THE LARGEST DAILY NEWSPAPER IN THE CITY.
NEW HAVEN, CONN., SATURDAY MORNING, JUNE 23, 1883.

OFFICE 400 STATE STREET.
Price Three Cents.

The Silk Store of New Haven.

Two weeks of very brisk sales have broken up some lines of goods and to close out the lota lower by the maker on the remainder. Noteworthy among these are a line of 5-4 All-Wool Suitings in Cardinal, Electric Blues, Navy Blue, Brown, Olive, Brown, Brown, Wine, Green, and Hues, the entire remainder of which will be offered at 62 1/2. They were considered very good value when at 75. With them will be lot of 5-4 odd pieces, in staple colors, of fine 5-4 goods at prices reduced 10 to 15 per cent. on our former very low figures. A few pieces of Shephard's Check & Dress Goods that sold at 50c will be given at 50c, and some 3-4 goods of the same style for 18c that were 25c. A line of Lace Trimmings in light colors at 7c a yard. Summer Silks will also be overhauled and some new prices made. A very handsome line of full width and best quality Dress Canaries will be given at 10c. These are perfect, good and good styles. The Combination Chambery Suitings that we have had such an extraordinary run on lately are not yet sold, but they cannot last much longer and cannot be replaced at the price.

The 7 1/2 extraordinary rapidly with which our Gause Underwear for ladies, gentlemen and children has been going off continues to show that we were correct in supposing that we offered the goods at less prices, quality considered, than others were making. We can still meet all demands.

What some call the 37 1/2 Satines we are selling at 20c. We have the 1 1/2 Satines too, that are often advertised as if they were as good as the other. Our styles are fully as good as any that are offered, at that price, but our 30c goods sell much quicker, and so do our 37 1/2 French goods. Mosquito Nets will probably be scarce soon as one of the largest manufacturers has gone out of the business. We have a full line in all colors.

We have some novelties in cheap Curtain Materials for shop cottages. Our line of gentlemen's gowns for summer wear is complete, and our prices will stand comparison with any.

"THE GOOD MAN IN POLITICS."

There are no men in the country quite so free from the party spirit against which Washington voters are contending as the professional politicians of both parties. They stimulate party spirit in every possible way, and to see their own party, work it for it is worth. Their favorite newspapers are the black and thin sheets which are filled with the party, and which hold no crime equal to the crime of boiling and of scorching anyone who dares to speak more or less truth than they themselves.

The foregoing extract from the New York Times is, to use its own language, "a precise expression of the fact,"—certainly so far as local politics are concerned. In general it is, of course, a mistake to suppose that the present is worse than the past, yet no man who has lived through the last two decades with his eyes open can fail to see that a great deal of good has been done in the way of men who control party machinery. In the early years of the anti-slavery contest the best men took an active interest in politics because they felt that they must. The passage of the time has shown that the same men who have never existed before in this country. A sense of outraged justice made every right-minded man a politician. The ablest men of the party were put into the public life. Men of position and character went into politics as a little later they went into the volunteer army, led by the highest impulses of human nature is capable. The change which has taken place since is very radical one. The best elements have everywhere sunk to the bottom and mire has come to the top. The change has been, as the Times indicates, from a class of men who were in politics to a class of men who go into it "to make something out of it."

The absence of men of culture and high character from the ranks of the party is a common remark. The remedy that has been generally suggested is that they return to it. This is as much as to say that the remedy for a disease is to cure it. Hardly anyone will dispute that the best men should take part in politics. The question is how to get them to do it. It is not very easy to get respectable men to go into politics, and it is not very easy to get them to stay in it. It is not very easy to get them to stay in it. It is not very easy to get them to stay in it.

If the politicians are to be taken on their own ground it must be done by their own methods. In order to control the caucus they must be ready to pack it if necessary, and the very act of packing it is one to which a man of self-respect and honor of fair play is not willing to descend. The best men of the community have neither the time nor the disposition to resort to caucus methods, and no amount of preaching, either by tongue or the pulpit will ever induce them to do it. If preaching would accomplish this result it ought to have been done already, for it is a well known fact that the difficulty is not that the better part of the community have too little to do with politics, but too much to do with them; not that they do not attend the caucus, but that they attend it by its results. If they refused to be controlled by it there would be a sudden end of the present race of politicians. Political evils generally suggest their remedy, that is to say, the remedy is to be found in the cause itself. In New York it has been discovered that the way for good men to have influence in politics is not to attend the caucus, but to get into it. At the last election a non-partisan Citizens' committee was formed to make good nominations. This we believe is solving the question of the good man in politics in a very common-sense way. The way to get into it is to get into it. The way to get into it is to get into it.
