THE OIL FIELDS OF RUSSIA. Even if it be true, as has been recently re-ported, that the oil fields of Pennsylvania annot be depended on much longer, the world seems likely to have a sufficient supply of oil for a long time yet. One importar source of supply exists in Russia, and inter esting and important information concerning it is given in a lately published report of ou Consul at Odessa.

The great petroleum district of Russia lies rithin a radius of fifty miles around Baku, a oint on the western shore of the Caspian about 560 miles south of Astrakhan. Although the existence of oil there has been known from time immemorial, it was not until 1872, when the lands about Baku passed into the hands of private owners, that he resources of the district began to be turned to large account. At the end of that ear there were 415 so called "wells," but ost of them were mere shallow holes in the ound, like ordinary water wells. At presnt there are upward of 300 bored wells in the tract, ranging from 350 to 700 feet in what is called "known territory" has never failed to produce oil in large and generally normous quantities. According to Consul Dyer, there are flowing fountains capable of yielding more than 6,000 barrels of crude oil per day. Thirteen others are specified whose daily product ranges from 1,250 to 3,750 barrels. Of course the flow of these ountains is of short duration, rarely lasting four months, after which pumping is necessary. The appliances for refining are so inadequate, and the demand of the market reached by the river Volga is so limited, that an incalculable quantity of the crude product goes to waste. When we are told that the ents a barrel, we can understand that the city government of Baku should find it saper than water for irrigating the streets.

It lasts upon the thoroughfares from three to four days, forming a compact and firm pavement of oily sand. Consul Dyer estimates that by the end of he present year the possible production of refined oil at Baku will not fall far below 2,000,000 barrels. One firm of refiners have invested $2,500,000 in their business, and their establishment already has a capacity of 400,000 barrels. They will soon have a betaximum freight which the company are alnsportation of petroleum from the wells to the seaboard is 72 cents a barrel. A pipe line also is projected for a part of the route its destination without the aid of pumps. Consul Dyer does not hesitate to express his opinion that the supply of petroleum at Baku is almost literally inexhaustible, and never discovered that she is religiously emhe has no doubt that the product of the Russian wells can and will be, at an early date, delivered in the markets of western Europe at very low prices. This is of course bad news to those who export oil from this country, but it is encouraging to know that there is no immediate danger of a great decrease in the world's supply of this useful article.

The result is that debtors on mortgage cannot pay the interest of their debts, and are dispossessed and their properties frequently sold at half the value they had some time ago. It is generally believed that the fall in prices is due to the scarcity of cash.

We have just closed our inventory for the 20th time. On January ist, 1861, we started business on the opposite corner and continued there till 1866, when we moved to our present location. In 1875 we enlarged our store to double its size, giving us a room 100 feet long and 24 feet wide, adding a loft—thus giving us the largest of the kind in the city.

With ample capital, with 20 years experience, by giving the business the strictest personal attention, we deem it no bossing to say that we can offer as good inducements to the old and true patrons, or those contemplating a change, as any dealer or dealers in the city.

We shall neglect no department at the expense of another, but keep up every branch full and complete, and while thanking our old friends (many of whom started with us in 1861), for their liberal assistance, offer our best effects to present them in 1851 the best goods in market, at the lowest reasonable rates.

SENATOR KELLOGG'S SEAT

FAILURE OF THE ATTEMPT SENATE.—Mr. Pendleton, from the Committee on Census, reported a bill appropriating $200,000 for completing, compiling and publishing the tenth census, with a report which was ordered printed.

Mr. Williams introduced a bill to provide for an ocean mail service and making an appropriation therefor. Referred to the Postoffice committee.

On motion of Mr. Butler the joint resolution establishing a Yorktown centennial committee was taken up and passed.

At 1:30 o'clock the morning hour expired, and the Chair announced as the regular order the bill for the relief of Ben Halliday. Mr. Saulsbury moved to lay aside the present and all prior orders and take up the Kellogg case.

Mr. Edmunds made the point of order that a motion to lay aside present and all prior orders was not in order. Mr. Saulsbury thereupon amended his motion to postpone all present and prior orders.

Mr. Ingalls interposed a point of order that a motion to postpone one bill and take up another was not in order, which the Chair sustained. Mr. Saulsbury again modified his motion to one that the Senate lay the pending order on the table. The yeas and nays were ordered and the Senate rejected—yeas 20, nays 34.

bill to take up the Kellogg case, although not an actual test of the strength of the parties on the question, is considered on both sides of the chamber as practically a quietus to the agitation on the subject. While three or perhaps four Senators would vote for the Kellogg resolution to save the Halliday bill the result disclosed the impossibility of seuring a majority for the committee's report and no serious attempt to take it up will again be made.

The bill was referred.

Complaints are often made by postmasters that loaded firearms and explosives of different kinds are sent through the mails, endangering the lives and limbs of the employes who have to handle mail matter. In order to correct this, Mr. Dunn, of Arkansas, introduced a bill to prevent the mailing and delivery of pistols and other firearms of every character, cartridges and other kinds of ammunition, or percussion caps, which are declared to be unmailable, and the sender shall upon conviction be subject to a fine of not less than $100 nor more than $5,000 and he retired list. the retired list.

A caucus of the Republican Senators was held this morning at which it was decided to resist taking up or any action on the Kellogg case to the full extent of parliamentary usage. The appointment was made of a committee of five on the order of business, which will be announced hereafter.

Grand Total

In presenting the apportionment bill in the House to-day Mr. Cox moved to print the whole matter in the Record and called attention to certain tables submitted by the superntendent of the census. Table "A" shows 19,369,595 as the representative population of the several States. It shows the number tate on an even division, that is not, conn fraction or residuum or re-Besides it shows, with the ratios and the fractions resulting, the final number of members for each State, ronning from the present number of members, 293, to 307, both inclusive.

of members, 293, to 307, both inclusive. The calculation is made on this plan: The final number of members from 293 to 307 is used as a divisro in obtaining the rates of representation to the whole representative population. This ratio is applied successively to the population of each State. This process will yield in the aggregate a number less than the number of Representatives originally taken. The difference, according to the best and most equitable recent practice, should be made up by assigning to the State having the largest fractions additional Representatives. Whenever a sufficient number of Representatives have been assigned on account of the fractions to make up the total number taken such assignment should cease. There is no such assignment should cease. There is no place for moieties or arbitrary members. The second table, "B," is more compendious. It shows in its first column the present number under the census of 1870 among the several columns. eral States, and in the second column the final number for each State on the census of final number for each State on the census of 1880, on the basis of 293, and in the other columns that number with the changes from 293 up to and including 307. It appears that on the census of 1880, by the increase from 293 to 294 Massachusetts gains 1, by the increase to 295 Louisiana gains 1, by the increase to 296 Pennsylvania gains 1, by the increase to 297 Maryland gains 1, by the increase to 298 New York gains 1, by the increase to 298 New York gains 1, by the increase to 299 Alabama gains 1, and when the total number of representatives is increased to 300 one of the most striking features of the table appears. It is a curious eccentricity of mathematics. Alabama loses the representative she gained the sporting editor of a weekly paper of this

CHESTERTON, England, Jan. 7, '81.

Sir—Several reports have appeared of late conveying an impression that I refused to take up O'Leary's challenge, which is an erroneous one. After my last victory for the world's belt at Agricultural Hall, Islington, I received a challenge from O'Leary on behalf of an unknown for another match and a small deposit was placed striking features of the table appears. It is a curious eccentricity of mathematics. Alabama loses the representative she gained at 299, and Texas and Illinois gain 1 each. At 301 Alabama regains the representative so lost. By the increase to 302 Florida gains 1, by the increase to 303 Ohio gains 1, by the increase to 304 North Carolina gains 1, by the increase to 305 Tennessee gains 1, by the increase to 306 Pennsylvania gains 1, by the increase to 306 Pennsylvania gains 1, by the increase to 307 New York gains another, making 2 gains over 293 under the census of 1880. But still New York even then loses 1 from her present number under the apportionment of 1870. In his letter transmitting the above to Mr. Cox General Walker says: I have not carried the computation further, as this was the limit indicated in your report for the preparation of the table. The table exhibits in full an arithmetical process by which the number in each State is reached. The smaller table accompanying (marked table B) exhibits simply the number of Representatives to be assigned to each State according to a total number.

The House Committee on Elections gave a hearing to Mr. Hurd on the subject of the election of Hon. Ezra D. Taylor as the successor of General Garfield in the House. Mr. Taylor was elected to fill the unexpired term of General Garfield from the Nineteenth district, as it was constituted before the reapportionment a year ago. When he presented another match and a small deposit was placed in your hands, which I expressed my inten-tion of covering. But O'Leary, on hearing that I should name some building in England for the race, thought fit to withdraw the money, and in consequence no match was made. In naming England as the scene for the next contest I acted fully in accordance with the conditions previously enforced by O'Leary when he was the holder of the tro-O'Leary when he was the holder of the trophy, viz., that all matches for the belt, to preserve its international character, should be decided in the country in which the holder resides. O'Leary can rest assured that I am not unwilling to compete against Hart or any other man in the world he may think fit to pit against me in a match for a substantial stake, (not less than £500 a side, providing it be arranged to take place within a reasonable time and in a suitable building, either in London or New York. O'Leary is said to be anxious to make a match with Vanghan. If his backers do not feel disposed to put so much as £500 on him for a weeks walk with O'Leary I will make good any difference between the amount they can put up and the required sum. O'Leary can rest assured that he can be accommodated with either or both matches by sending fair articles and a deposit. I am, sir, yours &c.

This court was in session yesterday. Judge Harrison rendered judgment for the plaintiff in the case of Sperry, administrator, vs. Rowe, to recover $551. A question of costs will be argued hereafter.

The cases of H. S. and Prudence S. Edwards vs. Randolph P. Myers, and Herman T. Edwards et ux. vs. George W. Flower & Co., were heard on a question of law. The cases are defendants' appeals from the judgement of a justice. Judgment was rendered September 13, and an appeal was taken to the following or November term of the Court of Common Pleas. A plea of abatement was argued but overruled, and the cases will be tried upon their merits.

In Guilford yesterday morning, before Judge Harrison sitting as a justice of the peace, were partially heard the cases against George E. Meigs, Edward Sherman and Thomas Smith. It will be remembered that the liquors of these parties were seized under for a mere fraction of their value to an old "Maine" or prohibitory law which remains on the statute books, having never been repealed. The value of liquors seized from Meigs was about $1,000, and that be-from Meigs was about $1,000, and that belonging to Smith and Sherman was rated at about $50. In the Meigs case Judge Stoddard appeared for the State and ex-Judge Blydenburgh for the defendant. Judge Blydenburgh raised the point, on a plea in abatement, that Judge Harrison being judge of the Court of Common Pleas could not legally hear the case as a justice of the peace. The judge took the matter under advisement and will render a decision next Saturday.

It was decided to reserve decision in the cases of Sherman and Smith until Saturday

Thousands have been ruined for life by drinking popular nostrums, the principal ingredients of which was alcohol. Such "bitters" are deceptive in their effects; they cause intoxication and temporary relief, while they foster the drunkard's appetite.
