, With an air of one forsook, With a sad and hunted look, With a crossness in her cry And a warning in her eye? Watch her closely, then, I beg; She is going to lay an egg. Have you ever seen a pote With the dust upon his coat, With a melancholy face Like a servant's in disgrace, With a wild, unholly eye And an oft-repeated sigh? Watch him fret and fume and foam; He is going to write a poem. —Newark Evening News.

THEY always sell best in the Fall for several reasons. The law is off on mince pies after the first frost and even hair is a little more reasonable, often masquerading as croquettes and other savory things. The Food Chopper becomes a hard worked friend of the cook now-a-days and pays its cost in a week, for it chops everything except the kindling wood. We have the four best kinds that are made, each one has its particular friends, and no one sells them lower than we.

raised his voice until it was almost a shout. During his testimony Mr. Schiff made the charge that the minutes of the finance committee of the Equitable regarding a certain meeting were false. He later qualified this, however, by saying if the transaction under consideration, one in Union Pacific preferred, was actually made he did not hear it, though he was present at the meeting.

"I was all Hyde," said Mr. Schiff, all Hyde and Alexander. Mr. Hyde wrote the message regarding the offers made by my firm for participation in syndicates. Mr. Hyde signed all the receipts. Mr. Hyde wrote all the letters."

In the matter of the James H. Hyde & Associates' syndicate Mr. Schiff hotly accused Mr. Hyde of trying to shield himself. He said the position of a director in the Equitable was that of a negligible quantity and that the directors were mere figureheads.

"I have granted many favors," he said; "I have not done as a director of the Equitable any wrong of commission. I may have done some of omission. It is a case of hindsight and not one of foresight. But my conscience frees me of any bond. I have been as good a director as I know how to be and I did my duty."

Financial.

YESTERDAY'S STOCK MARKET.

Remarkable Resistance to the Squeeze in Money. New York, Sept. 29.—To-day's stock market showed remarkable resistance to the squeeze in the money market. As loans made at the stock exchange on Friday carry over until Monday, this was practically the last day of the month for stock exchange borrowers and consequently making up day previous to the quarterly settlement of October 1st.

The heavy drop in sterling exchange here to-day awakened hopes of a revival of the import movement of gold. The rise in the New York money rate induced very heavy offerings of bankers' bills in the exchange market, and there was a liberal replenishment also of the supply of cotton bills. The resulting fall in prices of checks on London amounted to a quarter of a cent in the pound. The money rate showed a tendency to settle about six per cent late in the day after having run up to 6-1/2 per cent at one time and having fluctuated below that figure, with a belated flurry to 7 per cent.

Bonds were irregular. Total sales per value were $2,764,000. United States bonds were all unchanged on call.

STOCK MARKET FEATURES

CALL MONEY AT SEVEN PER CENT. FOR A TIME.

Despite Which Stocks Rose Steadily Nearly All Along the Line—Reaction Talk Not Realized—Easier Money Coming—The Rise in U. S. Bonds—The New Arrangement of U. S. Rubber Stock.

The stock market rose steadily in the face of a rise on call money to seven per cent., the highest of the year. With call money's price so well up, many expected prices to fall, but the market ignored the money question.

Reading second preferred and Railway Steel Springs common, for individual reasons rose 4 to 5 points. New York Central more than recovered its 1-1-4 per cent. dividend, and other shares rose 1-4 to 3-4 above Thursday's closing.

The reason the market ignored the rise in call money was because the rise is expected not to hold. Cheaper money is expected next week.

It is expected, however, that money will rule for the next few weeks at least. Talk on Southern Pacific, Union Pacific and Canadian Pacific is still bullish. In Boston yesterday 207 was bid for New Haven stock, and 208 is asked. There has practically been no trading at all since the conditions of the bond issue were made public.

President Vreeland, of the Metropolitan, says: 'I do not see much chance for an extension of the surface lines in New York, the development of transportation facilities in the future will be chiefly underground, I see no reason why there should not be an underground road in every important avenue, and think it not unlikely that such will be the case at no very distant time.'

The banks have lost $6,679,000 to the Sub-Treasury this week, and the total cash loss is estimated as high as $8,100,000. An unfavorable bank statement is in prospect to-day unless the trust companies come to the rescue.

The Central Leather company announces that hereafter it will allow a discount of but 1 per cent. off ten days, a radical change from the long standing discounts of 5 per cent. off thirty days and 4 per cent. off sixty days.

The increase in the dividend on Railway Steel Springs common led to active buying of the stock on a rise of over 4 points. It has never been above 40 before.

The rise in Reading second preferred was naturally accounted for on the theory that the company would soon exercise its option to retire that issue along the lines provided for in the plan of reorganization, namely, by allotting it equal proportions of common and preferred stock.

The rise in Consolidated Gas was based on the decision of the company to make a ninety-cent rate. This is expected to check gas legislation this winter. The investigation and the cut in the dividend were responsible for a 25-point decline in the stock.

Holders of the Cincinnati, Hamilton and Dayton 5, 6 and 7 per cent. consolidated mortgage sinking fund bonds due on October 1, who in preference to receiving cash for the same may wish to exchange them for the company's 4 per cent. refunding bonds due July, 1954, may do so at 96 and interest. The maturing bonds will be paid at the office of the Central Trust company.

Wall street has had a fine trading market this month, especially for any one who had the courage of bullish convictions to buy back on reactions the stock that he sold on bulges.

The United States Steel Corporation can, from the evidence on its books and the pressure of new requirements, see business as far ahead as 1907. The steel mill capacity of most of its plants is sold up to the end of next year and without taking another order, it is said that the rail business booked would suffice to run all its rail plants to the limit up to October of next year.

New York bankers said yesterday that the secretary of the treasury, Leslie M. Shaw, has given another illustration of his particular fitness for the office he holds by his offer to refund the 3 and 4 per cent. United States bonds under the law of March 14, 1900. According to the official notice, the secretary will, on October 2, resume refunding operations under the act quoted, 'receiving 4 per cent. bonds of the funded loan of 1905-1913 at a valuation equal to their present worth, to yield an annual income of 2-1-4 per cent. and issuing in place thereof 2 per cent. bonds, consols of 1930, at 101, subject to discontinuance at any time without notice.'

On the above subject the National City bank of New York, which of late has largely monopolized the business in government bonds, said in its last bond circular: 'A general upward movement in prices marked the course of the government bond market during August. The general situation was very similar to that of a year ago. With few bonds coming into the market, even moderate buying for circulation purposes was sufficient to advance quotations. The 'twos' of 1930, which sold at 104 the first of the month, were selling a full point higher at the close. The 'fours' of 1907 and the 'threes' of 1908 advanced 5-8. The 'fours' of 1925 on continued investment buying sold up 1-3-8, to 124, which places them on a 1-1-2 per cent. basis.'

Announcement was made yesterday that the United States Rubber company had made application before the New York stock exchange listing committee to have additional stock of the company listed as follows: First preferred, $40,000,000. Second preferred, $10,000,000. Common stock, $25,000,000.

It is assumed this increase is for the purpose of taking over the stock and property of the Rubber Goods Manufacturing company, which deal has been on for some time. It has been rumored for some time that the Rubber company would pay a dividend on the common stock at the directors' meeting in October. This new move, however, on the part of the company places so much stock ahead of the common that serious doubts are entertained in financial circles as to whether the dividend would really be declared on the common stock.

THE COMING FOOD SHOW

EFFECTIVE WORK FOR THE SANITARY ARRANGEMENTS.

Armour & Co. to Have a Big Exhibit—Other Exhibits—Manager Rowe in Town. Secretary Linsley of the New Haven Business Men's association last night announced that the association has made arrangements with the Sulpho-Napthol Co. of Boston to care for the sanitary arrangements at the coming Food and Industrial exposition to be held at the armory the 12th to the 21st of next month.

The continued use of such a place for nine days' time renders it imperative that some action be taken to keep the atmosphere of the hall in the best possible condition. To aid the ventilation facilities of the hall, the disinfectants of the Sulpho-Napthol Co. will be used and the care of the place will be under the direct personal supervision of an expert from the company's plant.

Probably the last large contract to be signed is that with the Armour & Co. of Chicago. This well known packing house will put on an exhibition a display of its best extracts. It has engaged one of the largest display spaces in the armory and its exhibit will be a feature.

The manufacturers of the celebrated Cluquet Club brand of drinks, such as ginger ale and the like, have secured a large space for a display. The General Specialty Co. of Philadelphia also has secured space and will show their line of household labor savers, such as patent tack pullers and similar articles.

Manager Rowe of the exposition was in town yesterday and is perfecting plans for the opening of the big exposition next month. He expressed himself as well satisfied with the indications for a successful exposition.

THE VALUE OF CHARCOAL.

Few People Know How Useful It is in Preserving Health and Beauty. Nearly everybody knows that charcoal is the safest and most efficient disinfectant and purifier in nature, but few realize its value when taken into the human system for the same cleansing purpose.

Charcoal is a remedy that the more you take of it the better; it is not a drug at all, but simply absorbs the gases and impurities always present in the stomach and intestines and carries them out of the system.

Charcoal sweetens the breath after smoking, drinking or after eating onions and other odorous vegetables. Charcoal effectually clears and improves the complexion, it whitens the teeth and further acts as a natural and eminently safe cathartic.

It absorbs the injurious gases which collect in the stomach and bowels; it disinfects the mouth and throat from the poison of catarrh.

All druggists sell charcoal in one form or another, but probably the best charcoal and the most for the money is in Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges; they are composed of the finest powdered Willow charcoal, and other harmless antiseptics in tablet form or rather in the form of large, pleasant tasting lozenges, the charcoal being mixed with honey. The daily use of these lozenges will soon tell in a much improved condition of the general health, better complexion, sweeter breath and purer blood, and the beauty of it is, that no possible harm can result from their continued use, but, on the contrary, a great benefit.

ENTERTAINMENTS.

Hyperion Theatre. Grace Studdard will be at the Hyperion Theatre this evening, appearing in the new comic opera, 'Lady Teazle.' The piece proved sensationally successful in New York, where it enjoyed a three months' season at the Messrs. Shubert's Casino, that popular home of comic opera, the birthplace of most of the famous American comic operas and musical comedies of the past twenty-five years. 'Lady Teazle' is the youngest of the Casino family, and, according to the Gotham critics, one of the brightest of its long list of productions. It is described by the advance agent as 'a straight comic opera with all the lavish finishings of modern musical comedy,' and it is to come with the original cast and chorus of one hundred people, including, of course, the main

HAMDEN DEMOCRATS NOMINATE.

NEXT WEEK'S ATTRACTION.

Mr. Daniel Ryan and a carefully selected company of players in a series of standard and Shakespearean plays, elegantly mounted and superbly presented, will be the attraction at the New Haven Theatre for one week, commencing next Monday evening, October 2.

The opening play will be Shakespeare's great tragedy, 'Othello.' In this play Mr. Ryan gives an artistic interpretation of a difficult role.

Tuesday afternoon and evening Mr. E. H. Sothern's greatest success, written by Mr. Robert N. Stephens, 'An Enemy to the King,' will be presented. For Wednesday evening and Thursday matinee 'Macbeth' is announced.

features of the Broadway production, and the sixty young women forming the much-talked-of chorus of beautiful Casino girls. 'Lady Teazle,' it seems, is not altogether a mere vehicle to exploit the physical charms of its beautiful star, but is judged a really excellent piece of work. Its story emanates from Richard Dainley Sheridan's old English comedy, 'The School for Scandal,' and was prepared for comic opera purposes by John Kendrick Bangs and R. S. Penfield, with music by A. Baldwin Sloane.

SCENE IN LADY TEAZLE.

VIOLA ALLEN IN 'THE TOAST OF THE TOWN.' When Viola Allen presents 'The Toast of the Town' at the Hyperion Theatre next Tuesday and Wednesday, she will be supported by an exceedingly fine company, including Miss Isabel who have been the hit of the vaudeville circuit this season are to appear in their clever musical fantasy 'A Bit of Dresden China;' Carlin and Otto, real German comedians; the Zinzari trio, who come direct from London, England, having been with the Carl Rosi opera company; Holman, Hayward and Hayward in 'Marriage is Sublime;' Griff brothers, strong-jawed gymnasts; Miles and Antrim and the electrograph will go to make up part of the bill with a new series of motion pictures.

NEW HAVEN THEATRE.

The New Haven Theatre was crowded last night to see Lottie Williams and her fine supporting company in Charles E. Blaney's play, 'My Toy-boy Girl.' The plot affords bountiful comedy. A side issue and a counterplot is introduced in the attempted passing off of a young mulatto on Josie's uncle as his own lost child, an illegitimate daughter. The character of Josie woven into this thrilling romance is a masterpiece of dramatic craftsmanship, and has given great opportunity for elaborate mountings that are a revela-
