Miscellaneous. WOMAN'S GLORY.

MOST every woman can have a nice, cleanlooking complexion, even though not called beautiful. Many ladies are called careless because their skin looks muddy or blotched.
What is the cause? Nature. Why? Because Nature is her own doctor. The system cannot thrive when filled with all sorts of poisonous substances. Then Nature asserts herself and throws it off. Why do the eruptions and discolorations appear on the face and not on the body?
Because the face has no assistant, and instead of throwing off is added to. Ladies, by constant use of powders and different cosmetics, have filled the pores of the face until ventilation—such as is caused by perspiration in the body—is eatirely closed. The poisonous matter, unable to exude, lies congested underneath the surface.
This causes eruptions, commonly called eczema, you read it in a free trade editorial. Find out for yourself, and, if you find they have gone up, then find out why. The tariff bill is being given as the explanation of every increase of price. Even when the article is free of duty we are still told that "it's the McKinley bill." When you find you've been lied to in a dozen cases it's about time to do your own thinking. Look in the papers and see the advertisements. They tell more than the editorials on the other page which howl about increased prices. Why, only yesterday a free trade paper came to this office with its editorials sounding the cry of the increased cost of clothing and

The New York Tribune has found a thoughtful florist who waters his plants as he would water horses if he had them in his care. That is, when he thinks they need it most, when the sun is the hottest. "Do you drink only at night!" asked the florist. "Are you only thirsty when the sun goes down? That idea helps our business, for under it the flowers of the ignorant would-be growers die, and we get the opportunity of selling more of our stock. I water my flowers when they are thirsty."

Oscar Fay Adams has been saying in the columns of the North American Review some very severe things about Womanher bad manners in public, her rudeness possessions. The home life of Major McKinley is a model in every respect. Mrs. McKinley is an invalid. They have no children; but a sister of the Major, principal of one of the city schools, lived at the McKinley residence for many years. manners by exceptional women, the state-ment that woman in general is the refiner of manners is in any large sense an utterly false one. Furthermore, I have no hesitaof manners is in any large sense an uterry false one. Furthermore, I have no hesita-tion in declaring that the code of manners followed in public by the averge woman is disgracefully inconsiderate, superlatively selfish and exasperatingly insolent—such a code, in fact, as would not remain in force among men in their intercourse with one another for one half hour."

another for one half hour."

If this censor of woman's manners is making statements that he cannot substantiate he ought to be "dealt with." Ostracism would be a punishment none too severe for the ill-tempered, spiteful critic; but if he is right, it should be the business of every woman to put him in the wrong as soon as possible. This would not be a difficult matter, for if each woman appointed herself censor of manners.

National, State and municipal maintenance and control of all public highways, railways, waterways, telegraphs, gas, electric and water plants to be operated in the interest of the whole people at actual cost.

And so forth and so on. The only addition needed to this is a "demand" that all persons have everything they want in this world or any other they may happen to go into.

GO SLOW.

Anyone who reads the Democratic free trade papers would be apt to think that this country is on the verge of ruin on account of the new tariff law. But it will be wise for such resaders to be calm and to passe until they are sure that what they read is true. The Hartford Courant puts the matter about right when it says: Don't believe that prices have gone up because you read it in a free trade editorial. Find out for yourself, and, if you find they have pers and see the advertisements. They tell more than the editorials on the other page which how about increased prices. Why, only yesterday a free trade paper came to this office with its editorials sounding and another article in the same issue, includent in the cry of the increased cost of clothing and another article in the same issue, including the cry of the increased cost of clothing and another article in the same issue, including the cry of the increased cost of clothing and another article in the same issue, increased that prices hadn't gone tup a cent, and that the bill did him no good. Prices are up, it seems, when you want to rouse the people, and down when you want to rouse the people, and down when you want to rouse the people, and down when you want to rouse the people, and down when you want to rouse the manufacturer. It seems as easy to tell one story as the other; if only you believe in free trade—in the correct of the new tariff will be on prices. In the same as casy to tell one story as the other; if only you believe in free trade—in the correct of the new tariff will be on prices. In the meantime many new factories will be started and prosperity increased.

and brightness, even as these mountain torrents roar and flash and echo through their mighty gorges and gleus; and if a pilgrim writer ever got notice where prayer is heard and welcomed, one certainly had impressive attention directed to his needs this hospitable night. Then with handgraps all around, the host and hostess not forgetting their silent handmaids in the good-night ceremony, the inmates of the manse separated. And in my great chamber that night, even with the larches beating grewsomely at the windows, and the Highland winds whistling so wildly down the passes that the house shook and the chimnies creaked above and soughed drearily in their fire-places beneath, I passed from consciousness to sleep and dreams with the one thought above all: That the far-away world and its grinding activities hold nought in all their mighty possibilities like the blessed content, peace and faith beneath the roof of this one lonely Highland manse.

There is something positively bewitching in digging out the meaning of the old Gaelic names of things and places, still retained in the every-day topography of Scotland. The beauty and expressiveness of their application are remarkable. Take the single work strath as an example. Strath is English for the Gaelic Srath. It means a valley. But it means still more. It is a valley confined by hills or mountains on either side, through which a river runs. Then to any one who has lived, or wandered lovingly, in Scotland, how perfect in description, covering whole necessary sentences in our own language, are the compact suffixes. Stranraer, in Wigtown, from Srath-an-radhair, is the valley of good grass or pasture. Strathgroy, in Argyle, was once Srath-a-choire, or valley of the ravine. Stratherombel, in Ross-shire, is from Srath-crom-beul, or the valor the ravine. Stratherombel, in Rossishire, is from Srath-crom-beul, or the valley of the curved opening, an exact description in the fewest possible words. Then there is Strathearn, or Srath-ear-an, in Perthshire, the valley of the east-running river. Strathbrock, in Linlithgowshire, is from Srath-a-bhruic, the valley of the badgers. Strathbran, found both in the shires of Perth and Ross, was in Gaelic, Srath-Craoin, or valley of the dropping or drizzling showers. Again, in Perthshire, is Strathallen, from Srath-aluinn, the fair and beautiful valley, and Strathtuninel, corrupted from Srath-teththull, is the valley of the fierce stream or torrent. And here, away in the ragged northern edge of the shire of Inverness, is this wonderful Strathglass, to the Gaels Srathglas, their "gray valley;" gray in the skies above it, gray in its valley-bed where the stubble-fields, banks of clay and dreamful river blend; gray, despite the splätches of crimson laid by the pencils of the frost; gray in the masses of birch, in the myriads of lichened crags; and gray in the very mists of its countless waterfalls.

from so far a land as America. To their ken, I am the first American to know Strathglass. And what a thrill comes to one at the consciousness of possibly being the first American to be seen, nearly at the threshold of the twentieth century, anywhere on the face of this great earth!

The noble strath opens to the German ocean at Beauly, and with a gradual ascent cleaves straight and true through the mist-wreathed mountains for nearly thirty miles to the southwest, and then breaks into two western chasms, Glen Cannich and Glen Affric, which nearly equal Strathglass in beauty and grandeur. It is all one region. And across the seventy or eighty miles from sea to sea there are just two estates, that of the Chisolms of Chisolm and Kintail of Rossshire. These cover the straths and glens, reaching far over battery system for street electric rallways and the trolley system. Those interested in the former method come out with some remarkable claims in its support based on successes made in the line between Beverly and Danvers, Mass., a distance of three miles. This road was started for the purposes of public transportation on October 31, 1889, and up to October 1, 1890, it had lost but twenty-four trips and had made twenty-one extra trips. These losses are said to have been from causes independent of the system which is used for motive power. Other street railways are subject to the same causes, such as heavy snow-storms, or other casualties which interfere with even the best appointed road. Hence its friends assert that it is a system which can be depended upon.

The system has received some severe tests as to its power, having had heavily loaded cars to transport, which has been accomplished successfully in every instance.

With this fact comes the inquiry as to the character of the road bed. In general it is unfavorable to the success of an experiment. In the entire three miles and over there are not more than 300 feet of level ground. The road runs almost all of the way up and down hill and has several curves. The steepest grade is seven feet in 100, and each of the curves is on a grade so that the combination of difficulties tests the power of the motor greatly. But the power is sufficient and the obstacles have been overcome. The speed of the car is not as great going up hill as it is on a level or down hill, for it is not as economical to put on more power as it is to take more time, but the other course could be followed if desired. As it is the speed of the car averages about eight miles to the hour, and that is about the speed on the speed of the car averages about eight miles to the hour, and that is about the speed of the car averages about eight miles to the hour, and that is about the speed of the car averages about eight miles to the hour, and that is about the speed of the car averages about eight m The Consolidated road has bought two small pieces of land near State and Water streets, one from Henry S. in the storage system maintain that it is fully up to the attainments of the trolly system and that the latter cannot possibly have any superiority in that respect.

When it comes to the cost of construction and of operation, there is where the storage people assert their superiority with even more positiveness than in other respects. Compared with the old horse car system, there can be no comparison which is not decidedly in favor of the storage battery. A road equipped for ten or twelve cars, they say at the home office here, can easily be run for five cents per car per mile, while the cost of horses is about ten cents per car per mile. But the storage cars are lighter than the cars for the overhead system, and the original outlay is not nearly as great.

The total cost of getting the Milford line ready for running is put down at $42,000, while it is asserted that the trolly system would cost $64,000 to cover the same ground. The storage system avoids wholl, the expense of overhead wires and poles, which is about $7,000 per mile. Besides this, it saves the disfigurement of the streets by the poles and wires, which are a serious injury to any public thoroughtare, as is evident where this system has been erected. Besides the great saving in original outlay, the economy in repairs is extreme by comparison with the trolly system. It is charged agains, the latter that the annual outlay for repairs is 100 per cant, of the original cost. That is, the regairs in the second year of the existence of the system are equal in expense the entire cost in the first place. This does not come so much in the repairs of the wires over the streets as in the renewal of the motors, for it is said that there is a burning out in the overhead system which is very destructive and expensive. Against the outlay of 100 per cent, for repairs on a much larger investment, the storage people declare that they need but 5 per cent, of the smaller original outlant end of the overhead system which is very destructive and expensive. a comming out in the overhead system which is very destructive and expensive. Against the outlay of 100 per cent, for repairs on a much larger investment, the storage people declare that they need but 5 per cent, of the smaller original outlay for renewals. There is another item also to be considered, that without the overhead wires there is nothing of the danger to property and to life fisself which has been demonstrated to exist in the case of the trolly system. Since the recent illing of two horses of the West End Street Railway company on Tremont street it is said that the company has been obliged to keep very sharp watch of its wires, and that if a break occurs anywhere it is only a few minutes before a West End employe appears on the scene.

To the mind of the storage battery men, there can be no comparison of the overhead and the trolley systems which will not result greatly to the advantage of the former. He insists that he can transport passengers with as high a rate of speed, that his system is fully equal to all demands which are made upon it; that it is far more economical, both in original outlay and cost of repairs, especially in respect te the latter, in short, that the storage system is by all odds the best, and that it is surely destined to super sede the overhead. The storage men say that they have been operating their cars but about a year; that there has been a belief that they could not solve the problem; that they have teen operating their cars but about a year; that there has been a belief that they outled not solve the problem; that they have the problem in favor of their system, that it is particle of the buzzing which is such a disagreeable an accompaniment of the overhead system. Their cars move noiselessip and the motion is very steady.

One of the features of the invention which makes it so economical in running is that when the car is going down hill the power of the wheels is used to make electrici Nothing further has yet been done by proposed big new New Haven wagon manfactory. New and Desirable Investment.

The Home Life Insurance company has devised a new instend of insurance which merits attention. It is effected through the medium of what is known as a "deferred annutly bond," whose leading features are that it provides for a participation in profits, limited payments, a return of premiums and a cash surrender option. The directory of the road has been much confirmed in its favorable opinion of the storage battery system by different reports reaching them of its workings, and especially so by an article in the Springfield Republican of this week from a regular correspondent to that paper, the gist of which is given below. President Warren of the State Street company said to a Counter reporter recently a considerable amount of timber and boards were washed away.

At Mansfield's lumber yard above the Grand avenue bride on Mill river men were kept on duty all the morning to prevent the drifting away of the lumber. Austin the Mansfield, who has been engaged in business on the river front for a great many years, said that the tide yesterday was the highest he had known in twenty-five years. The water flooded the boiler room at the new plant of the Electric Light company on Mill river. Considerable damage was done, especially to the newly erected portions of the buildings. The constant work of a large number of men was required to bank up the river front in order to prevent a general flooding out. At the G. F. Warner Manufacturing company the tide flooded the roadways but did no damage to the property.

At 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon the center of the storm was supposed to be on Long Island, but as the storm had raised such havoc with the telegraph wires along the coast it was impossible to tell exactly where it was located.

The steamer New Haven of the old line, which had taken the place of the Continental and left New York Thursday night for this city, had not arrived up to a late hour last night, but owing to the fath that word had been received at the office here to the effect that in consequence of the storm the boat had given up the trip and was lying at the foot of Seventh street, New York city, no apprehension for her safety was felt. The C. H. Northam arrived about an hour late last evening and left again on her regular very much struck with one thing—and that a very important one—that none of the companies using electricity were able to report to the meeting how much the plants of their respective roads cost, or what the running expenses were. They could give no data on which to found an stimate as to what it would cost here estimate as to what it would cost here. They seemed to be all at sea when anything like exact figures were asked for. There's the trouble.

Before going to battle, continued Mr. Atwater, count the cost; some of the roads hadn't used electricity but a few months, and some used electricity on a part of their road and horses on the other part. Just as soon as we get a definite and sound basis on which to start we will equip our road with the electric cars; and we want the best. It is no small undertaking, as it will, as near as we can estimate it, cost double to equip the road with the electric system than the whole cost of our road up to date.

Northam arrived about an hour late last evening and left again on her regular trip about midnight. The Erastus Corning of the Starin line has not been heard from, but is probably lying at Fort Schuyler, or some other harbor near New York, waiting for the storm to pass over.

The high tide at Savin Rock, despite the high bulwarks, flooded over 300 feet of the New Haven and West Haven horse car tracks at the terminus yesterday, and effectually prevented the cars from running on that part of the line. The roadway was completely washed out in several places. A barn belonging to Mr. Morgan is surrounded by the flood. An old resident of West Haven said yesterday morning that it was the highest tide he had seen Said another gentleman interested in the road lost evening: You see, by a dispatch in the afternoon papers from Meriden that the Daft cars are ordered off in Meriden; that Meriden is tired of its electric street car system that has been in operation there for months, and that some other electric system is likely to be adopted next spring. The chairman next introduced Mr. Hamilton as a speaker, affirming him to be the next senator from this district. Mr. Hamilton was received with much applause and frequently interrupted with it during his address. A BALKY SYSTEM.

Railway Order the Removal of the Daft System-A System That is Safe Because it won't Work-Much Dis-MERIDEN, Oct. 24.-After two years of patient endurance of the Daft system, the officers of the Meriden street electric railway have ordered the Daft company to remove their plant. The system has never given anything like satisfaction, and about all that it has afforded has been injury and vexation. The Daft company had improvements would be made, but the road seemed to continually grow worse. shoe establishment. This consists of a main building five stories high, 75x150 feet, a four-story ell 75x50 feet, a story and a half storage shed in the rear about 25x40 feet, a two-story box factory 30x50 feet and the lumber yard. These were all totally destroyed, together with several hundred thousand feet of lumber. The flames burned fiercely and the entire community was soon aroused. The local fire department fought valiantly and Nashna was called upon for assistance, Niagara No. 2 of that city responding and contributing greatly to the saving of property.

The heavy northeast rain storm which soon set in also did its part toward preventing further destruction. The flames from the immense shoe factory lighted up the sky for miles, and were easily seen from Nashua, eight miles distant. The buildings on either side of the factory were soon ignited. On the east, across a driveway, stood a two-story wooden building was abily bursed and thrown out of his carriage was abily bursed and thrown out of his carriage was abily bursed and thrown out of his carriage. a The only reason that the officers of the reached a point where patience ceased to be a virtue. Says the Meriden Journal:

The whole overhead system of the Dafts has proved to be simply vile. The only argument in its favor is that it is safe. It ought to be. Any electric system that won't work ought to be safe.

But the Daft system is going. The edict has gone forth and the officers of the road say they mean business in ordering the plant out, and the public will hall with joy the exit of the biggest farce for an electric road that was even inflicted upon a community.

The Daft company have monkeyed with Meriden's street railroad for two years and now the service is more unreliable than ever. The new motors are good ones, but as a rule a car cannot run from one end of the line to the other without being delayed half a dozen times by broken wires, trolleys off, or something else.

The recent accident to Fred H. Brown, who was badly burned and thrown out of his carriage by a fallen wire on Main street, was the first serious mishap, but it is simply a case of luck that there were not more.

Between the falling wires, burning cars and interminable delays the service got to be something frightful, and the only wonder is that the Dafts were not thrown out bag and baggage long ago. It has come at last, and the people will send up a prayer of thanksgiving.

The ousting of the Daft system does not mean the abandonment of electricity for the street cars. Far from it. The officers of the road and the public know well that electricity is the only proper motive power for street cars with the right system to utilize it, but there will not be time to put one in before winter here, and consequently horses will be used until spring at least.

Kaiser Kolabaski, some twelve years of age, was in the city court yesterday morning to answer to a charge of throwing a stone at Freddie Mason of about the same age. The offense occured at the corner of Monroe and Lombard streets, the lads living in that vicinity. Mason was struck in the head and severely bruised. Kaiser, unaccompanied by any relative, was in the court room early in the morning to look out for his case. He was cutte nervy, dispite his position, while young Mason, on the witness stand, was very shaky. Two lads testified that Kaiser threw the stone, and the latter admitted it, but said he had been provoked to do it by Mason, who began the difficulty. City Attorney Dailey said that some three or four years ago a boy was stoned and killed in the same locality. Stone throwing was dangerous business and should be punished. Considering the lad's age and his friendless condition, Judge Thompson decided to suspend judgment, after severely reprimanding and warning young Kaiser.

Early esterday morning 'Miss Mary Rourke died at the home of her parents, 110 Wolcott street, after a short liness. The deceased was twenty-one years of age and will be buried on Sunday afternoon, from St. Francis' church.

Fifteen voters were made yesterday, whose residence is in the Eleventh, Twelfth, Fourteenth and Fifteenth wards.

Engene Hamilton, the oyster dealer, so badly bler of the New England Transportation company, has followed the water for many years and is a very successful sea captain.

Yesterday was a lively day around the wharves and the tide, which reached its highest point at about 8 o'clock, was spoken of as the highest in a period of twenty-five years. Others said they had seen just as big a tide several times within that period. But seldom is such high water seen.
Docks were flooded, lumber yards and coal yards were rendered almost impassable, and the floors of many buildings were covered with the rising waters. Floors of several of the oyster shops were covered and for a time oyster-opening was suspended, but there was not much damage from this cause. Small craft became loosened from their fastenings and there was a lively time in securing the boats and preventing property from floating down the rivers.

At the new plant of the Electric Light company on Mill river the overflowing waters caused considerable damage, especially to the newly erected portions of the buildings. The water flooded the boiler room, and it required the constant work of a number of men to bank up the river front and prevent a general inundation. At the G.F. Warner Manufacturing company the tide flooded the roadways, but did no damage to the property, although the floor of the foundry was flooded and business had to be suspended for a time. A scow floated on top of the wharf at Mansfeld's lumber yards, and it required the united efforts of several men to launch the craft.
The storm well nigh prevented oyster dredging, and donsequently there will be a scarcity of oysters to morrow morning. If all the Fair Haven craft have escaped damage at sea they are

New Haven is frequently accused of being behind the times in some respects, and of maintaining a calm quiet which is rarely ruffled. All will admit that it does love to form its own opinions, and that the rumored fame accorded a celebrity elsewhere does not in the least bias its judgment. Nevertheless, there are times when the public pulse beasts faster and stronger than usual. The coming of Mrs. Jenness-Miller under the auspices of the New Haven branch of the Connecticut Indian association has caused one of these crises, and it is the ladies who are chiefly affected. Interest, and curiosity are aroused to know what her drawing power is—why she has lectured everywhere to such crowded houses that often even standing room could not be obtained, and that in New York city at the Metropolitan opera house New Haven is frequently accused of be she had an audience of over four thousand people. The reasons will be apparent to all who attend the lecture at the New Ha-ven opera house this afternoon. No one should miss it. The lecture commences at

Oct. 34.—Clinton society was much stirred up over the marriage of Miss Margaret S. McAlley of Brooklyn to Mr. Charles F. Platts of this place. The wedding took place at the summer residence of the McAlleys on Tower Hill, Killingworth, and was largely attended by friends and relatives of both parties. A beautiful background of autumn leaves was formed in the spacious room, before which the young couple stood and were united by the Rev. Joseph Irons. Immediately after the congratulations the newly married couple started on their wedding tour. They will visit Providence, Boaton and places of interest. There were many costly and beautiful presents, among which the following were most conspicuous: French parlor clock, set of sliver spoons in fine case, piano lamp of exquisite design, an oil painting, a cluster of flowers beautiful in effect, ice pitchers set, handsome paintings, chairs, stands, tables, gold watch, portmanteau, etc. We wish them a very prosperous life, full of joy and happiness.

Prohibitions held their caucus last evening, but have not yet divulged the secret, who nominated, etc.

Excitement in Sugar Refinery at the Opening - The General List Held Comparatively Steady During the Forenoon-The Final Trading Large NEW YORK, Oct. 24. The stock market opened with unusual excitement in Sugar Refinery, which in the early dealings sold down from 65% to 64%. A reaction followed and 65% was reached, when the price was forced off again and the downward m was not checked until 61% had been touched This is a loss of 11½ per cent, since Wednesday evening and 15% since Monday. There was what looked like an organized effort to advance the stock at the lowest price, however, and the raders made a rush to cover their shorts, with the effect of carrying the stock late in the after noon beyond the opening figures of the day nearly 1% per cent. The general list was held ratively steady during the forenoon, but cific and the grangers and material losses were sustained by all of them.
