OCTOGENARIAN FOR THE UNITED STATES SENATE

GOVERNOR WARFIELD OF MARYLAND APPOINTS THE AGED W. P. WHYTE

To Fill Vacancy Caused by the Death of Senator Gorman—New Senator is Eighty-two Years Old—Enters the Senate for the Third Time—Twice Appointed to Serve Unexpired Terms. Baltimore, June 8.—Governor Edwin Warfield to-night announced from the executive mansion that he had appointed William Pinkney Whyte to fill the senatorial vacancy caused by Senator Gorman's death.

WALKOVER IN SINGLES

But Miss Sutton Proves Weak in the Ladies' Semi-Finals. Liverpool, June 8.—The fact that Miss May Sutton, of Pasadena, Cal., was given a walkover in the semi-final round of the women's singles championship of the north counties robbed the proceedings at Alburgh to-day of much of their interest. The American was to oppose Miss V. Pinckney, of Salisbury, but the latter was unable to turn out. Later, however, Miss Sutton appeared with Mrs. Hillyard in the semi-final round of the ladies' doubles against Misses Douglas and Thomson, in which contest the American further proved that her strong point is not in doubles. As in the mixed match on Thursday, she did not show that resourcefulness which is characteristic of her singles game. She was especially weak at the net, with the result that Misses Douglas and Thomson qualified for the final, two sets to love.

HARLEY SEES POPE

Received in Private Audience—Presents Peter's Pence. Rome, June 8.—Archbishop Farley, of New York, was received in private audience to-day by Pope Pius X. The pontiff listened with interest to the prelate's report of conditions in the archdiocese of New York, and at its conclusion expressed his appreciation of the zeal for the faith demonstrated by the results shown of the efforts of the Roman Catholic clergy and laity of New York. "You are," said the pope to Archbishop Farley, "next door to us. New York has become one of the nearest dioceses to Rome through fast steamers."

DAVIS CUP TOURNAMENT

American Tennis Players Win Another Game in England. Newport, England, June 8.—The final round for the Dwight F. Davis challenge cup advanced another stage this afternoon when Holcombe Ward and Raymond D. Little, Americans, defeated A. F. Wilding, New Zealand, and Los Poldvin, Australia. In the doubles play three sets to love and made their chances of opposing England in the challenge round almost certain. The weakest player of the quartette was Wilding, who broke down completely after the first set. At the beginning of the match the Americans played at a halcyon and guarded Wilding. These tactics seemed to upset the New Zealander, who became flustered. Ward was right at the top of his game in service but neither he nor Little has as yet displayed form likely to give the holders much anxiety. The play to-day lasted sixty-three minutes. The scores were 7-5, 6-2, 6-4.

HACKETT IN FINALS

Will Have to Meet Canadian Crack for Championship. New York, June 8.—Fast play in the semi-finals to-day brought H. H. Hackett, the old Yale title holder, and F. G. Anderson, the ex-Canadian champion, through to the final round of the championship singles of the metropolitan lawn tennis tournament. Hackett defeated the indoor player, Kelley, by two sets to one. Anderson rather easily won over Torrance, of Englewood. In the doubles the Hinck brothers of Montclair won a lively match against H. Hoams and Inman, the former the younger brother of the old-time Princeton football player, "Shep" Hoams. The summary of the championship singles follows: Semi-final round—Frederick G. Anderson, Kings County Lawn Tennis Club, defeated Harry Torrance, Englewood Field Club, 6-1, 6-2; Harold H. Hackett, West Side Lawn Tennis Club, defeated C. C. Kelley, West Side Lawn Tennis Club, 6-1, 1-6, 6-8.

WRECK OF AN EXPRESS

One Killed and Twenty-two Others Injured. St. Louis, June 8.—Fireman F. H. Richards, of St. Louis, was killed and twenty-two persons were injured to-day in a collision between St. Louis-Memphis passenger trains on the Iron Mountain railroad near Mengo, 115 miles south of St. Louis. The most seriously hurt are: Louis Taylor, of St. Louis, engineer of north-bound train; Samuel Cohen, messenger, St. Louis; Mrs. J. L. Lanier, Memphis, Tenn. The south-bound train crashed into the other train, which was pulling onto a siding to let the other pass.

PENN. R. R. STARTS INQUIRY

ASKS OFFICERS AND EMPLOYEES FOR INFORMATION. Circular Sent Out Requesting Statements as to Discrimination in Distribution of Coal Cars and of Irregularities of Employes—Denied That Road Encouraged Its Men to Become Interested in Coal Companies. Philadelphia, June 8.—The special committee of the board of directors of the Pennsylvania railroad company to investigate charges of discrimination in the distribution of coal cars and of irregularities of employes as revealed before the interstate commerce commission, to-day sent out to all officers and several thousand employes of the company two circulars requesting information upon the matters under investigation. Besides the officers and employes of the Pennsylvania railroad proper, the circulars were sent to persons in similar positions on the Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington railroad, Northern Central railway, West Jersey and Sea Shore railroad, Pennsylvania company, Pittsburgh, Cincinnati, Chicago and St. Louis railway, Vandalla railroad, Grand Rapids and Indiana railway, and Cleveland, Akron and Columbus railway. The circulars are endorsed by President Cassatt as follows: "Officers and employes receiving this circular are hereby directed to answer the inquiries of the special committee fully and without reserve."

Philadelphia, June 8.—At the conclusion of to-day's session the interstate commerce commission suspended its inquiry into the relations of railroads with coal and oil interests until next Tuesday. Probably the most important feature of to-day's session was the voluntary testimony of J. McLellan of Blairsville, Pa., contradicting that of previous witnesses who said that it had been the policy of the Pennsylvania Railroad company to encourage its employes to become interested in coal companies on the lines of the road.

Mr. McLellan said the impression had gone out that the practice was sanctioned by Frank Thompson, a former president of the road, now dead, and he desired to place on record Mr. Thompson's policy. While he was in the employ of the railroad company, Mr. McLellan said he was offered stock by Captain Alfred Hicks. He consulted President Thompson as to the propriety of accepting it, and Mr. Thompson advised him to refuse the stock, telling him that his honor and character were worth more than stock secured in that manner. Mr. McLellan also presented in evidence a letter from President Thompson advising him not to accept the stock.

Robert Kelso Cassatt, son of President Cassatt, denied the statement made by S. F. Potter, president of the Donongoe Coal and Coke company, that the Keystone company's operation had been favored in the distribution of cars. He also stated that the Keystone company was not a "Cassatt concern" as had been repeatedly stated.

Another Grifter Dismissed. Philadelphia, June 8.—Joseph K. Alken, chief clerk to the superintendent of the Monongahela division of the Pennsylvania railroad, was dismissed to-day by direction of President Cassatt. In his testimony yesterday before the interstate commerce commission Alken said that while his salary had averaged between $30 to $325 per month, he owned nearly $75,000 worth of coal stock. He admitted having received checks from coal companies and also gifts from company stores.

GREAT WIND AND RAIN STORM SWEEPS ONTARIO

IMMENSE DAMAGE CAUSED IN CITIES OF THE PROVINCE

Oak and Maple Trees on the Principal Streets of Hamilton Cut Off at the Base as Cleanly as Though by a Saw—Forty Buildings in the Course of Construction and Some Just Finished Blown Down—Panic at the Race Track. Hamilton, June 8.—A terrific wind and rain storm passed over Ontario from one end of the southern peninsula to the other to-day, demolishing buildings, uprooting trees and leveling the telegraph and telephone lines. Nothing like an accurate estimate of the damage caused by the storm can be given to-night. The storm struck this city at 4:35 this afternoon and for twenty minutes the wind tore through the streets at the rate of eighty-five miles an hour. Immense oak and maple trees on the principal streets were cut off at the base as clearly as though by a saw. The street car service was suspended for four hours. Forty buildings in course of construction and some that had been finished were blown down. The roof was blown off the Hamilton Vinegar works and a wing of the Hamilton club was razed to the ground.

Reports from the rich fruit belt east and west of Hamilton state that the damage to fruit trees will reach many thousands of dollars. This was ladies' day at the race track and the grand stand was crowded with women when the storm broke. The horses were parading past the stand for a second race, but were sent back to the paddock. When the wind reached such a velocity that it threatened to wreck the stand, a panic seized the crowd. The women screamed and huddled together and many of the men climbed over the fence into the infield where they laid flat upon the ground in the drenching rain.

Nothing has been heard from Paris, Woodstock and London, cities west of here, in the direct path of the storm. A large number of people in the city sustained slight injuries, but so far as known no one was killed.

Detroit, Mich., June 8.—Eastern Ontario was swept by a terrific wind and rain storm this afternoon and all wires connecting this city and points east of Chapman, about sixty miles from here, was cut off. Chatham suffered severely from the storm, which unroofed houses, blew down trees, felled wires and filled the streets with debris, but no one was seriously hurt.

A torrential rainstorm, accompanied by a forty mile wind swept Detroit just before 6 o'clock this evening. Trees were felled all over the city, causing severe damage to wires and putting several hundred telephones out of commission and stopping several street cars by broken trolley wires. Unconfirmed reports of loss of life on the river were current to-night. One of those reports was that eight lives were lost on the river near Wolfe, a resort on the Canadian shore a mile above the head of Belle Isle; another was that a child had been picked up by the wind and swept off the Belle Isle bridge.

Both the Western Union and Postal Telegraph companies were making desperate but unsuccessful efforts early in the night to reach interior Canadian points. Long distance telephone service east of Chatham is also cut off.

Both telegraph companies reported that the prospects of reaching Canadian points to-night were very poor. Reports from the eastern part of the state tell of a severe storm with considerable property loss, but no loss of life.

EXCITEMENT ON CENTER GREEN

Girls Claim They Were Insulted During K. of C. Festivities. Some little excitement was aroused on the center green last evening as the crowd was leaving at the close of the band concert. There were no arrests because the culprits were able to escape in the crowd.

According to the story of some girls who were prominent in the affair, they had been tormented and insulted by Italians who were among the crowds. One girl struck her tormentor and that began the trouble. Patrolman Hope was the only police officer in the vicinity at the time, and he rushed into the crowd and forced his way to the scene of the difficulty. He made a grab at one of the Italians, but the latter managed to escape. The girls were sent to the central station, followed by a mob of curious persons. From there they were taken through the city hall out on to Church street so as to avoid the crowd, and sent to their homes. They belonged to respectable families.

Meanwhile the people who crowded Court street from the police station to Church street were dispersed by Sergeant Gibson.

WOMAN KILLED BY UNKNOWN MAN

New York, June 8.—Mrs. Alice Kinman, a widow, forty years of age, living at 244 Washington avenue, the Bronx, was killed by an unknown man at her home to-night. The woman responded to the doorbell and was struck down with a blunt weapon. She died shortly afterwards at a hospital. The police have no clue to her assailant, who escaped. No motive for the assault upon the woman is known. Her family is said to be well connected.

NO MORE SUNDAY BASEBALL

New York, June 8.—There will be no more Sunday baseball where admission is charged or any contribution taken up in Greater New York until the courts decide upon the question of its legality. This announcement was made by Police Commissioner Egan on a 30-day order after he had issued instructions to all the police inspectors in the five boroughs forbidding Sunday games.

TO INSPECT TINNED MEAT FOR BRITISH ARMY

London, June 8.—The officer selected by War Secretary Haldane to proceed to the United States and inspect all tins of meat intended for the British Army, is Lieutenant Colonel Percy Eysa Hobbs, chief instructor of the army service corps school of instruction at Aldershot. He will proceed to America shortly.

FIRST GOLD THIS SEASON FROM YUKON

Seattle, Wash., June 8.—Bringing about $290,000 in treasure, the first shipment since navigation opened on the Yukon river, the Alaskan Steamship company's steamer Dolphin arrived in port to-day with fifty-three passengers.

CRASHED THROUGH BUILDING

Great Tank Falls in Pittsburgh Injuring Seven Persons. Pittsburgh, Pa., June 8.—A 10,000 gal. ion water tank crashed down through the three story brick building at 375-545 Liberty avenue late this afternoon, causing the roof wall to fall out and injuring seven persons so that they had to be taken to hospitals. The building is occupied by John Fite, a wholesale butter and egg merchant; S. M. Petty, wall paper, and the T. S. Mercer & Co., wholesale boot and shoes.

WOMEN AT THE WHITE HOUSE ON SMOOT CASE

NATIONAL LEAGUE OF ORGANIZATIONS GO IN BODY. Received by the President—Representing Ten Million Women They Present to Him Resolutions Demanding the Removal of the Senator from Utah—He Falls to Indicate What Action He Will Take.

Washington, June 8.—That Reed Smoot of Utah should no longer be permitted to hold his seat in the United States senate, was the unanimous sentiment of the National League of Women's organization declared at a special meeting in this city to-day, which was presided over by Mrs. Frederick Schöff of Philadelphia, who is president of the Mothers' congress.

Later the delegates proceeded to the White house in a body and were received by President Roosevelt.

The president received the delegates in the east room of the White house. They were introduced to him by Mrs. Schöff. She explained to the president that they represented 10,000,000 women banded together in various organizations throughout the union and that, among the delegates present, fifteen different national organizations of women were represented.

Mrs. Margaret Dye Ellis of Newark, N. J., presented to the president the resolutions adopted by the league.

President Roosevelt received the delegation, but did not indicate what action he might take in the matter.

A copy of the resolutions was presented also to Vice President Fairbanks, as president of the senate.

MEDICAL CONVENTION OVER

Adjourns to Meet Next Year at Atlantic City. Boston, June 8.—The fifty-seventh annual session of the American Medical association was adjourned to-day at the conclusion of a four days' convention in this city. The next annual session will be held at Atlantic City, N. J.

Most of the 10,000 physicians who came from all sections of the country to attend the sessions will spend a few more days in New England before returning to their homes. Excursions to points of historical and scenic interest will be made by many.

The business of the session was concluded this afternoon when a number of the sections held their final meetings.

During the four days that the session lasted there have been a number of general meetings and nearly 100 sectional meetings. Several hundred physicians and surgeons have read papers and there have been general discussions on almost every topic known to medical science.

SWEDEN WILL NOT SEND DELEGATE TO CORONATION OF HANNOVER VII.

Christiania, June 8.—Sweden will not be represented at the coronation of King Haakon VII. on June 22. The Swedish government desires that it be understood that this decision is not the result of ill will or as a breach of friendly intercourse, but that it is dictated out of regard for King Oscar's personal feelings. The situation has no historic parallel, but it is considered here as quite natural that King Oscar should not permit a member of his dynasty to assist at the coronation of his successor in the sovereignty of a portion of his former kingdom.

The governmental Verlags Gang comments on the incident in this spirit, saying that Sweden's absence in the circumstances is not a symptom that she is unwilling to retain cordial relations with Norway.

HIGHEST AVERAGE EVER MADE HERE

Portland, Me., June 8.—It was officially announced to-day that the highest average made by gunners in the United States coast artillery was made yesterday during mortar battery target practice at Fort McKinley. The new record is an average of 75 per cent. made by the gunners of the 221 and 24th companies. The previous record was 62 per cent.

CZAR SUMMONS HIS ADVISORS TO PETERHOFF

POPULAR BELIEF IN IMMUNITY OF CHANGE OF MINISTRY STRENGTHENED.

Alleged Plot to Jettison Premier Gorevsky—Government's Weakness in the Lower House Shows by a Test Vote on the Demand of the Workmen Peasant Group for the Immediate Consideration of the Death Penalty Abolition Bill.

St. Petersburg, June 8.—The popular expectation that a change of ministry is imminent is fostered by the simultaneous departure of Premier Gorevsky, several leading members of the council of the empire and other trusted advisors of Emperor Nicholas for a conference at Peterhof this afternoon, though the connection of this conference with the tenure of office of the ministry remains to be proved.

Peter B. Struve's paper, the Duma, to-day prints a version of an alleged plot to jettison Gorevsky, after which Emperor Nicholas at first decided to form a ministry entirely from officials of the members of the parliamentary majority, but later, under pressure from General Trepoft, determined to retain the premiership in the hands of M. Kovtsov, the present minister of finance.

The Associated Press learns that it is true that the government is seriously considering bowing to the storm so far as to adopt, to a limited extent, the principle of expropriation. In this programme forced expropriation will be granted only in exceptional cases—for example, when land necessary to consolidate scattered peasant holdings is otherwise unobtainable. This slight concession is a first but definite step towards rapprochement; but it is doubtful if the conservative leaders of the conservative democratic party, however desirous of finding a common ground of meeting, dare abandon a single iota of the programme drafted at the last congress of the party.

The rejection of the demand of the workmen peasant group for immediate consideration of the death-penalty abolition bill, in defiance of the ministry, furnished a test vote of its strength in the lower house of parliament to-day, but it was able to muster only a scanty one-fourth. The leaders had intended to force another test vote on the project for the immediate formation of local agrarian commissions which would serve as a thousand little parliaments in organizing and arousing the people, but defeat was so plainly forewritten that they acquiesced in shelving the project in committee, though only after venting their feelings in another passionate debate.

No progress was made to-day in the general debate on the agrarian question. The radical tactics are now apparently to take advantage of every opportunity of making campaign speeches for circulation in the provinces, where full reports of parliamentary proceedings are widely spread.

The early retirement of Vice-Admiral Doubaeff from the governor-generalship of Moscow is probable. The admiral, whose health is shattered, has ordered his effects in the palace at Moscow to be packed for shipment.

INDS IN FAILURE

Attempt of Cuban Government to Fix Up Anglo-Cuban Treaty. Havana, June 8.—The attempt of the administration senators to modify the amendments to the Anglo-Cuban treaty so as to still leave a semblance of the most favored nation privileges has ended in failure. The members of the foreign relations committee are stated to have known that none of the amendments were acceptable to Great Britain, and so the attempt to modify some and adopt others was abandoned. Cuba probably will endeavor to negotiate a new treaty not containing the favored nation features.

The house of representatives to-day passed a bill appropriating $1,000,000 for the encouragement of immigration, the bulk of which is to be devoted to Spanish families who desired to colonize.

MISS OSGOOD THE WINNER

Carries Off Honors of Women's Eastern Golf Association. Glen Cove, L. I., June 8.—The first championship of the Women's Eastern Golf association was won to-day at the Nassau Club by Miss Fanny C. Osgood, champion of the Boston Women's Golf association in 1903 and 1904, and a semi-finalist in the woman's national in 1902. She scored 88 on Thursday and 90 to-day. Miss Vanderhoff, of New York, who led yesterday with 85, did not repeat. Miss Barlow won second and Miss Harriet Curtis third prize. The consolation handicap was won by Mrs. F. Batchelder, of Boston.

DOUBTS ITS VALIDITY

New York, June 8.—Judge Lacombe, in the United States circuit court, handed down this morning an opinion in which he continues the order restraining the attorney-general and the district attorney from enforcing the 80-cent gas law, pending a final hearing of the case.

LONG DISTANCE AUTO RACE

Hundred and Sixteen Contestants Arrive at Vienna. Vienna, June 8.—Great crowds watched the arrival to-day of the contestants in the Von Herkomer automobile race. Dreher, of Austria, and Martino, of Italy, arrived at 10:55 this morning, Prince Henry, of Prussia, at 11:37, and Mrs. Manville at noon. Rains had made the roads heavy and all the cars were fairly smothered in mud. The only accident recorded was that in which a German car ran over and killed a peasant near Melk.

By 3 o'clock this afternoon 116 of the competitors had arrived. Prince Henry, of Prussia, after a stop of five minutes at a hotel, went to reconnoitre the next stage to Semmering. He will be received in audience by Emperor Francis Joseph on Saturday and will dine at Schoenbrunn castle in the evening.

The race will be resumed on Saturday from Vienna to Klagenfurt.

PRACTICE OF THE CREWS

Three Mile Row Up the River—No Speed Trials. Yale Quarters, Gales Ferry, June 8.—The Yale crews, varsity, freshman and four-oared, took a three-mile row up the river this afternoon, going about 5 o'clock. There were no speed trials. A high wind and rough water interfered with the work of the crews. This morning for their practice, and at that time they encountered fresh winds and rough water. Every one is reported well. To-day the crew captain and the crew manager were given the annual ducking.

MORRIS COVE OUT IN FORCE

PEOPLE IN FAVOR OF WIDENING WOODWARD AVENUE. Tell Street Committee That Fifteenth Ward is Discriminated Against—Want Trolley Company's Offer Accepted—Mayor Before the Committee—Minor Matters Considered.

The attendance at the hearing of the committee on streets in City hall last evening was so large that the meeting was held in the aldermen's chamber instead of the regular committee room. The majority were from Morris Cove and appeared in favor of the widening and extension of Woodward avenue so as to obtain the five cent fare from the trolley road.

Before this matter came up, however, various other petitions were heard. The first was a petition from residents on Broadway who desired that the scales at the junction of Broadway and Elm street be removed when the new pavement was laid in that section.

F. A. Curtiss, of Curtiss & Pierpont, stated that the scales were a nuisance and J. M. Bennett, of Beecher & Bennett, said that they were not much used. City Engineer Kelly also appeared in favor of the removal of the scales.

Edward J. Maroney, sealer of weights and measures, thought that the city should purchase the scales and put them in the back yard at the city hall where they could then be used to weigh coal bought by the city.

Mayor Studley appeared before the committee and urged his communication for the paving of Elm street to Park and from Park to Broadway at the same time that Broadway is paved. The firm of Menzies & Menzies asked permission to build a cellar door at their property at 195 Elm street.

A petition from James H. Macdonald and others for the extension of Norton street to Crescent received much attention from a number of Norton street residents, who were present. All desired the improvement. This petition had been reported favorably to the board of aldermen at its last session, but was ordered back to the committee.

A petition from Francis B. Gates and others asking for a pavement on the south side of Davenport avenue between West street and the junction of Davenport and Congress avenues was heard. There seemed to be more people against than for the petition.

NOT TO BE REPRESENTED

Sweden Will Not Send Delegate to Coronation of Hanover VII. Christiania, June 8.—Sweden will not be represented at the coronation of King Haakon VII. on June 22.

The Swedish government desires that it be understood that this decision is not the result of ill will or as a breach of friendly intercourse, but that it is dictated out of regard for King Oscar's personal feelings.

The situation has no historic parallel, but it is considered here as quite natural that King Oscar should not permit a member of his dynasty to assist at the coronation of his successor in the sovereignty of a portion of his former kingdom.

BREACH OF THE TREATY OF PARIS

Stockholm, June 8.—The Stockholm Bladet asserts that Russia has sent a military detachment to the Aland Islands (in the Gulf of Bothnia) to do patrol service against Finland, and that this action is a breach of the treaty at Paris under which Russia undertook not to fortify or occupy the islands.

BILL NEVER BECAME LAW DECLARES COURT

DECISION ON MEASURE REDUCING TAX ON SAVINGS BANK DEPOSITS.

That the Governor Signed It, the Supreme Court of Errors Holds, Does Not Matter—Scratched His Signature Off When Legislative Committee Called for It Later—Matter Placed Before the Court as a Test Case—Decisions in Other Cases.

Hartford, Ct., June 8.—The bill presented in the last state legislature and later signed by the governor reducing the tax on savings bank deposits never became a law, according to a decision handed down to-day by the supreme court of errors of the state of Connecticut. That the governor signed the bill, holds the court, does not matter. Two questions were raised, however, which the court did not pass on. The bill providing for a reduction in the tax on savings bank deposits passed in the senate, and the house acted favorably on it and then re-considered its action. At that time the bill went to the governor, who signed it, but scratched off his signature when a committee went to him to get the bill back again.

The question was whether the bill had become a law or not. On the advice of a lawyer-general, the Secretary of State did not include the measure in the bills passed. A test case was agreed upon and presented to the superior court of Hartford county by the Savings bank of New London. The bank's lawyers and Attorney-General King agreed on a statement of fact. There was an argument in regard to the law, however, and it was agreed that the matter should be passed on by the supreme court.

The court says the record of the Secretary of State shows that the bill did not become a law. It holds that the original bill was not properly passed by both houses, and that by the journal of the house it is shown that the bill was removed from the house without authority and that the house got it back. The court also holds that no bill can be properly presented to the governor for signature until properly passed.

The questions raised, it is not passed on, whether a bill unapproved can be properly presented to the governor for approval, and also whether in case the governor should sign such bill, it would become operative.

The amount due under the previous act from the Savings bank of New London was $19,516.01. The bank paid $7,678.33, all that would be required if the new measure was a law. The supreme court advised the superior court to order the bank to pay the difference, $11,837.68.

In addition to this case, decisions were handed down in four other cases. One of these was that the case brought by the Metropolitan Life Insurance company against Insurance Commissioner Theron Upon. This was an application for a writ of mandamus to compel the commissioner to certify to the controller that certain sums paid by the company as taxes upon premiums received from business in this state should be refunded. In the superior court Judge Robinson sustained the defendant's motion to quash the alternative writ and the insurance company appealed. No error is found. Opinion by Chief Justice Torrance, all concurring.

Another case is that of Otto Brody and wife against William F. Thompson. It was an action for wrongful conversion of property brought to and tried by the court of common pleas of Fairfield county before Judge Curtis. The judgment was for the defendant, and an appeal was taken by the plaintiff. No error is found. Opinion by Chief Justice Torrance, all concurring.

Error is found in the case of Horatio N. Clark vs. James B. Wooster et al. The case is an action to recover damages for breach of warranty in the sale of a horse. The case was brought in the district court of Waterbury and tried before a jury before Judge Cowell. A verdict was rendered and judgment given against the defendants and an appeal was taken by one of them. Error is found and a new trial granted. Opinion by Chief Justice Torrance, all concurring.

The fourth case was that of George B. Clark, and was an application to the supreme court under the provisions of Chapter Public Acts of 1905 for an order requiring Judge Bennett, of the common pleas court of New Haven county to make and file a finding in an action now pending in the court. The supreme court dismissed the application.

INDICTMENTS STAND

Recorder Goff Declines to Dismiss Those Against Insurance Officials. New York, June 8.—Recorder Goff to-day denied a motion to dismiss the indictments for alleged grand larceny and forgery found against Frederick A. Burnham, president; George Burnham, Jr., vice president, and general counsel, and George D. Eldridge, vice president of the Mutual Reserve Life Insurance company. The motion was made on the ground that illegal and incompetent evidence was submitted to the grand jury. The recorder said that there was sufficient competent evidence to sustain the findings of the grand jury.

"I consider Hamlet, Frou-Frou, Camille and L'Algon my greatest roles, and I wish to be last seen by my friends in the American cities in these plays," wrote Madame Sarah Bernhardt to her manager...

Madame Bernhardt will present what she terms her "masterpieces" in the shape of the "big acts" from Hamlet, Frou-Frou, Camille and L'Algon.

Another, whom I will call her Capt. Pete, is a sailor and all round sportsman. He loves to tell of his adventures with his dogs and gun, and is seldom seen without them.

It would be impolite to doubt Madame Bernhardt, who ought to know her own mind, and in view of the fact that she determinedly refused an enormous sum to return to this country next season...

It was former New Havener. Many New Haveners went to Hartford yesterday to attend the funeral of John K. Lynch, formerly of this city, who died at an advanced age.

THE FATE OF A JOINER. It is difficult to conceive a sadder fate than that which overtook a Brooklyn joiner on Wednesday, when, enveloped in a purple sash and waving a gleaming sword about his head, he rode joyfully forth on a rented horse.

For the ordinary citizen the disgrace of public arrest is most poignant, but yanking an habitual joiner from his post and taking him into custody in full regalia before the eyes of his fellows is the height of cruelty.

from the Theater Sarah Bernhardt, Paris, for the composite bill, Madame Bernhardt purposes that no necessary shall be lacking to make her last performance in America impressive and memorable.

When Darwin first propounded the theory of evolution he eagerly grasped the truth, and championed it even against the teachings of his master, Agassiz, whom he greatly revered.

New Haven Theater. The last opportunity to see Buster Brown and his dog Tige will be to-day, matinee and night, at the New Haven theater.

Buster has lively music, melodious songs, pretty girls and a fine chorus, and no end of humorous creations and situations.

One of the chief attractions of the Plainville camp meeting last year was the singing of Harry J. Rines and his brother, Albert Rines. They are some of the number of the Canadian singing evangelists.

TO-DAY AT NEW WHITE CITY. SPECIAL INDUCEMENTS FOR LADIES AND CHILDREN IN SKATING RINK. To be Admitted to City Free on Purchase of Roller Skating Ticket for Fifteen Cents—Season to be from 10 to 12:30 a. m.—Competent Instructors will be on Hand—Last Performance of Professor Winschermann's Noted Troupe of Trained Bears and Monkeys.

To-day at the White City will be inaugurated the special sessions of the roller skating rink for ladies and children. These sessions are to be held every Saturday morning from 10 to 12:30, and a ticket purchased at the gate for the very small sum of fifteen cents will entitle the holder to admission to the White City and also to skate at the roller skating pavilion.

To-day will witness the last performance of Professor Winschermann's noted troupe of trained bears and monkeys. The big bruin that got off the platform the other night and chased a dog over to the lagoon has been a trifle ugly since, and it is exciting to see the manner in which Professor Winschermann handles him.

A Chicago judge has decided that the fascinating ways of women to win a mate are legitimate accessories of womanly loveliness, even the "smiles, tears and cajolery."

Thus saith the Waterbury American: We are glad those California Yale graduates are anxious to replace the diplomas which they lost in the fire. It is not always easy to tell a graduate nowadays unless he has his diploma along.

Dr. Chauvel, medical inspector of the French army, deals a heavy blow at the popular surgical treatment of appendicitis in a special report. He shows that out of 683 cases of appendicitis in the military hospitals of France 189 were operated upon, while 480 received only medical treatment. Of the latter there were only three that resulted fatally, whereas of the much smaller number dealt with by the use of the knife twenty-three were lost.

The cultivation in France of a new potato, brought from Uruguay, has been observed for some time with great interest. A variety of this potato, called the "solanum commersonii violet," is said to possess excellence of taste as well as nutritive value, and is equal to the best table potato known in France. The variety is distinguished by its resistance to frost, as also to disease, and its one great advantage is that it prospers most in a damp or swampy soil, where no other kind of potato would grow.

The noble horse can still look down on the cranky automobile. A Russian captain has just reached St. Petersburg, who left Manchuria a few days after the conclusion of peace, riding one horse the whole distance, 8,700 miles, and the horse was in excellent condition at the end of the journey. Eight months was the time consumed, so that the average was a little more than a thousand miles a month, or about thirty-six miles a day, which could easily be done without injury to man or beast. An orderly accompanied the officer, and he rode one horse, a Manchurian animal, the whole way. The captain's horse was of English breed.

While reading the papers one day in January, 1903, Sir Conan Doyle was fired with the idea of vindicating the British soldier from the calumnies circulated against him in the pro-Bosny press of Europe. How he got the money for this undertaking, how in eight days, working sixteen hours a day, he wrote his defence, and how the book was received,—he now relates in the June Cornhill under the title of "An Incursion into Diplomacy." The total output of the work was 300,000 of the British edition, about 50,000 in Canada and the United States, 20,000 in Germany, 20,000 in France, 5,000 in Holland, 10,000 in Wales, 8,000 in Hungary, 5,000 in Norway and Sweden, 3,500 in Portugal, 10,000 in Spain, 5,000 in Italy and 6,000 in Russia. There were also editions in Tamil and Kanarese. The total sum at his disposal amounted to about $5,000, of which, speaking roughly, half came from subscriptions and the other half was earned by the book itself.

Admiral Togo will not come to the United States. He has received many cordial invitations to come here, and would very much enjoy visiting this country, but shrinks from the ceremonies and the demonstrations that would naturally be a part of his welcome, and cannot afford the expense that the journey would cost. Admiral Togo is a poor man. He has no means except his salary, and an admiral of the Japanese navy does not receive much more than an ensign in that of the United States. If he could come privately and avoid all demonstrations he would be glad to do so, but that is impossible. At one time it was thought that the Japanese government would send a fleet of its victorious vessels to Europe and the United States through the Suez canal. The plan was seriously talked over and Admiral Togo was to have been in command, but it has been decided that no advantage could be gained and no important purpose could be accomplished to justify the cost of such an expedition.

LYNDE HARRISON. There is no reason in such a world as this for being surprised by the announcement of the departure from it of this one or that one, and yet those who knew Lynde Harrison will feel surprised by the announcement of his death. He was so active mentally and physically, so interested in men and things, and in such apparently good health, that nobody thought of the cessation of his activity and interest.

For over forty years Mr. Harrison has been a conspicuous and influential figure in Connecticut affairs, and for many years he has been a conspicuous and influential figure in affairs both in and out of Connecticut. As a lawyer he has had to do with many large and important matters all over the country, he has been prominent as a political counsellor and manager, and his influence has been felt in both national and international movements of various kinds. No man in Connecticut, and perhaps none in the country, had more or more accurate knowledge of public men and public affairs, and no man knew better how to use his knowledge.

His record as a member of the Connecticut legislature for several years, and Speaker of the House in 1881, was a record of unusual efficiency and useful achievement. He won honorable fame as a judge. He was always ready with tongue or pen in support of the causes he believed in, and he was a powerful help to any cause which he espoused. His large knowledge, his quick wit, his great experience and his restless energy enabled him to plan and execute in a way that often left opponents staring behind him. In the days when he was most active in politics and legislation he was easily a leader because of his readiness and skill. Many times in an emergency before others had had time to form a plan he had formed one and put it through.

Mr. Harrison was a sociable, pleasant man. He was a very interesting talker, and his wide experience with and knowledge of men and things in this and other countries made his talk uncommonly instructive as well as pleasing. He was thoroughly tactful and skillful in peacemaking. He was helpful to many in many ways, and the news of his death will enlighten a sense of gratitude to him in many hearts. He was hopeful, and believed that on the whole the world was gaining in the right direction. Lately he had been actively engaged in working for international arbitration. In his death that good cause loses a strong helper, and Connecticut loses one of her most distinguished citizens.

NOT A WISE SPOKESMAN. When the gods would destroy they first make mad, and it does seem as if some of the representatives of the meat packers had lost their sense of proportion. For instance, one of their legal spokesmen is quoted as talking this way: It is certain that if Roosevelt remains a leader of the Republican party the big capitalists will be afraid to make contributions to campaign funds. If it becomes necessary to abandon the Republican party, Democrat leaders are always ready to adopt reasonable measures. A conservative Democratic element supported by the great capitalistic interests would quickly become as powerful as the Republican party has been.

The packers believe the issues of the next campaign will be between the consumer who wants to gain at the loss of capitalists and the united business interests of this country. The packers ought to muzzle this man. The "hint" that the Democratic party is ready to be used by "the great capitalistic interests" isn't very smart, nor is the statement that the packers believe that the issues of the next campaign will be between the consumer who wants to gain at the loss of capitalists and the united business interests of the country. The consumer is sore enough now and such a statement as that isn't likely to soothe him. It will be wise for "the united business interests of the country" if there is any such thing, to be at least polite to the consumer just now.

A CASE OF CONSCIENCE. What to do with male bachelors is one of the problems of the time. They are no good, and they know it. They should be driven into matrimony or out of the world, but we are so kind nowadays that we suffer them to exist without punishment other than that which they bring on themselves. This is heavy in some cases, but it is never heavy enough. The time will come when they will have to change their ways, and occasionally there is one who feels his wrong condition, and does something to ease his conscience. A rich San Francisco bachelor named Well has determined to liquidate a part of the debt which he feels that he owes to womankind by providing each of 5,000 needy women with a complete outfit of clothing from head to foot. "I summoned an extraordinary session of my own legislature and levied a special tax on a bachelor" is the way in which Mr. Well puts it. "I happened to be the bachelor. This is one tax levy that there is no way to veto." You see that I have never had the pleasure of provid-ding for a wife. In a time of stress such as this, when heads of families have been put to their wits' ends in attending to the wants of those dependent upon them, my conscience has troubled me somewhat, so I decided to levy the tax. When 5,000 needy women shall have been supplied with complete outfits of clothing, I shall feel that I have done something of my duty toward the other sex. This is not a matter of philanthropy, except toward myself—I want to free myself of an accusing conscience."

Mr. Well's case is encouraging as far as it goes. It ought to go farther, and there ought to be more like it. All women ought to have good clothes, even if they can't have good husbands, and those who will not be husbands may well imitate Mr. Well and buy the good clothes. It is little enough for them to do.

The Fair Lady. I didn't care much for the lover who swore he would die for me. The Knighthood was nil—and there wasn't the ring.

Of Truth, in his words, you see. And though he wrote verse of pure delight.

To my eyebrows, nose and chin. And called me a fay and a fairy spright, Well, he hadn't a chance to win.

I wasn't content with the lover who was ready to "blow" for me. His cash was spent, for I easily learned He got it from "pop," you see.

And though he had ducts to burn galore On each and ice cream, say, He was but a clerk in his papa's store, And he got a dollar a day.

I scoffed at the plan of the robust lad, And listed not to his charm; He milked the cows and he ploughed the field.

His perfume was of the farm. Though his buggy gave me many a ride Through lanes where the clover blooms Came sweetly to me—"Nay, not thy bride."

Well, 'twas said in the twilight gloom. To-night I'm old and gray; and they Who loved me well and true Are afar like stars in a distant sky;

For me the bitter of rue. Ah! each was good and each was kind; But my eyes were blind, you see; For I went my way, and I left behind Lovers too good for me. —New York Sun.

SUPPER FOR GIRL GRADUATES. The room and supper should be decorated with the school colors and favors emblematic of the school or scholastic feats provided for each guest. The following menu will satisfy and prove delightful alike to eye and palate:

Lobster Chops Cream Sauce Chicken Terrapin St. James Salad Cheese Wafers Ebony Cream Strawberry Eclair Fruit Punch Coffee Make a thick white sauce with a half cupful each of butter and flour and one pint of milk, seasoning well with salt, pepper, celery salt and one teaspoonful of onion juice. Cut fine sufficient canned lobster meat to make one quart. Sprinkle it with two tablespoonfuls of lemon juice, salt pepper and two tablespoonfuls of chopped parsley. Mix with the sauce and stand away. When cold mold into small chops, dip each in slightly beaten egg, roll in fine dry crumbs and fry golden brown in smoking hot deep fat. The cream sauce will need a half cupful each of butter and flour, one quart of milk, two scant teaspoonfuls of salt, one scant teaspoonful of white pepper, one table-spoonful of lemon juice. This and all other quantities in this article are to serve a party of twelve. Roast two good sized fowls without stuffing. When cold cut the meat in half inch dice, rejecting gristle. Put into a saucepan one pint of cream, a quarter of a pound of butter and three tablespoonfuls of flour, cook until mixed and bubbling then gradually add one pint of thin cream. Stir to a smooth sauce, adding salt and pepper to taste. When simmering add the cut chicken and five hard boiled eggs chopped fine. Lastly add two tablespoonfuls of lemon juice, two tablespoonfuls of sherry and one pint of drained pine clasp or plain olives. Serve garnished with toast points and finely chopped parsley. The salad calls first for one pint of thoroughly washed rice, sprinkled into a kettle of rapidly salted water. When tender (test by rubbing a few grains between thumb and finger) drain, sprinkle with a teaspoonful of salt and one scant teaspoonful of paprika. When well mixed turn into two border molds which have been rubbed with olive oil. Pack lightly and set away until cold. Mix together one cupful and a half of cold boiled asparagus tips, peas, diced carrots and beets (if all but the beets are kept in ice water wanted then and dried their coloring will be intensified.) Make a French dressing with one pint of olive oil, one cupful of strained lemon juice, two teaspoonfuls of salt, one scant teaspoonful of white pepper and a half teaspoonful of paprika. Marinate the vegetables with one half of this. Turn out the molded very carefully, sprinkle with some of the dressing, fill the centre of each mold with the vegetable and sprinkle finely chopped parsley over all. Serve the remainder of the dressing separately. With this course pass cream cheese and saltines. When carefully prepared ebony cream makes a very striking dessert. For it soak over night two pounds of large prunes, put them in a double boiler and cook slowly until plump and tender. Drain off the juice and when cool enough to handle cut each prune in three or four pieces. Put the juice and pits in a saucepan and boil until reduced to a pint. Add one cupful and a quarter of sugar, stir until dissolved. Turn in one package of gelatin which has been soaked in a half pint of cold water. Stir until the syrup is clear then strain. Add two tea-spoonfuls of vanilla, one pint of sherry and sufficient caramel to make very dark. Partly fill of vanilla, one pint of sherry and sufficient caramel to make very dark. Partly fill with the mixture, cover with the syrup and set away until jelled. Serve this with whipped cream, slightly flavored with vanilla and the eclairs.

To make eclairs boil together for a moment one cupful of hot water, a half cupful of butter and a half teaspoonful of salt. When boiling add one and a half cupfuls of pastry flour and stir until the mixture dries away from the sides of the pan. Take from the fire and set aside until cool. Stir in one at a time, five unbeaten eggs, beating each in thoroughly. When finished set the batter aside for an hour in a warm place then put it through a pastry bag and tube in finger lengths on greased pans, having them well apart. Bake in a moderate oven until brown and well puffed up, nearly half an hour. When cold cut open one side of each and fill with sweetened and mashed berries. Ice with fondant thinned with strawberry juice.

As a cool drink for those who do not care for coffee this punch may be served throughout the meal. Boil two pounds of sugar and two quarts of water for five minutes. Strain, add to it the juice of two lemons and one pint of freshly grated pineapple. Let stand for three hours then strain. Add sufficient shaved ice to make it palatable, one pint of finely chopped pineapple, a cupful of halved strawberries and if desired a few whole raspberries. CORNELIA G. BEDFORD.

APPOINTMENT OF TEACHERS

IMPORTANT MEETING OF BOARD OF EDUCATION.

New District Boundaries—Changes in the Webster District—Additional Rooms for All Schools Recommended—Important Transfer of Teachers—Resignations—Teachers Who Have Received an Increase in Salary.

An important meeting of the Board of Education was held last night, when much business of public interest was transacted. The following is the report of the committee on schools, with the proposed changes of boundaries of districts, list of teachers who will receive an increase in their salary and the new teachers appointed.

REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE ON SCHOOLS, JUNE 8, 1906.

The superintendent of schools has appointed the accompanying list of teachers and the committee recommends the salaries standing against the various names.

The committee also makes the following recommendations incidental to the appointment of teachers:

DISTRICT BOUNDARIES.

(1) That the boundary between the Welch and the Webster districts be so changed that the definition of the boundary line of the Welch district shall be as follows: "Neither side of Davenport to Broad street, both sides of Broad to George," etc. This will transfer about one hundred and fifty children from the Welch to the Webster district.

(2) That the boundary between the Wooster and the Eaton districts be so amended that the definition of the boundary line of the Wooster district shall be as follows: "Neither side of Chapel to Orange, neither side of Orange to Crown, neither side of Crown to Church," etc. This will transfer about twenty children from the Wooster district to the Eaton district.

(3) That children in grades V, VI, VII, VIII, living on Mill River, East and Wallace streets, between Beach and Humphrey streets, attend school in the Lovell district.

SCHOOLS OF THE WEBSTER DISTRICT.

(1) That the Oak street school be closed at the end of the present school year and that the children be transferred to the Scranton street school.

(2) That the two basement rooms in the Webster school be closed.

(3) That all double sessions in the Webster district be discontinued after the present school year.

(4) That in the new Scranton street building twelve grade-rooms and a double kindergarten be opened in September. This is an addition of four grade-rooms and a kindergarten to the present number of rooms in the Webster and Oak street schools. The kindergarten can be opened without the appointment of additional kindergarten teachers.

ADDITIONAL ROOMS RECOMMENDED FOR NEXT YEAR IN ALL SCHOOLS.

The committee recommends the following additional rooms:

Four rooms and a kindergarten in the Webster district (Scranton street school).

One room in the Welch school caused by the opening of an additional eighth-grade room at the Cedar street school.

One room, second floor, Lenox street school.

One room Woodward, upon completion of the new building.

One room, Hamilton school.

The committee also recommends the closing of one room in the Hooker school which apparently will not be needed next year. Should the room be needed next September the committee will recommend at that time that it be reopened.

IMPORTANT TRANSFERS OF TEACHERS.

The following transfers have been arranged for the coming school year:

That of Miss Fouchtwanger, Winchester school, grade VIII, to High school, as instructor in German and algebra.

That of Miss Nadler from Winchester, Grade VIII, to the principalship of the Welch school. Miss Nadler formerly held the position of assistant supervisor of drawing in the New Haven schools with a salary considerably larger than that she now receives. This position she held until it was discontinued by the board for financial reasons. That of Miss Hodgson from the principalship of the Washington school to the recoccupation of the Scranton street school.

That of Miss Smith from Cedar street, grade VIII, to the principalship of the Washington school.

That of Miss Mallahan from the principalship of the Oak street school to the principalship of the Kimberly avenue school upon the completion of the latter. Until the latter school is open, Miss Mallahan will be assigned to grade IV in the Scranton street school.

Note.—Miss Sarah Steele, who has been assigned to grade V, Winchester school, taught three years before entering the Normal school. On account of this additional experience in teaching, the committee has recommended an additional fifty dollars in her salary.

RESIGNATIONS.

To Take Effect at the Close of the School Year, June 26, Unless Otherwise Indicated.

May A. Allen, High school.

The usual arrangements are being made for the High school graduation, Friday evening, June 22, at the High school auditorium at 8 o'clock.

Below will be found the names of teachers whose salaries have been advanced, together with the list of new teachers and their assignments. In a large number of cases the salaries are unchanged, remaining the same as last year. Where there are changes the names and salaries are given, as follows:

PARADE AND BAZOUET AT PEQUOT CLOSE BUSY WEEK.

Thousands Witness Parade of Fourth Degree Knights and Concert by Two Bands on Central Green—Visitors Leaving for Home—Nine Thousand Have Attended—Wires on Green to be Taken Down To-day.

Yesterday was the last day of the great convention of the Knights of Columbus, but the activities were none the less notable than those on the previous days. Many of the visitors left for home yesterday. Many desired to go home by a different route from which they had come and the exchange of tickets at the bureau in the national headquarters was very large. Those who staid for the exemplification of the fourth degree and for the parade and banquet last night occupied the morning in seeing the city.

Carriages, automobiles and trolley rides about the city to East and West Rocks were the main features of the trips although a larger number went to the shores than on any day during the week. The trips through the Yale university buildings were taken by a much larger delegation than on the previous days. The guides left the Phelps memorial arch at the entrance to the campus at 9 and 11 o'clock and the party they took with them was one of the largest that has gone through the university at one time.

The line of march selected for the parade was as follows: East on Court street, to State, to Chapel, to Church, to Meadow and to the depot, where a countermarch was held up Meadow to Church, to Crown, to College, to Elm, where the entire party took special cars to the Pequot house at Morris Cove, where a banquet was served. During the parade large calcium searchlights were thrown on the marching Knights, which aided materially in making the spectacle one worth looking at.

Following the parade a grand concert was given on the green by Colt's band of Hartford and the City band of New Haven, which, with the illuminations, drew hundreds to that place. The programme for the concert was an excellent one. It lasted about two hours and the variety that was furnished by the musicians during that period was certainly satisfying to the tastes of all present.

While the fourth degree men were having their exercises and parade, followed by the banquet, all other guests were entertained by the Clan-na-Gael at their hall in the Boardman building. A very interesting programme was arranged, which held the attention of the guests until time to retire.

The exemplification of the fourth degree to 156 members of the Knights of Columbus took place at Music hall yesterday afternoon at 8:30 o'clock. Bernard E. Lynch, this city, was master of the fourth degree and presided at the ceremonies. The degree team was made up of masters of the fourth degree for north, east, west and south.

The committee at Knights of Columbus headquarters on Chapel street yesterday said that there were 7,000 visitors in New Haven during the reunion week. They base their estimate upon the number of badges which were given out at headquarters to the delegates and the visitors. There were 9,000 badges given out, and of that number 2,000 went to members of the order who belong in this city.

Up to last evening the register at headquarters showed that over 2,000 people had registered during the week. The green was illuminated last evening but this morning the electrical decorations will be removed by W. W. Gale & Co. for the electrical contracting firm has to use some of the wiring for the centennial decoration in Meriden. Many of the lamps in the electrical display were broken Thursday night.

"Why don't you cultivate a lazier and contented disposition?"

"Because," answered the energetic person, "I am too industrious to be lazier and not sufficiently egotistical to be contented."—Washington Star.

STOCK MARKET FEATURES

A LAGGING MARKET WITH LISE IN SPECIALTIES.

Rise in Wheat the Disturbing Factor— But This Was Discounted—Pools Active.

The stock market was listless and unceremonious yesterday, but a few big stocks like Delaware and Hudson were pushed up to hold the market, and there was an evident effort of the pools to mark up their specialties.

The rise in wheat was used by the bears, but the recent rise in the cereal had discounted a considerable amount of damage. The granger shares, such as Missouri Pacific, Union Pacific, Rock Island and Atchison, were among the strongest issues on the list.

Those who predicted before the opening that Consolidated Gas, as a result of the court decision, would advance very sharply yesterday, were disappointed. The behavior of this issue was unimportant. But it is in the habit of doing just the opposite of what is predicted.

The Washab refunding operation and the provision for a large amount of new capital was regarded as beneficial to all of the Gould lines. Missouri Pacific responded readily to this sentiment.

The putting up of certain issues 10, 20 or 30 points, even though they are gilt-edged issues, beyond the purchasing power of the average person, created an impression yesterday that lower-priced issues will advance also, though not so much.

The bears pointed to lower markets abroad, which reflected in some selling here for London and continental account, and the talk of higher money soon.

The sharp rise in Delaware and Hudson looked very much like a move to sell the new 4 per cent. bonds, which were very active on the curb, running up 2-1/4 points to 1101-2 on sales of more than $500,000. From another standpoint the rise in the high-priced coals might be regarded as a part of the market programme, for the purpose of stimulating public interest in securities.

It is quite probable that the bank statement to-day will show that banks will add something to surplus and present a moderate expansion in loans.

CONFESSED AND THEN CRIED.

A young girl living in Jersey City was taken before Chief of Police Benjamin Murphy yesterday in company with her mother to explain why she had forged a woman's name to a note requesting the latter's daughter to give the bearer $5 in a hurry, as she was sadly in need of the money.

"I didn't do it, honest, I didn't," she said with a flash of her big brown eyes. "You have hurt my feelings terribly."

The chief went to a telephone in another room and called up a factory where the girl said she was employed. He was informed that she had been discharged a week ago. Then he returned to his office and, addressing the child, said:

"I want to tell you a story about a little girl I once knew. She had a job in a factory and was liked by all her workmates, but one day the boss got mad at her for some foolish little mistake she had made and discharged her. She had been in the habit of taking $3 to her mother every Saturday and, of course, she knew her mother would be dreadfully disappointed if she failed to bring home the money. She was afraid to tell her she had lost her place, and what do you suppose she did? She had read somewhere how somebody managed to get some money by sending a letter to a poor woman and she tried the same trick. It worked and she got the $5. She gave $3 to her mother telling her it was her wages, and— who did she do with the other $2?"

"I put it here," Mr. Murphy exclaimed the suspect as she dived down into her stockings and fished out a badly crumpled $2 bill. "I'm awfully sorry and I promise you I'll never be bad again."

Then the tears came and when she had finished her cry the chief sent her home with her mother.—New York Sun.

IT DID SAN FRANCISCO PEOPLE GOOD.

Those who were in San Francisco during not only the earthquake, but the subsequent days of flight before fire, and who looked upon such scenes of death and despair and abominable desolation as in their well-ordered commonplace lives they had never dreamed of must carry with them for many years a grim feeling of impotence and philosophy. Rich men must have received a mental shock comparable only to the earthquake itself, and socialists must have observed that Nature accomplished in 23 seconds what they have failed to do in half a century. I do not see how it can do other than good. Frivolity, the most unpardonable and far-reaching of all vices, is at an end in San Francisco for years to come. Rich women, who have been cooking in the streets in an oven made from their fallen chimneys, and may have to do their own washing until frightened servants can be induced to return to the city, who have been confined with as little ceremony and shelter as the women of wandering tribes, and the men who stand in line for furs for their portion of bread and potatoes, look back upon the ordinary routine of their idle lives with a mixture of wonder and contempt. Old people, who vegetated in corners and feared drafts, are active and interested for the first time in a quarter of a century. Even dyspeptics are cured, for everybody, even the normally fed, is hungry all the time. Everybody looks back upon the era "before the earthquake" as a period of misadventure, and wonders how he managed to exist. If they are appalled at the sight of a civilization arrested and millions of property and still more to be lamented treasure gone up in smoke, they are equally agitated with a renewed sense of individuality, of unsuspected forces they are keen to pit against Nature—wanton brute in whose face it is a supreme satisfaction to laugh.—Gertie Atherton in Harper's Weekly.

POPULARITY. The popularity of a man proves nothing as to his character, nor, of a measure, its wisdom. Public opinion is not always the voice of truth. It sometimes slays the greatest of the race, and has slain them. It crucified Christ. Before Christ it killed Socrates, than whom there has not been a nobler man, a soul more reverent, or a mightier thinker. Theorem Parker said that one man like Socrates would be worth more to America than many of our states. Erasmus revered Socrates and expressed a wish that he might be in the list of saints, "for said he, 'I am inclined to exclaim: Sancte Socrates, ora pro nobis!' Holy Socrates, pray for us! Here we have a renowned free thinker and a light of holy church praising the candidity of a pagan! The great crowd of men might pause a life and take its bearings. A man makes a measure popular, or the reverse. He says a thing, and the world clamors over barbed-wire fences to listen. Elsewhere, and by other tongues, for ages, the world may have been told the same ideas, but it had other business to attend to. John Stuart Mill, whose writings are out of fashion in these days, said: "The dictum that truth always triumphs over persecution is one of those pleasant falsehoods which men repeat after one another till they pass into commonplaces, but which all experience refutes. History teems with instances of truth put down. If not suppressed it may be thrown back for centuries." The popular man may rediscover it, or otherwise hit upon it, and then his state, his country, takes it up, follows him about with loud acclaim, and gives him all the credit of inventing what he had really found ready made. When the popular man puts the seal upon an idea by adopting it, the multitude proclaim it as a great truth which, by the action, takes on a sort of divinity. Let an unpopular man champion it, and the multitude deride both him and it, or buries under serene indifference. A greatly popular man is quite as likely to be a danger as a savior to his country. History shows that. But does anybody read history nowadays? A greatly popular man often unsettles things. This is esteemed by many as a noble achievement—until a crash comes, and then opinion changes. Constitutions, the business and finance of a country, its institutions, its confidence, these are very easily disturbed by the popular man. Confidence is the main thing, and, by destroying popular confidence in other men and things, the popular man usurps confidence for himself. Noise is a great aid to popularity, noise and extravagance of manner and language. If any one doubts this, let him watch Congress and note the men who always draw and please the crowds. They are not the brainiest men, not the men of best judgement. But they attract. Their very exuberances, which would be weaknesses in business or in professional life, make for success in a public career. It is not an enduring success, but it serves. This era, beyond all others, one in which the dictum that popularity is not a proof of truth is most unpopular. Our popular men are prophets. To contradict them is sacrilege. Some of the greatest figures of all time, benefactors of races, would be unpopular now were they to reappear. Oddly enough they did not pose as benefactors, nor as prophets. By common consent George Washington is revered above all men who have figured in this country's history, but if his duplicate could today appear among our eighty millions it is extremely doubtful that he could win an election. And yet Washington was a truer exponent of liberty than many other men have been after whom the millions have run with enthusiasm and confidence.

It is not always those who shout the loudest that have knowledge of, and love for, constitutional liberty. And the most popular men are not always the strongest, nor have they done the most for humanity. The most enduring works are usually those of men who are most appreciated after their activity or death. It is not difficult to set the crowd cheering. Men who have opportunities to study closely the popular leaders that come and go know well the arts by which these men adroitly play upon the emotions and imaginations of the many. And that is why extremely popular men and movements have to face much criticism, a criticism which is quite as likely to be inspired by patriotic motives as in any thunderously applauded speech, or deed of great acclaim. Popular men may even, and have, in fact, done quite as much to restrict liberty as to enlarge it, to endanger countries as to save them. The people often have such confidence in them that they do not think for themselves, but are content with following wherever their favorites may lead. From such excesses there is always reaction. The political history of all countries abounds with such examples. It is often found that men who have done most for liberty of conscience and thought have sacrificed most.

Popularity has placed many weak men in strong places, and strong men in the wrong places, quite as often probably, as it has placed them rightly. And popular energies are being constantly expended in the work of dividing the right men and putting them in to the right places, and then getting them out again as soon as possible. These are conditions which no rebuke can effectively chasten. They are incident to man's long-continued experiment in the art of governing himself. No experience is more common than the breaking of popular idols. But when one is demolished another takes its place, so insatiable is the desire of mankind to have some worshipful object. An explanation is that man must have ideals, and ever yearns to satisfy them. His popular characters seem to satisfy his ideals for a time, but very rarely for a long time. He grasps at the new-comer when his old faith falls. Popularity governs a country. Candidates are chosen less for their fitness, more for the fact that they will "run well." Measures are likewise framed and voted on. Expediency is popularity's man-of-all-work. More things are done because they are expedient or popular than because they are right. There is nothing that surpasses in sadness the fall of a popular man from his high estate. Mist of them fall and are soon forgotten. Somehow, for several thousand years, mankind has derived small lesson from these calamities. Perhaps there is a superb optimism at the base of it all. That may be fortunate, but it does not alter the fact that popularity is often the least valuable asset that a man or an idea can have. Reliance upon popularity as a test of fitness, or a reason for doing things, is merely leaning upon the wind.—Boston Herald.

Physician (sympathetically)—"I regret to inform you that your little son's mental weakness is incurable." Mother—"How fortunate it is that we are so rich. No one will ever notice it."—American Spectator.

Miss Pysphace—"Sir, I heard you telling Miss Brown that I looked like a chromo." Mr. Plocksy—"Yes—er—I meant that any one could see at once that you weren't painted."—Cleveland Leader.

"A man in politics should have lots of friends, shouldn't he?" "It depends," answered Senator Sorghum, "on whether they are friends who want to do something for you or who want you to do something for them."—Washington Star.

All previous half-mile records for the Clinton avenue speedway were smashed at the matinee yesterday afternoon. Domingo owned by Walter Clark, won the championship of the speedway. This horse has won this distinction twice and B. S. Bradley's Blue Light has captured it twice. This special race is trotted between 3 and 4 o'clock and a horse arriving later than 4 o'clock is not eligible in this event.

At the horse show several fine Fair Haven horses were shown. J. H. King made two entries, one of his horses capturing second prize and this same horse was awarded a blue ribbon at the Madison Square horse show. Andrew A. Bradley had a fine pair of bays and B. S. Bradley had Blue Light at the show. In the saddle horses 20-100 East Ball was out with his horse. Members of Loyal council, No. 29, who took the fourth evening of the Knights of Columbus last evening were Colonel T. F. Callahan, Michael J. O'Mara and Walter J. Walsh, Superintendent Bernard B. Mulvey of station A, post-office, a member of Russell council, No. 45, also took the degree. George H. Wohlmaker of Fair Haven, of San Salvador, No. 1, was another candidate.

John M. Rowe died at the home of his son, E. H. Rowe, 457 Ferry street, yesterday morning at the age of seventy, and the funeral services will be held at that number Sunday at 3 p. m. The services will be conducted by Rev. R. E. Brown of Pilgrim church, of which Mr. Rowe was a member, and a former deacon, assisted by Dr. Sneath. Mr. Rowe had suffered from paralysis for ten years or so and for the last five years he had been confined to his bed. He was born in Fair Haven East and resided there until about a dozen years ago. For many years he was engaged in the grocery business. His wife died last September. He leaves a son, E. H. Rowe, and a sister, Miss Harrie H. Rowe. He was a member of Adelphi lodge and of the New Haven commandery of Knights Templars.

After June 15 Mr. and Mrs. Charles Eddy will be at home at 201 Blatchley avenue. They are now away on their bridal tour. The bride was Mrs. Charlotte Mattis Hoadley.

Four candidates were initiated at the meeting of Columbia temple, G. G. E., last evening, when the new paragonalia was used for the first time. Several Fair Haven members of Comforting circle, King's Daughters, of the First Baptist church, attended the outing at Savin Rock and took dinner at Wilcox's yesterday. Twenty-eight were in the party.

The members of Quinaplan House company will attend public worship at Pilgrim church Sunday morning and listen to a sermon by the pastor, Rev. R. E. Brown. The company will meet at the engine house in East Grand avenue and march in a body to the church and occupy seats on the main aisle.

Gospel services will be held at the hall of the W. C. T. U., No. 2 in Grand avenue Sunday afternoon. The speaker will be a member of the Yale divinity school.

There was a large attendance of relatives and friends. A quartette sang several hymns. There were fully a score of beautiful floral tributes, evidences of the esteem in which he was held. The interment was in Fair Haven cemetery.

Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Cronin of Janesville, Wis., have been visiting at the home of J. M. Greene.

A LITTLE THORN.

Softly whistling a merry tune, he opened the front door and looked around. Where could Else be? Otherwise she was always standing in the open door awaiting his home-coming. He looked at his watch and smiled. It was half an hour earlier than usual. In the sitting room was her embroidery, and next to it an open letter. Mechanically he picked it up and read: "I can hardly believe, dear Else, that you have been really married a whole month; but I often think of you you know, but I have never confessed to you that I sometimes am a little worried, because I, after all, know so very little about Gustav's character and that only from what you have told me, and that occasionally I am a little afraid that you may not be perfectly happy. Do not misunderstand me, I do not doubt either your or Gustav's ability to make each happy. But are you really and truly happy, my dear child? Don't you ever feel as if there were a little thorn which you would like to remove before it penetrates too deeply? Our happiness is very sensitive to such little thorns and if they are allowed to remain—" Gustav dropped the letter on the table in amazement at what he had read. Thorns in their happiness! Were they not as happy as it was possible for two human beings to be? Oh, these thorns always are so prone to see ghosts in broad daylight. He picked up the letter to finish reading it, but light steps were heard on the garden path, and he saw his wife hurrying toward the house. "She need not know that I have been reading her mother's letter," he thought. "Undoubtedly she will read it to me, and then we can talk it over," he thought as he put it down on the table again. But all day he waited in vain for her to mention it. She never said a word about it until the next morning, when she said: "Oh, I forgot to tell you; I had a letter from home. Mother sends her love to you. There was nothing else in the letter. They are all well at home. She asks me to send her some samples of worsted."

"Was that all?" "Yes; there was nothing else." There it was, he thought. Where was now the thorn? For that there was one he no longer doubted, or she would have mentioned her mother's foolish worries. Now he knew. Every day he examined the letters she gave him to mail until he found one addressed to her mother. How heavy it was! And she had written so much without telling him a word. When he came to his office he carefully opened the letter and read: "You have no idea, dear mother, how often I have thought over your letter before I knew just what to answer. I will confess everything frankly so that you may perhaps help me to do everything to make Gustav happy. "You ask me if I am happy. Indeed, I am mother, and I still believe I understand what you mean when you write of the little thorn. I often feel that piercing pain, but I am not quite clear whether it is only my vanity which has wounded me or my heart. If you will help me find where the thorn is I will do my best to remove it. "You know that I have never known Gustav's mother. I am very sorry at this, because it would then be easier for me to talk with him about her. He very often speaks of her, and then I feel as if I shall never be able to do the things as she does them. Very often I feel as if I have fallen short of his expectations, and that he is not quite satisfied, because I manage the household affairs differently from the way his mother does. Whenever he wants to praise me he always says that I have done this or that just as his mother would have done it, and he expects that such praise shall make me feel happy. I wish it did. "Answer my letter as soon as you can dear mother, and have no fear that I shall not follow your advice. Gustav does not even know that I write you. I send you the worsted you asked me for—" He read no further, but a feeling of sadness came over him. Poor, dear Else! She was quite right. He folded the letter together and put it in his pocket, determined that he himself would answer all Else's questions.

It was a beautiful summer evening. Else was sitting on the piazza with her embroidery, as she softly closed the gate behind him, that she should not hear him come. Then he lifted to the large bed of roses and broke off one little thorn, which he pressed in under a fingernail before he walked up to the house. "Good evening, darling!" "Good evening, dear! You are early to-day. Now I will hurry up dinner, and we will have coffee out here." While they were sipping their coffee she noticed that Gustav did not seem quite himself. "Are you tired, dear?" she asked. "No, love, but I have a pain in my finger, and I do not know what causes it." "Let me look at it. Why, of course, you have got a splinter under that nail; I shall soon get it out."

"Oh, no dearest! Do not trouble yourself about it. It is nothing but a little thorn that will soon work itself out."

"The ideal! Give me your finger right now. Such a little thorn might cause blood poisoning if you neglect it!"

"Oh, nonsense, Else; do you really believe that such a little thing could cause any harm? Look at me. Else, and tell me do you really believe that such a trifle might be dangerous?"

She looked at him in surprise. Then she suddenly blushed.

Could he mean something else. What did he know?"

"Oh, Gustav!" she sobbed, and buried her face in her hands. "You know—"

Instead of answering he took her into his arms.

"Else! Now be my own sensible little wife and tell me frankly what you mean. Confess everything and I also will confess."

"Did you read mother's letter?"

"Yes, both the letters—yours and your mother's. Forgive me that and all the rest; it was thoughtlessness on my part; I did not realize—"

"Oh, Gustav! and now you will never feel like talking to me of your mother and I should so like to know more about her."

"I understand you, dearest, and just for that reason I will talk even more of her, but in a different way without always drawing comparisons. Will you be satisfied then? I will endeavor always to think of myself as your husband rather than as my mother's son, and I thank you so much that you have made me see how I ought to be. And now will you please remove the little thorn, or, better still, I will remove it myself, and in the future we will always remove the little thorns ourselves without asking mamma's help."

"Oh, Gustav, you do not know how I love you she said, and kissed him passionately.—Philadelphia Bulletin.

JUDGE HARRISON DEAD.

PASSED AWAY SUDDENLY AT THE NEW HAVEN HOUSE.

His Long, and Highly Useful Career as Lawyer, Judge, Senator, Speaker of the House and Law Maker—A Sketch of His Life.

The death of ex-Judge Lynde Harrison, which occurred yesterday at 1:50 p. m. at the New Haven house, was a shock to the community. The sad news spread rapidly about town and caused everywhere surprise and sorrow. The deceased was seized with a sinking spell while at the breakfast table at the New Haven house yesterday morning. He was removed to his room under the direction of Proprietor Moseley, and Dr. Harry L. Welch who happened to be in the lobby, was summoned to attend him. Dr. Frank H. Whittemore, the Harrison's family physician, was later called, but the judge passed away at 1:50 p. m. Apoplexy was the cause. Judge Harrison's condition was so grave all the forenoon that his wife, who was at Lake Mohonk, was summoned, and also his daughter, Mrs. Edmund Q. Trowbridge, who had left the city for New York on an early train to join her husband there. A younger daughter was with Mrs. Harrison. The son, Paul W. Harrison, was also notified.

During the forenoon Judge Harrison rested quietly and answered questions with apparent readiness considering his weakened condition. He was visited by Judge Harrison Zeeher, his law partner, and also by Judge L. M. Hubbard of Wallingford, one of his warm personal friends, and who also has his office at the Harrison office. They were with him three hours and until he died. At half-past eleven o'clock, when Dr. Whittemore left his bedside, he was sleeping. At that time Dr. Whittemore said that he considered Judge Harrison in a very serious condition.

Judge Harrison leased the Mark Hanna place at Thomaston, Ga., some time ago, and with his wife returned from there to this city about three weeks ago. Judge and Mrs. Harrison later went to Lake Mohonk, where Judge Harrison delivered an address at the National Arbitration convention, to which he was a delegate. Judge Harrison came back here. The Harrisons had planned to spend a portion of the summer at their country home at Lee's Island, and in July Mrs. Harrison was to have taken a trip to Europe with her brother, George L. White of Waterbury. An automobile tour was to have been included. Judge Harrison was to remain in this city and at the Lee's Island house with his younger daughter.

The Harrison residence on Hillhouse avenue has been leased for some time to Professor S. S. Sanford of Yale university.

Judge Harrison had been in his customary good health on Thursday and at his desk in his office yesterday morning were letters which he had directed the day before and which he was to have mailed yesterday. A sketch of Judge Harrison's long, prominent and useful career follows: Lynde Harrison was born December 15, 1837, in this city, and was reared and educated here. Many of his ancestors were with the first settlers of New Haven colony. Among them were Abraham Pierson, first pastor of Branford, and John Davenport, first pastor of New Haven. His brother James Harrison, and his mother, Charlotte Nicoll Lynde, were born in this city. His father went to Augusta, Ga., at the age of eighteen and remained there until past middle life, engaged in business as a merchant and banker. Thomas Harrison, one of his paternal ancestors, was one of the first settlers in the New Haven colony, representing Branford in the colonial assembly after Branford had recognized the Connecticut charter, which united the Hartford and New Haven colonies. His paternal grandmother, Sarah Wolcott, was descended from Governor Roger Wolcott, colonial governor of Connecticut, and from Dr. Alexander Wolcott, who was one of the prominent leaders of the patriot cause during the revolutionary war. She was also a niece of Oliver Wolcott, a signer of the Declaration of Independence. His mother he was named, was born in Saybrook, but after graduation from Yale college settled in New Haven as a practicing lawyer and died here in 1817. He was a descendant of Judge Nathaniel Lynde of Saybrook, and of Judge Simon Lynde, one of the first settlers of Boston. The mother of John Hart Lynde, Rebecca Hart, was descended from Thomas Hart of Farmington, who was speaker for many years of the colonial assembly of Connecticut. The ancestors of Mr. Harrison were all of English blood, having come from Yorkshire, Somerseshire and London during the seventeenth century.

Mr. Harrison was educated in the public schools of this city, the grammar school and Russell's military institute. He was prominent for success in his studies at the John E. Lovell Lancelanian school. After completing his preliminary education he taught school for two or three years and then entered the Yale law school from which he was graduated LL. B. in 1860. He was admitted to the bar of Connecticut in 1861, and soon afterward opened a law office in this city, where he successfully continued the practice of law until his death.

Early in life he became actively interested in politics. He was elected clerk of the house of representatives in 1864, 1865 and 1866. He was elected to the state senate in 1866 and re-elected in 1867. From 1871 to 1874 he served as judge of the city court of this city to which position he was elected by the legislature. He has had for over thirty years a summer home and legal residence in the town of Guilford and he represented that town in the house of representatives in 1874, 1875, 1876, 1877, and 1881. He was speaker of the house in 1877 and chairman of the judiciary committee in 1881, having been by virtue of that position leader of the majority party. He served in the republican state central committee of Connecticut for several years and was chairman of that committee in 1875-6. In 1877 he was elected by the legislature judge of the court of common pleas for the county of New Haven and he held that office until 1881, when he received re-election. Since that time he has devoted himself closely and continuously to the practice of his profession, except that in 1884 he accepted the office of chairman of the republican state central committee mainly for the purpose of assisting in the election of his cousin, Henry B. Harrison, to the office of governor. While he was in the general assembly he served several terms on the judiciary committee and took part in framing and advocating some important legislation. He was chairman during three years of the committee on constitutional amendments and as such secured the adoption of the 15th, 16th, 17th, 18th, 19th, 20th, 21st, 23d, 24 and 25th amendments to the constitution of the state.

He also drafted and advocated the adoption of the 27th amendment in 1883. These amendments change the time of elections from April to November; the length of terms of executive legislative and judicial offices; modify the method of representation in the lower house to the extent that no new town is entitled to representation in the legislature unless it has at least 2,500 inhabitants; forbid the payment of extra compensation to public officers during their term of office, and prohibit public funds being devoted to the construction of railroads.

While speaker in 1877 he left the chair and made an earnest appeal in favor of the statute of that year putting married women upon an equality with their husbands in relation to the ownership and control of their own property. He was a member of the Republican National conventions of 1876 and 1880, and he voted for every republican candidate for president since his first vote for Abraham Lincoln in 1860, except that he voted for Grover Cleveland in 1892 because, as he then stated, he objected to the tariff and financial policy of the republican party in 1890, especially the passage of the Sherman silver act and the revision in the tariff act of 1890, putting sugar on the free list, taking $150,000,000 of revenue from the treasury, paying a bounty to sugar raisers in this country, and thus adopting what he believed to be a dangerous principle of federal legislation. In consequence of the position he took at that time the democrats of Connecticut sent him to the Chicago convention of 1896 for the purpose of having him serve upon the committee on resolutions so as to make a fight for the maintenance of the gold standard and sound currency. Mr. Harrison went to Chicago, served on that committee, took no part in the convention after the platform was adopted, came back to Connecticut and in common with several of the gold standard leaders took part in the organization of the movement in Connecticut which repudiated the Chicago platform and led to the nomination of Palmer and Buckner. Since that time Mr. Harrison publicly stated that he believes upon the issues of sound currency and other issues before the country at the close of the nineteenth century, the republican party is the party which should receive the support of women who desire the best interests of their country; but with the exception of his work during the campaign of 1884 for Blaine, Mr. Harrison took no active part in politics, nor had he held any office since 1881.

For the past twenty years he has been engaged principally in corporation and estate litigation. He was counsel for and director in several corporations at the time of his death. He was an executor and trustee of the H. B. Plant estate; was general counsel of the Plant Investment company, the Southern Express company and the Consolidated Lake Superior company. His time of recent years has been largely occupied with work for the Plant estate and the three last named corporations, and his offices were in the Exchange building, this city, and at No. 12 West Twenty-third street, New York.

His first wife was Miss Sara Plant of Branford, who died in 1878. He married in 1888 Miss Harriet S. White, of Waterbury, who survives him. He leaves four children, William Lynde, Paul Wolcott, Gertrude Plant and Katharine White. He leaves also a sister, Miss Florence Harrison, of this city. His New Haven home is at the upper end of Hillhouse avenue, and he had a beautiful summer residence known as "Bayhurst" in Guilford on the shore of Long Island Sound.

ROMANCE OF RADIUM.

Death of its Discoverer Recalls Some of His Struggles.

"I think I told you how I came upon radium in the 1900 Exhibition," writes the Paris correspondent of Truth, in a letter lamenting the death of M. Curie, the discoverer of radium. "I told you how the compilers of the catalogue had overlooked it; how a diamond merchant from India found that its proximity had discolored his exhibits and knocked it angrily aside to the obscure hole where I saw it; how the jurors had passed it by unnoticed, and showed no curiosity to see it. "The glow of the speck exhibited fascinated the correspondent and he hunted up the inventor. M. Curie seemed surprised and greatly pleased to find that somebody outside his scientific friends took an interest in his scientific researches. Speaking of the energy of the new substance, he said he would not walk into a room containing one pound of radium, as the consequences would be too dangerous. He did not believe, but would not be positive, that our planet contained a greater quantity of this substance. "He told me in his gentle, patient manner all about his difficulties, the correspondent goes on. "Tons upon tons of pitchblende had to be manipulated to get at a few grains, or perhaps tenths of a grain, of radium. Pitchblende in its rough state was expensive, the Austrian government having a monopoly of it. "Madame Curie herself pounded in a mortar all the pitchblende she used in producing the atom of radium I saw at the exhibition and the particle in the phial. She had not wasted a single gramme of the mineral and she had ruined the beauty of her hair. It would surprise me to hear that M. and Mme. Curie invested, save in pitchblende, any part of the one hundred and twenty thousand francs which their shares of the Nobel and the Orizis prizes brought them. "On my first visit to M. Curie the price he mentioned for radium was six thousand pounds a gramme. Three years later owing to the demand exceeding the supply, it had run up to twelve thousand pounds a gramme, or eight hundred pounds a grain. "And I am afraid," said M. Curie, "that it will go on rising. C'est terrible," he added with a sigh, as if he were talking about a naughty son. "He told me that he and his wife had spent every sou they possessed and subjected themselves to many privations to buy pitchblende. The cost I had already noticed was threadbare, and the shoes pined as if by some cobble." "Madame Curie, I elsewhere learned, gave up gloves, the renewal of her Sunday clothes, and resigned herself to wearing the coarsest and cheapest boots she could buy. I dare say she consented the more easily, for a wish to save for pitchblende, to her little Irene being dressed on Sundays and week days in a coarse suit of boy's clothes. "What I wrote first about M. and Mme. Curie brought Germany and United States ground me, but not a single British inquirer. They had received in the most literal sense golden offers from the United States if they would go there to direct laboratories. Switzerland also made—for the Swiss—an offer of unwonted brilliancy. "They preferred, when once the French government offered M. Curie a chair at the Sorbonne, to remain in Paris on the comparatively meagre salary of twelve thousand francs a year. M. Combes secured for Madame Curie, as superintendent of his laboratory, six thousand francs. He created the situation for her, as M. Curie said he could not work without her scientific companionship and help."

"The senate has some interesting features." "What features?" "Check list, says, and noisier."—Cleveland Leader.

WHALERS JONAH'S FOR BLUES

CAPTURE ELEVEN-INNING GAME THREE TO TWO.

Wide Unsteady at Critical Times and an Error by Sherwood Aids Them—Rising Fined $25 and Sent to Bench for Refusing to Bunt—Holyoke Defeats Norwich—Waterbury Scores Its First Victory Over Hartford.

New London, June 8.—New London defeated New Haven here this afternoon by the score of 3 to 2. The contest went eleven innings. Wade was unsteady at critical times, and an error by Sherwood helped New London. New Haven's two runs were scored on a passed ball and an out early in the game. Rising, of New London, was fined $25 and benched for refusing to bunt when ordered to do so. The score: New London.

HOLYOKE 9, NORWICH 7. Norwich, June 8.—With one gone in the ninth Soffel's wild throw gave Holyoke a life and on three hits and a pass the visitors tied the score.

WATERBURY 3, HARTFORD 1.

Waterbury, June 8.—Waterbury scored its first victory over Hartford today by the score of 3 to 1 in a well-played game. Farley was a mystery to the visitors, striking out eleven men and allowing but three hits, Hartford escaping a shut-out by getting two of them in the eighth, a single followed by a three-bagger.

BRIDGEPORT 6, SPRINGFIELD 1.

Bridgeport, June 8.—Bridgeport put up a superior article of ball and won from Springfield to-day, 6 to 1. The only run of the visitors was a gift. In the seventh inning two stupid errors, followed by a batting rally, gave the Orators five runs.

THE ELDERLY WOMAN'S POINT OF VIEW.

"Oh, mother darling," my daughter cried, "you're not going to that lecture with your cold in that drafty hall! And you always catch more cold in a crowd! You won't go, will you?" "Well, well," I temporized. "You won't go—promise." Then the door bell rang, and I made my escape to my own room and locked my door after me. I knew well enough what would happen—how Margery would tell the others at dinner that I was going out—with my cold—and how they would protest. And I made up my mind, as often I have before, that since I am old enough to know what is best for me, I would go to that lecture, let them talk as they might, so I got ready for the battle, resolving for the hundredth time that I would not be run by my children.

As I sat in my room plotting—yes plotting—how I would outwit my daughter, it came over me what a funny thing it was that I should be contriving to get my own way, for all the world like a naughty, elderly child, while my youngest daughter was worrying about my headstrong ways as if she were my mother instead of my being hers.

How increasingly often I hear as the years go on, not only from my own children, but from other people whose mothers are already old:

"Mother will not take care of herself!" And then follow fearsome stories of mother's latest escapade—just as one tell how naughty Johnny is getting and how Susie kicks her bedclothes off—stories of how mother made a raid on the attic and cleaned it almost single-handed when all the family were away; stories of clandestine descents into the perilous depths of the cellar, hair-raising tales of how mother was found on a stepladder hanging a window curtain; how mother insisted on putting down the preserves and pickles, rows and rows and rows of shining glasses of them, herself, and how tired she was afterward, as if putting down the preserves tried only women who were passed middle age. And a certain indignation rose within me as I remembered that I can visit my own little attic and my own cellar only by stealth or with a devoted tyrannical child of mine standing over me to see that I don't "overdo." For the motto of all devoted sons and daughters is: "Nag mother to death if necessary, but don't let her overdo."—Everybody's Magazine.

"He's a very eloquent lecturer; you should engage him to give a lecture for the benefit of your church."

"We were thinking of it, but we found him guilty of a very ridiculous figure of speech."

"Indeed? What was that?"

"He wanted $1,000 for it."—Philadelphia Press.

YESTERDAY'S STOCK MARKET.

Professional Limitations of Present Market Very Manifest.

New York, June 8.—The professional limitations of the present stock market were still very manifest to-day. In fact, the slight evidence of small commission house buying, which was reported yesterday and which aroused hopes that the professional campaign was meeting its first success in attracting outside interest, was no longer perceptible to-day. The aggregate of the sales underwent a decided shrinkage. The character of the market was not materially changed from recently prevailing conditions. Fewer stocks were picked for a demonstration to attract attention by large dealings and rapid advances. More attention was paid to the action of the grain markets and the effect of the government report on the June 1st condition of wheat was feared for the unfavorable effect it might exert on stocks when it appears on Monday. The market weakened quite generally during the first hour of this account. A better tone developed when wheat was found to be declining, but stocks turned downwards again later in the day. Some points of special strength amongst the grangers were due to reports of good crop conditions along those lines. The assumption that a more active market is sought by some of the large financial interests to assist the absorption of new issues in hand was given credit by movements in stocks of some companies so situated. The sharp advances in Delaware and Hudson was accompanied by active dealings in the convertible bonds on the curb and application was made to list the bonds at the stock exchange. The week's currency movement did not indicate a large change in cash reserves of the banks on the actual movement, but the easy tone of call money indicated a strong bank statement.

A slightly firmer tone was reported for time money to-day due to decrease in the amounts offering. The sterling exchange market continued to advance in response to easier money conditions and demand for remittance against maturing finance bills was said to be an important factor in that market.

The continuance of the injunction against the enforcement of the eighty cent gas law pending a decision in the suit to test its constitutionality caused feverish fluctuations in Consolidated Gas. The sharp rally in the wheat market was given as a cause for the late weakness in stocks, but the growing disposition to realize as the day progressed has been a feature of the market each day this week. The closing was easy. Bonds were irregular. Total sales par value $4,550,000. United States old four coupon advanced 1-8 on call.
