OPEN EVENINGS.

FUNERAL OF DAVID C. HILL
Attended yesterday. The vicar of the Episcopal church, the Rev. David C. Hill, who died of convulsions at the hospital on Sunday, was attended yesterday afternoon from the undertaking rooms of Lewis & Maycock.

The body of the deceased reposed in an expensive casket with a large silver plate and six large silver vases, which were placed on a floral piece of beautiful flowers. The silver plate bore the inscription, "David C. Hill, died April 12, aged sixty-six years." Only a few friends were present.

Rev. W. D. Moorman conducted the service at the undertaking rooms and at the Westville cemetery where the body reposed.

During the last years of his life, the deceased had been afflicted with a disease of the brain, which was attended by Dr. Durant made arrangements for the funeral.

The death of Mr. Hill, who was well known to many New Haven men, has occasioned the mention of many reminiscences of his life. He was a man of a fine character, and his acquaintance has spoken well of him and many of his good deeds have been recalled. As he was liberal he often gave pecuniarily to the poor, and he was ready and performed many other kind acts.

His right name was David Coghill, but no one knew him by that name, as he dropped the name when he was a small boy at the time he was in the employ of the late Mr. Hill, for whom he worked as a clerk. When David went by the name of Hill, Dave, as he was universally known, was so well pleased with the name that he adopted it and has ever since been known as Dave Hill.

The death of Mr. Hill recalls one of the sporting resorts that flourished in this city from fifty to twenty-five years ago, and was known as "The Woodcock," and stood on the site of the police building in Court street. It was a famous establishment in its day, and especially was it famous for the fine game that was prepared there. The name grew out of the fact that delicious woodcock were served there.

How long "The Woodcock" stood in Court street is not known. It was running long before Dave Hill became one of its proprietors. It also flourished a number of years after the death of the proprietor. At the time referred to "The Woodcock" was the resort of the better class of gamblers, and many of them were in this city at present as in those days. A majority of these men dressed either in the height of fashion or in other genteel style that suited their fancy, and they were mostly men in the prime of life and were well to do.

A central figure in this set was Alonzo Broadwell, familiarly known as Lon Broadwell, who was a fine looking man and was celebrated for his good looks.

He dressed expensively, in quiet taste and had new suits frequently. In referring to Mr. Broadwell, a gentleman made the remark yesterday that he was the best looking man he ever saw, either in New Haven or elsewhere, and especially in the people by his personal appearance. Probably no woman had more compliments for her beauty than Lon Broadwell had for his looks.

The gamblers who frequented "The Woodcock" had a variety of amusements, and the average man of their class. They were called honest, and the fact that they were in the center of the state, where he considered one of the best citizens of the town. Another has retired from active business and settled where he has an excellent reputation.

The place was christened "The Woodcock" in the time of the Pomfret Bros, who managed it for a period. Among the other proprietors of "The Woodcock" prior to the days when Dave Hill presided over its destinies were Peter Tomlinson, Gil Camp and William Bryant, who was called Boston.

It was a great spot for sports. One of the apartments was equipped in regular form as a cock pit, and many a long man was fought there in the presence of the sporting friends and scores of Yale students who were patrons of the establishment. "The Woodcock" was in the height of its glory when Dave Hill became one of its proprietors. He had for a partner Augustus C. Peck, well known as Gus Peck. The firm name was Peck & Hill.

There was a bar bank run in connection with "The Woodcock" and good-sized fortunes were lost and made at this bank, and at every other game of chance of this nature. Hill was a devotee of the game and was familiar with the history of the place and his big "p" was a way that Hill lost several small fortunes at this bank. In time he evaded up his large losses by winning the game, and he was a very clever player. He was a great gambler, and he was a very clever player. He was a great gambler, and he was a very clever player.

OUR EX-AMATORS.
A Subject Which Appeals to Our Municipal Committee. The City's List of Ex-Examiners Receives Another Addition.

New Haven is in a fair way of possessing a fine and valuable collection of portraits of its ex-examiners. In fact, the present collection is an admirable one and a subject of public congratulation as well as credit to our city, and the good work is going on apace.

Already the city has in its aldermanic chamber seven portraits of men who have been mayors of New Haven, viz: Aaron N. Skinner, H. M. Welch, H. C. Lewis, H. B. Bigelow, George F. Holcomb, S. A. York and last, though not least, H. F. Peck. The last of these, Mr. Peck, is the subject of the present article. He is an admirable painter of Mr. Peck, so judged by all admirers to the fact that the representation of the distinguished New Haven artist, Harry I. Thompson, who is occupied in preparing the present collection. The artist has, by the way, painted all the portraits of New Haven's ex-examiners, except the one of Mayor Skinner, which was painted years ago. Three of the portraits, those of Lewis, Welch and Bigelow, were in the city in response to requests made from the common council that friends of ex-examiners present to the aldermanic chamber in view of being to obtain a complete collection of portraits of men who served our city as its chief magistrate. There is of course no objection to the portrait of our city's possessing such a collection, the same as in the case with New York, Boston and other cities, which are distinguished by the possession of some good degree of foundation to the present collection. The portrait will be long added to the collection.

THE COURT RECORD.
Superior Court—Criminal Side—Judge Sanford.
The case which attracted the attention of the public yesterday, and which is likely to continue all through the week was the trial of the selection of Woodbury and others, who are charged with manslaughter in causing the death of the aged painter Cordell Thorneby, by transporting her in a beach wagon from Woodbury to the New Haven hospital, a distance of twenty-six miles, on December 28, when the thermometer stood about zero. The selection was William A. Strong, H. E. Peck, Charles Warner and Mrs. Warner, who were charged with manslaughter in causing the death of the aged painter Cordell Thorneby, by transporting her in a beach wagon from Woodbury to the New Haven hospital, a distance of twenty-six miles, on December 28, when the thermometer stood about zero.

THE ELECTRIC CAR.
Trouble With the Motor and Not With the Invention of Henry G. Thompson & Sons.
The electric car, to which Henry G. Thompson & Sons have applied electrically, was removed from the charging station on Chapel street to the car barn on Meadow street yesterday afternoon. During the last few experiments that have been tried, the car did not run satisfactorily, although its trip from the barn to Chapel street was made better than its short runs of late. Yesterday the reason for the car did not run satisfactorily was ascertained. This defect was in the motor and not in the mechanism made by Thompson & Sons, who purchased the motor from the Northern American Electric Car Co. of Chicago. It was found that the motor was in fact of a different make than that which was guaranteed to have been supplied to the car. The firm who sold the motor had manifested a desire to make it right, which will take considerable time.
