THE JOURNAL AND COURIER, New Haven, Conn.

Thursday, December 26, 1889, IOWA AND THE RAILHOADS. The end of the long contest between the State authorities of Iowa and the railroads of the State is significant. The fight has been a hot one, and in it the State has not made a fine figure. At first the commissioners sought to enforce a ruinously low schedule of rates. The roads took the case into ourt, which issued a restraining order on he commissioners. The latter subsequently modified their original plan, promulgating a revised schedule, which the court suggested hould stand the test of experiment. The railroads have not been altogether satisfied with this latter schedule, and in some cases have brought suits to enjoin it, while on the other hand the State authorities have instituted numerous suits for heavy penalties, as provided under the law, the position altonow withdrawn their injunction suits, and the State authorities their penalty suits. The rallroads have secured immunity from further rosecution, having consented to adopt subantially the revised tariff.

The State of Iowa ought to let the railroad alone for awhile now. Its ill-considered action against them has damaged both the DISCONTENTED FARMERS.

The worm will turn, and the farmers, who n the scheme of modern combination occupy a worm's place, are turning. They are getting tired of paying big prices for transportation and getting nothing for their products. The discontent is prevalent in this State, as well as elsewhere. A Goshe farmer makes his complaint to the Litchfield Enquirer. He says that not only are their farms depreciated more than one half in value since the war, but that if sold at all, the grand list or the town at more than it could be sold for, as a general rule; and that, This, with cattle selling at three cents a pound live weight, butter netting the farmer grain worth less than it costs to raise them. and with labor, taxes and expenses of living high, have so discouraged the farmers that while New England shows growing cities abandone !. Nor is the western farmer bet-ter off, just now, at least. His wheat brings rages are eating out what substance he has. The device of a voluntary club, formed for the purpose of buying liquors to stock a saloon at which the members can call for and pay for their drink from time to time, has received a check from the New York Court of Appeals. The Social Valley club, as the several hundred men and boys who entered into the scheme called themselves, used the saloon of one Andrews, who had been unable to get a license, and he acted at the steward of the club. When a member took a drink he paid the stoward as o much toward his contribution to the funds of the club. If a friend who was not a member came with him, the drink of the non-mem way by the member. The Supreme court is have been admonished by the Court of Appeals that they erred in holding that this was not a sale. Judge Danforth summed up the whole matter tersely by saying: "Five hunt dred men buy a quantity of liquor; they as store it and appoint an agent to manage it. On the application of one of the 500, the signt appoint an agent to manage it. On the application of one of the 500, the signt appoint an agent to manage it. The government salt works are situated here. On the seashore, long before we anchored, huge conical heaps of salt, like tents in appearance, attracted our attention. There were more than 150 of them by actual count. The commerce of the place is extremely limited, however, since the island has not yet recovered from the disastrous and terrible earthquake of 1881, when 4,000 lives were lost. Silk, wool and cotton, with a variety of tropical fruits, constitutes its chief productions.

several thousand gypsies of Croatia recently held an open-air indignation meeting at Odra to protest against the measures to put a stop to their wanderings, the authorities having even threatened, if necessary, to set fire to their encampments. The orators warmly defended the time-honored privileges of the race, especially the free vagabond life inherited from their forefathers from time immemorial. The meeting was rambles about the place we saw camels for the first time in our experience outside of a menagerie. The streets, dark, narrow and crowded, were full of them. Usually fastened together in droves of five, or six, they were laden with grapes, figs and other native products, brought from various parts of Asia minor on their way to the United States and other distant markets.

Polycarp is pointed out. He was the first Rags attached to sticks near the spot fluttered in the gentle breeze. They were torn from the clothing of invalids by friends and brought to the sacred site, under the impression that health would thereby return once more. Our conductor cautioned us against approaching a certain place where a rude mat was placed, with some attempt at decoration, as it was regarded as a holy situation. Death has been inflicted on some presumptions but thoughtless visitor who went too far.

Smyrns has very bad drinking water and the strictest temperance man is puzzled to know what to drink in that fever smitten city, especially at meals where tea and coffee are not served. At different periods the cholera and plague have decimated the population, while terrific carthquakes have been experienced, notably in A. D. 178 and 1846. By a destructive fire in 1841 more than 13,000 were swept away in a few hours, as the appliances for extingulahing confiagrations are exceedingly primitive.

An evening visit was made to the "Smyrna Rest," for seamen on the quay fronting the bay. A big, honest looking leader was in charge. A few years ago he entered a Bowery Mission, New York, as a drunken sailor. He was converted and now makes it his life work to conduct a similar mission for the reformation of sailors touching at Smyrna. A coffee and reading room are connected with the enterprise.

reformation of sailors touching at Smyrna. A coffee and reading room are connected with the enterprise.

Before sailing from Smyrna a side trip to Ephesus was made by railway. It was also one of the seven churches of Asia and is distant from that seaport fifty miles. But few traces of its former grandeur remain. A section of the great Roman acqueduct, foundations of the famous Temple of Diana and other prominent structures alone exist. This renowned temple, so dazzling that visitors were cautioned to look out for their eyesight on entering it, was four hundred and twenty-five feet long and two hundred and twenty feet wide. The roof was of cedar, which was supported by one hundred and twenty feet wide. The roof was of cedar, which was supported by one hundred and twenty-eight columns, sixty feet high. The statue of the Goddess of Diana was composed of ivory, profusely decorated with ornaments of gold. According to a well authenticated tradition this magnificent temple—justly styled one of the seven wonders of the world, was entirely consumed by an incendiary fire. A misguided miscreant, Erostratus, confessed the crime; his desire being an eternity of disgrace, knowing that in this form his name would descend to remotest posterity.

In the stonewalls around some of the farming land, portions of capitals, frieses columns and other portions of the ancient temple, and other edifices can be seen.

Much curiosity exists among archeologists as to the whereabouts of the vast quantities of building material of which these structures were originally composed. Thousands of a scree of unfenced land, covered with myriads of cobble stones, are seen on every thand. How the average goat manages to exist there during the dry season is an unsolved problem, since vegetation is absolutely invisible, the entire country being so to speak a bed of hot ashes, gleaming seven to research and found rest and food at our superb hotel which overlooked the waters of the bay.

In rocking, tossing, small boats we bade a long farewell to Smyrna, and were rowed to the French steamer anchored off shore.

We found the steamer anchored off shore.

We found the steamer well filled though ample accommodations had been reserved.

Walker stated that four and five cents a day was all that the natives received. Even blacksmiths had received no more. The blacksmiths had received no more. The location for a day's labor, which seems to the impover label people a small fortune. Laborers will carry from 400 to 500 pounds on their backs, about a camel's load. The Euphrates is the Mississippi or Nile of the region, furnishing in many ways much of the scanty employ in ment to be found. The river is navigable for 1,100 miles and is 1,800 miles in length. From Alexandreta to Latakia the sail was eighty miles more. On the coast the spot is pointed out where Jonah was thrown ashore by the fish that had devoured him. Much of the entire coast line is tame and uninteresting, though the exceedingly quiet sea and distant mountain ranges serve to render the trip a delight. We pass near battlefields, famous in history, where Alexander and Darins met in battle, and near the line of march of the faustical and undisciplined Crusaders and a peculiar charm to the entire journey, reviving the studies of one's youth.

The Isle of Patmos displayed its shadowy outlines in the gray dawn of the morning, though too far to secure distinct impressions. Since it was not included in our itinerary no stop was made. It seemed like a dreamy, sequestered spot. St. John, the apoetle, banished to this lonely retreat by the Emperor Domitian, A. D. 95, wrote here the book of Revelation, and possiby the gospel of John, during his confinement. It is a desolate, rocky region, the entire island being but twenty-eight miles in circumference. At the time of his incarceration it was merely a Botany Bay for the imprisonment of criminals and political offenders. Tourists are shown the spot where St. John is said to have received the communications from heaven, which few, if any of them, believe.

is said to have received the communications from heaven, which few, if any of them, believe.

Tarsus is but ten miles distant from Messina, but the progress is slow since the road-way is in poor repair and the two trains each way, daily, are of a mixed character, combiningboth freight and passengers in their make-up. British capitalists own the railway and an English speaking conductor gave us an opportunity to glean information concerning the country. The passenger cars were fairly comfortable with divans in portions of them for the special accommodation of the traveling Turk who cannot enjoy life unless he tucks both feet crosswise beneath him, sitting on his legs, tailor fashion.

At various places along the route the cotton crop was being gathered, elsewhere the work had been completed and nought but barren fields of dry stubble were visible. A Turkish officer entered our car and began to take our names, residence, destination, business, with a variety of other equally impertinent questions. Our watchfait tourist conductor soon called him one side, elipped a fee into his itching palms, when he abandoned his investigations, seemingly begun in the interest of the government. As the miserable Turkish soldier is half clad, often going in rags waiting for promised uniforms which are seldom seen, without even his small salary being paid him, in sheer desperation he is driven to bribes and petty the interest of the government. As the miserable Turkish soldier is half clad, often going in rags waiting for promised uniforms which are seldom seen, without even his small salary being paid him, in sheer desperation he is driven to bribes and petty swindles "to keep soul and body within speaking distance of each other," as an erratic Methodist preacher once put it in describing his unavailing efforts to live on a low salary.

Tarus traces its origin to the period of Sardanapalus. It is certainly of very gre at antiquity. Many important events have transpired within its borders. Situated on the right bank of the river Cyduns it is surrounded by an extensive and productive plain of great fertility. Like most eastern countries the houses are built of stone of a gloomy appearance, with flat roofs, presenting a squatty appearance. Rude bazaars crowded close to the streets, with a meager display of primitive wares needed by the native population. Dark and dirty loaves of bread, flat as the proverbial pancake, were being baked before a crackling fire of roots and branches of trees. An ample supply of which our party secured a large quantity, which with some of the dark, freshly baked for bread, constituted a lunch, as Tarsus has no hotel.

Camels, donkeys, and natives crowded the om natives orom now, destroying all her old letters."—Life.

Camels, donkeys, and natives crowded the narrow and dingy streets. Evidently we were as great a curiosity to the people as they were to us, as we drove through the principal streets in the quaintest of old-fashioned carriages. Droves of camels were arriving and departing while many of these At the Hotel Table.—Waiter (to Uncle Greencorn)—"What is your order, sir" Uncle Greencorn—"I belong to the Masonic order at Sturmpville; thank ye. fashloned carriages. Droves of camels were arriving and departing while many of these homely but faithful "ships of the desert" were lying in the shade, sheltered from the fierce rays of the ruddy sun.

St. Paul described Tarsus as "no mean city." Whatever may have been its character during his day it presented a squalid, unattractive and positively mean appearance to us. For the first time we witnessed an eastern Khan, at this place. It has rooms to accommodate the men of the caravan with an enclosed court and stalls for the animals below. In a similar spot at Bethlehem, the Saviour was born, there being "no room" for his family "in the inn." Water, called by the Arab, "the gift of God," is exceedingly scare, and poor in quality. But seventeen inches of rain had fallen during the preceeding year, which fully explains the shrunken appearance of the river Cydnus and the Falls of Cydnus already described.

Before our train left Tarsus a visit was made to the traditional tomb of Sardanspalus and also te the Mahomedan mosque where the prophet Daniel is said to have been buried. The American public school was in session and before leaving we had the pleasure of seeing a group of bright-eyed little girls go out for a short walk under the direction of their teacher. Near by stood a plain Armenian church. According to tradition it is built on the site of the first Christian church in the city, the original foundations being utilized. Out of the ancient dome a large flock

Ont of the ancient dome a large flock of fluttering swallows flew as we entered the venerable structure. Among other relics a plece of Noah's ark is soberly placed on exhibition. The men and women sit apart, occupying mats on the stone floor. The priest is permitted to marry but once, but in no case must he be united to a blood relative, under penalty of imprisonment for each offense. The Rev. Mr. McLaughlin, missionary, being away during the hot season, we were obliged to forego a visit to him planned by some of the party.

Our next landing was Alexandria, eighty miles distant. Before going ashore our hearts had been gladdened and our curiosity aroused by the appearance of the American flag, which was displayed above a large building near the seashore. We were all of the opinion that it must be the headquarters of the United States consul until we reached the spot.

of the United States consul until we reached the spot.

It proved to be the liquorice root warehouse of the Stamford, Conu., Manufacturing company. Here was a genuine surprise indeed! Although seven thousand miles from home, we had stumbled upon the American fisg, a Yankee business house, and a Connecticut one at that, managed by men only thirty miles from our home.

Mr. Daniel Walker, superintendent, courteously explained the operations of the company and gave us much interesting information regarding the condition of the country. The supply of liquorice root is obtained from the banks of the Euphrates, about three hours ride distant. It is brought on the backs of camels in loads of five hundred pounds each. Apparently the supply is inexhaustable, as much of the root remains in the ground, which rapidly grows and spreads after the next rainfall. After being conveyed to the warehouse it is pressed into huge bales, bound with iron hoops and converted into liquorice paste, such as is commonly seen in drug stores.

Mr. Walker is a Scotchman by birth and is converted into liquorice paste, such as is commonly seen in drug stores.

Mr. Walker is a Scotchman by birth and has experienced many dangers and much rough usage among robbers, as he travels among the mountains to remote places in the interests of his business. However, he is as bold as a lion, and "none of these things move him." He goes well armed, is a good shot and a superb horeeman. He has the eye of an eagle, with the celerity and caution of a cat. In some combat in the near future he may fall, but the chances are that some of his foes will fall first. It is understood that he has already winged one or two deadly assassins who attempted his life. But nominal wages are paid as a rule in this portion of the Turkish empire. Mr. Walker stated that four and five cents a day was all that the natives received. Even blacksmiths had received no more. The Stamford company pays about fifty cents for a day's labor, which seems to the impoverished people a small fortune. Laborers will carry from 400 to 500 pounds on their backs, about a came!'s load. The first witness was Officer Orr. He said that about 11:30 Tuesday night he heard several pistol shots fired in rapid succession while he was on Crown street. He hurried down College street to George, and then to Factory. In a house, corner of Factory and Commerce streets, he found John Glordana, covered with blood, and a out in his neck about an inch and a half in length. Acting on information he received he arrested Andrew Gezzo, Antonio Mons, and Congetta Brogetta. The latter is a woman.

John Glordana, the injured man, took the stand. He could not talk Engitsh. Not much could be seen of his face, for it was pretty well muffled up in a shawl on account of his wound. He said that he was knifed. The woman Congetta, held him and her husband struck him and used the knife. The witness fought to get away, and after he had done so Mons fired several pistol shots after him. He saw Mona draw the revolver. This he was positive of, and he made vehement gestures to that effect. He said that the party beside himself and wife were three boarders.

John Richi corroborated Giordana's statement. He was with him at the time.

Those who drive about the city frequently have made several complaints regarding the condition of the streets where the sewer manholes are situated. In some of the streets that are not paved, the dirt has worked away from the manholes so that the cast iron tops project about six inches above the street level. In the day time they can be seen by the drivers, and are not so dangerous as after dark when they are hazardous particularly if a wagon wheel strikes the east iron at a certain angle on the side of the manhole. If a wheel should strike the manhole in this way the axle is liable to be partly broken so that it will only require another slight strain to break it completely off. A gentleman of this city recently broke his carriage axle and had a narrow escape from injury, in consequence of one of these projecting manhole covers.

There are many fast road horses owned in this city that the public knows comparatively little about, as their owners are not particularly given to boasting of their possessions. Since the Hubinger brothers gave a new name and new life to Hamilton Park, the interest in trotting horses has been somewhat stimulated and will be still more increased during the next trotting season.

At the Howard avenue Congregational church this evening the Sanday school will give its Christmas entertainment. A splendid programme has been prepared.

Mr. E. D. Bassett, jr., of this city, son of Hon. E. D. Bassett, jr., of this city, son of Hon. E. D. Bassett, secretary of the Haytian legation is recovering from a severe attack of pneumonia. He is still much prostrated, but the symptoms are now very encouraging.

We were amused the other day to see a certain grocer try to convince a lady that he had a better soap than Brussels, but the lady was too sharp for film, and went to the next store and bought ten bare of Brussels soap.

The annual Christmas festival of the Calvary Baptist church will take place this evening. Gifts will be brought which will be bestowed upon the poor later. There will be a distribution of gifts for the primary scholars.

Horses of this strain of blood have become famous during the past season, partly on account of the remarkable performances of Nelson, who early in the season dropped his record to 3:16 to win first money. Later he lowered his record to 2:15 to win another victory, and at Hartford last fall he won $2,500 and got his present mark. At this time it was said that Nelson had not been driven to a break during the entire season. either in his exercise or during his races.

Later he won the $10,000 race for stallions at Boston.

Catherine Sullivam Just Gets Out of Jail and is Out Only One Bay.
Catherine Sullivan was in the City court yesterday morning with a heavy veil over her face. She was charged with drunkenness. She denied the charge, but admitted that she had had all little racket, but that she was not to blame.

"Where is your husband?' inquired his honor."

"I don't know."

"Were you ever married!"

This seemed to compose Catherine for a face, and had had all all a load voice said that the man she had lived with got a losses, but that hey were never married!"

At this juncture his honor teld her to raise her veil. She disclosed under her right eye a most beautiful embellishment, which extended half the length of her face. She had been hit pretty hard by somsone. She would not tell how she received the bruise. Her yes was almost closed.

"Well, Catherine," said his honor, "you have been here twelve times. When did you get ent last?"

"Yesterday morning. You sent me up he last time for thirty days."

"If you can't behave yourself better on the first day after you get out you had better go back for thirty days more."

The Boston Herald says that it has created quite a sensation in that city. People of all circles have been attacked by it, and Christmas trade was affected on account of it to some extent. William H. Blies, son of Zenus Blies, of this city, who is employed at the Colter Tower Manufacturing company, has been soverely affected with it. He writes that the Russian influenza attacks people first with severe pains in the back and head. This is followed by great debility and a feeling of utter exhaustion. Doctors say that it leaves a patient in so exhausted a condition that pneumonia is liable to follow. In one establishment, employing a large number of hands, one-third have been afflicted by it. It is reported to be spreading in every direction, and is liable to visit every section of the country now that it has obtained a foothold.

They were apt to form their ideas fro seeing the government rations distributed a an agency when they arrive. The Indians an agency when they arrive. The Indians on those days dress in their best clothes. The afternoon of the day is spent in song and dance and an elaborate supper with other festivities follows in the evening. When the meat is distributed one hundred or more frennied steers are driven into a corral and one is let out at a time. The families who are entitled to a portion of the meat are notified and the men and boys, mounted on horseback and armed with rifles set after it, shouting and yelling. They finally kill it and the meat is dressed.

She had tried in vain to get the small books she wanted, and for two years had been obliged to take what was left over at the agency. She believed this is due largely to the system of furnishing the articles by contract.

The government also frequently imposed upon the Indians through its commissioners who frequently arouse their anger by making exorbitant and unfair demands, examples of which she cited. The future of the rad man was in American citizenship. She had never been more kindly or hospitably treated than by them. She knew that they would make excellent citizens. in Many Cities. the Great Southern Editor and Orator Laid at Rest in Oakland Cemetery

ATLANTA, Ga., Dec. 25 .- One year ago enry Grady wrote for the Constitution an litorial entitled "A Perfect Day." That hristmas day was beautiful, and to-day was nother such. As the sun shed its last rays pon the city all that was mortal of Henry Toodfen Grady was laid to rest in Oakland emetery. The simple citizen of these United States was buried with honors worthy of the mightiest potentate. There was no stentation, no display, no glittering pageant, all was simplicity; but the funeral process family to the church. The services were the simplest possible, at the request of the widow. Dr. Morrison, Dr. Lee, Dr. Barnett, Dr. Glenn, General Evans and Dr. Hopkins were the officiating ministers. Reading of selections from the Scriptures, singing of hymns, and prayers by Dr. Morrison, Methodist, and Dr. Barnett, Presbytarian completed the services. The singing WASHINGTON NOTES. rison, Methodist, and Dr. Barnett, Presbyterian, completed the services. The singing of Mr. Grady's favorite hymn, "Shall We Gather at the River," was especially touching. The long procession wended its way to Oakland, and in the family vault of W. D.

Grant, the body of Henry Grady found a temporary resting place.
One short prayer at the vault and all was over.

The people of Atlanta will erect a monument to the memory of Henry W. Grady. A neeting of young men yesterday raised $5,000 within one hour. To day they issued an address seeking subscriptions. Remittances to the fund should be sent to T. A. Hammond, Gate City bank, Atlanta.

The opening song by the Arions was entitled "Das ist der Tag des Herrn," or "This is the Day of Our Lord." After this song the president of the society, Mr. G. Harder, delivered an address in German, which embodied the following:

"This is not only our festival, but it is the festival which is celebrated world-wide by Germans. It is not only our festival, but it is the festival of all who have the best interests of mankind at heart. Before Christmas was so extensively celebrated the old Germans had a holiday at this time of the year which was celebrated on account of the increasing length of the days, as these ancient Germans believed that as the days grew longer the sun grew stronger. Now we celebrate our Saviour's birthday partly on account of our children, for whom we wish to provide amusement and such education as shall be for their best interests in the future."

duction of reforms and economies, and a financial reorganization of the company that has met general approval.

During the Progress of this reorganization it has been frequently auggested in the public press and by numerous and large holders of the company's securities that it would give greater stability to the reorgan-ized company if a management committed to the successful working out of the plan of reorganization, and absolutely in the interest of the property, could be secured for several years.

Consulting our own inclination and convenience, we would prefer to leave the management of this great property to others; but we recognize the force of the suggestion and the necessity for some such arrangement, and, as many shareholders believe that great advantages are libely to small the suggestion.

Connors made New Haven's last goal.

The spectators groaned a little, as John Smith never moved to stop the drive.

This left the score 8 to 5 in favor of the New Havens. The score:

Playing on Both Sides.

The Meridens made it seven straight tie. The rink was crowded and many people ment, and, as many sharsholders believe that great advantages are likely to result to the holders of all classes of the company's securities from such co-operation, we have consented to act in the matter.

Holders of Stock of the Atchisen, Topeka & Santa Fe Railroad Company may deliver their certificates, assigned upon the back in favor of George C. Magoun, Thomas Baring, Oliver W. Pesbody and John J. McCook, to the BOSTON SAFE DEPOSIT AND TRUST COMPANY, 87 Milk Street, Boston, subject to an agreement that the title to such Stock and the voting power therson shall be vested in our nominees or their auccessors, also to be named by us, for ten years, or sports are funny creatures. At one time,

I intend to desert the New Haven team. I want to do everything as squarely as possible. I want my friends to know that I am acting honorably. If the New Haven management can find a chance to sell my release to a National league clab I will go to that clab. In that way I will give them a chance to get back the money they paid out for my release from Wilkesbarre. But I will not play in New Haven, although overything between me and its management is perfectly agreeable. I dont want the people to think I am a deserter and will stoop to dishonest work."

three coats are put on for the best work. They are then sent to the packing room, where they go through a process called heading. This consists of getting each one strong upon a wire. The next operation is to weigh them and pack them in small packages, properly labeled for the retail trade. The final operation consists of putting them up in gross lots and packing them in large boxes for shipment to sil parts of the world. A packet of one dozen hairpins usually sells for two cents at retail.

"What are your prospects for next season?"

"They are of the best. We have sixteen men signed, and, excepting Fogarty, I don't consider that we will feel the loss of any of the old men if they should not sign. Buffinton's action has been outrageous. The Philadelphia club has always treated him with the utmost consideration and for the few games that he pitched for us last season I am certain that any just and fair-minded man will say that he was paid handsomely. Now see what he has done. Would the Philadelphia club like to have him? No. I wouldn't go scross the street to secure him. The ball to Menard, who ceged it. It was a brilliant play.

The play was improving on both sides. Bridgeport won the eighth on good passing by Menard and Frazer. Again the score was tied, the score being 4 to 4.

John Smith left his cage in the ninth, by banking the ball instead of trying to juggle it past him. This tied the score for the third time, 5 to 5.

In the eleventh Phelan mispassed the ball sand Reed rushed out fifteen feet to block menard. There was great applause. Hill passed to Connors, who stopped the ball into a man."

Day, Anderson, Gleason, and left-handed or "Phenomenal" Smith, pitchers; Clements, Burke, Decker and Schriver, catchers; Mulvey, Sam Thompson, Myers, Delehanty, Mayer, a fielder; McCauley, first baseman from the Central Inter-State league, and Allen, a clever short stop from the Davenport club. This is quite a strong combination of playing talent, and, as I said before, with the exception of Fogarty, I don't care a snap of my finger if the balance of the eld men don't sign."

used to turn them out in sufficient quantities to meet the ever increasing demands of an advancing civilization. In a hairpin

TO FEMALES:

TO MALES Who are suffering from the errors of youth, ios manhood, etc., and find themselves weakened and debilitated, and also those suffering from venercal diseases: Dr. Lyon will prove to you that he CAN and WILL CURE YOU. Hundreds of advertise ments appear in papers with statements of marveilous cures which TEMPT WANT TO SEND FOR SOME WORTHLESS MEDICINES Which not only FAIL OF AYFORDING THE RELIES DESIRED, but also RUIN THE PATIENT'S CONSTITUTION. Bo not trust yourself to those leeches who prey upon the unfortunate but call at once on the doctor and you will never regret it.
