THOSE DISTINGUISHED BILLS. It may be, after all, that the Law school will not have to be enlarged on account of he stimulus to the study of law furnished by the grasping of such a boodle as at at a great deal less money than usually one time appeared to be in eight for the counsel in the celebrated case of the Outs vs. the Ins, which disturbed this State for two years. The majority report of the Committee on Appropriations made yes-terday allows them only half the amount claimed, and the minerity report allows them only a quarter. It is ungracious work to criticise and out down lawyers' bills in such a case as this. And there is no very definite way of telling how much the services rendered were really worth. But it is certain that the size of the bills astonished the people of the State, and that the general opinion is that they were much too high. I was not to be expected that the lawyers would charge less than what they thought their services were worth, though we believe that two or three of them say they have done so. If they have, and if they only get half what they charged they will have reason to roan. But they will probably not refuse to take even half the loaf. Five thousand dollars doesn't grow on every bush, even for a distinguished lawyer, and if a greedy and grasping State won't give any more nore than they will probably get from the State will be sorry that they had anything to do with the affair. But there is no they can count the compliment paid them in callling them into it and their success in clearing it up as something. SHIRTS SHOULD BE KEPT ON. Some people are exhibiting sharp sensiiveness concerning the meaning and apanti-pool room law. They might have exhibited the same sensitiveness over the same words in the old law, but they didn't think of it, and nobody else did. The present outbreak indicates a moral sense and a desire to cleave to the strict letter and spirit of the law which are highly But where is the sense in this sudden and remarkable convolsion? What is it for? Does anybody suppose that the new aw was made to interfere with any honest and honestly conducted sport, or that it will be used for that purpose? It was carefully made, and will be carefully used. The State can congratulate itself if it isn't too carefully used. Of course the bill is too severe for those whose chief ides of and interest in sport is gambling. It was intended to cover just the ground it does, but it was not intended to cover the ground that some of the pro-setors against it say it does cover. And there is excellent legal opinion to the effect that it does not cover that ground. It is to be borne in mind that the pres ent outery against the law is only an extension and an increase of that which went up when it was under con sideration. It is also to be borne in mind that it was freely talked that if the pool room supporters couldn't prevent the passage of a law against them they wanted one that could be talked about in just the way this one is. They are, of course, chuckling over the present situation, and hoping that the agitation will increase until their kind of gambling can again be safely The proof of the pudding is in its esting and the working of the law is in its appli-cation. We advise the wheelmen and others more or less honestly interested to keep their flannel shirts on until the new law has had a fair trial. We don't believe

A novel and most ingenious swindle was racticed in a German town the other day. A man struggling along under a heavy burden suddenly stumbled and crashed through a plate glass store window. The proprietor of the store demanded payment. The porter said he had no money. Pass eraby advised that he be searched ousand mark note was found on him which, he said, belonged to his employer. The storekeeper, however, deducted hundred marks for the value of his window and handed nine hundred marks to the porter, who went away swearing and protesting. A little later the stor keeper discovered the thousand mark not

It is going the rounds that there was man (George) and his son (Henry.) The widow married the son, and the daughter married the father. The widow was, there fore, mother (in law) to her husband's father and grandmother to her own husband. By this husband she had a son (David), to whom she was, of course, greatgrandmother. Now, the son of a greatgrandmother must be grandfather or grandnnels to the person to whom his mothe was, or is great-grandmother; but, in this netance, Anne was great grandmother to him (David), therefore David could not b other than his own grandfather. We do not wouch for the truth of this, and we do not wouch for the mental health of any

To Be Gained by Vella. It seems to be every one's endeavor vary and modify the prevailing cape as much as possible, and the model presented herewith is a very pretty one. It is in mode colored cloth trimmed with brown velvet and embroidered in silk. There is a square yoke of velvet both back and front, and a second shorter cape, like epsewed into the side seams. The cape defines the figure, being tied around the waist with a ribbon sewed inside. It has doubt that it was a famous muddle, and a standing collar of velvet and is lined throughout with shot silk.

The woman with a thin face and a long chin should wear a bag vell, and she must put a knot in the upper edge at each side, thus producing a series of horizontal folds acroes her face. The woman with a pretty, round face and plump cheeks may have the one knot in her vell just in the middle of the upper edge. This will make the folds follow a series of curves from her forehead downward towards her chin or ears. These little things make a great difference in a woman's looks. The bag vell, that is, the vell that encloses the whole face and comes under the chin, should be worn only with a big hat with a wide brim. Properly specking, no vell should ever be worn except with a hat that has brim enough to hold the vell out from the face a little. The smaller the hat and the closer the brim, the smoother the vell should lie over the face. As for the girl with very long lashes, who always draws her vell skin tight over her face that the lashes may sotually stick through the meehes, and so call attention to their length—well, the first thing she knows she will have lashes, but no eyes.

The Victim of Vanity. the mania is not apparently confined to the young) of the mother who put her child into corsets at aix years old, or of the young lady who "enjoys the feeling of tight lacing so much," and never lets her walst exceed 17 inches or 15; if she has no breakfast! We are not surprised to hear that she cannot walk. Are there really such relatives as the one who insisted on young woman reducing her waist to 17 in ches, saying, "No man will marry a girl unless she looks smart." These unfortunate victims of fashion sleep in their cor sets and know no release night or day from the agony of tight ligaments pressing grad ually on soft and tender bones.

The torture of the Chinese lady's crushed toes and the disfigurement of the savage who shaves off her eyebrows, saws off and blacks her teeth in a mistaken search for beauty are mild discomforts compared with this prolong and lifelong discipline. Men should be proud to think how women value their admiration and to what lengths they are prepared to go to be pronounced "smart." These young ladies are satisfied with their courage; they revel in their colf-sacrifice; they are the pioneers and mar-tyrs of progress. Of them it may truly be said, "Out of your own mouth shall ye be judged," for it is they who have revealed the secrets of the prison house, torn the veil from their sufferings and giorified in he pain which, once conque ed, become

Reading the effusions of these devotees of fashion, one is reminded of the lumbra-tions of some wild, fanatical sect of the east, who inflict injuries on themselves and mortify the flesh, rejoicing in pain as means to a future of inalienable joy. What is the joy of a victim to tight lacing! The ion of a contemptible coupled with the trembling hope of obtain-ing a husband. Men must indeed be valuable prizes if they are worth so much mis-ery before marrisgs, not to speak of the unhappiness often caused by them after marriage when yoked in an unsuitable and unsympathetic union. The man who is captivated by the slenderness of his wife's waist can scarce be a very exemplary of highminded member of society. Such one would probably after a year or two of marriage, cease to know how she looked,

New Mormon Temple's Interior. The interior of the temple has an air nystery about it. As a matter of fact, there are portions of the interior which are as sacred as "The Holy of Holies" in the days of the temple constructed by the wise son of David. The basement is divided into several spartments, the larger one being 57 to 35 feet, containing a bap tismal font. The floor is tiled with marble polished to the highest degree of per fection, while the ceiling is of a skyblue tint. The font is of bronze, and, like that in the temple of Jerusalem, rests on the S. H. STREET & CO. stand with their faces toward the east, west, north or south. Grand and impres sive as this apartment is, it is mediocre sive as this apartment is, it is medicore when compared with some of those on the upper floors. One in particular is deserving of special mention. Resplendent in blue and gold is this magic chamber, while the floor is of blocks of wood not more than an inch square, brought from all portions of the world by the missionaries cent out by the church. Another apartment adjoining is still more beautiful. White and gold are used, and the effect is to dazzle the eye. The tapestries are all of the purest white, and are rare and costly. All the basins and swers are of the finestonyx, delicate in tint, and in such profusion that the sight would drive a dealer in this product insane with envy. To be permitted to look upon the magnificent work for an hour is said to be worth a year of one's life and a trip scross the world. The beshive is the emblem of the church, together with clasped hands, and the motto. "Hollness of the Lord." Every handle of door and window has this design, all having been specially made for the purpose. In the basement all the fixtures, including the locks on the doors, the bolts and hinges, are of brava. On the first floor they are of plated gold; ond the second, plated silver; on the third, old silver; and above that of bronze. The woodwork is of oak, all seasoned, and massive in appearance. The coet of the temple is a question which even the most astute follower of Brigham hesitates to answer. It has been estimated all the way from $6,000,000 to $12,000,000. when compared with some of those on the

It is quite a mistake to imagine that the Icelanders are ever called upon to endure sold equal to that of many parts of inland Canada and the United States during a most any winter. During February, for instance, the thermometer at Assinibol registered fifty degrees below zero, and at Edmonton, in the northwest territory, a minus of sixty was reported. Nothing like this is known in Iceland. The very name of the island is a misnomer, just as that of Greenland is. Snow and glaciers there are, no doubt, just as there are vast fields of lava and volcances, the firms of which are

Greenland is. Snow and glaciers there are, no doubt, just as there are vast fields of lava and volcanoes, the fires of which are not yet extinct. But, except on rare occasions, when the Spitzbergen and the East Greenland toe is driven by the wind against the Northern Ceast—bringing cold and fogs in summer, and polar bears which play havoe with the flocks—sea ice is practically unknown in Iceland.

Thanks to the Gulf Stream, the climate of the southern parts of the island, with the exception that it is rather colder, closely resembles that of the north of Scotland, and the northerly districts though the temperature is naturally lower, are not so wet. Thunder storms are rare, and, strangely enough, occur usually in winter, when the temperature is mild for the latitude. The mean is about three degrees above the freezing point, but there are, of course, exceptional frosts, and variations that in a single month will range through twenty-seven degrees. As a whole, however, if the climate of Iceland is neither so hot nor so cold as any part of the settled area of North America, its average is lower. It may not know the meaning of sixty degrees below zero, but, on the other hand, one hundred degrees in the shade is a record which does not appear among the HARTFORD, April 25 .- [Special.]-When the special committee on state prison abuses met this afternoon the hall of the house was crowded as usual, although the cents; ONE WEEK, 15 cents; SINGLE number of lady visitors decreases daily. Warden Chamberlain occupied his usus chair at the foot of the speaker's deak, while Keeper Martin occupied one of the member's deaks where he could hear every word of the testimony.

At the opening of the hearing Chairman Jones of the committee stated that he wished the people would all take seats, as the committee were tired of having spectators standing over the committee's shoulders and plying them with questions was the first witness of the day. He answay from the grounds.

Chamberlain—Did you ever hear of one of these men who go to Hartford escaping? was the first witness of the day. He answered the questions in a bright, easy man-

While I was at the prison there were two investigations, the Kate Cobb affair and the Mrs. Carpenter. The one while I was theres was the Carpenter—warden scrape. That investigation carried on by the warden and the prison directors. The directors at that time were Professor Wayland, Messrs. Hewitt, Murphy, Belden, Newton and Bronson, and I think Mr. Sanford. I did not testify in that affair. There was another investigathat affair. There was another investiga-tion before the directors concerning the cape of a prisoner.

The first I heard of the Carpenter case was when I heard the warden and Mr. Carpenter calling each other liars. The whole of the line of convicts was present at the time, and all heard it. I was in the uard room at the time. Chamberlain—Is it the intention of the ommittee to go into a case, which, while although I was wholly innocent, was very painful to me and my family? This mat ter has been thoroughly investigated by proper authority and myself vindicated. I should at least be accorded the same privileges afforded to a criminal, which are that after being tried once and acquitted, he should not be tried for the same offence

Warden, you are the employe of the state, and the state has the right to examine into your entire doings while at the prison, regardless of what any other board or body may have done. You are not here as a criminal, and the committee have never looked upon you as such; but we must go into the investigation was instituted before I left, but it caused no trouble in the prison that I saw.

was the first witness of the day. He answered the questions in a bright, easy manner, and made a good witness. In replying to the committee's questions he said:

My name is Albert H. Litchfield. I am fifty-three years old and have always lived in Hartford. I was employed in the state prison from October 4, 1884, until July 1, 1889. Captain Sargent was warden when I first went there. Sargent died in 1885, and Mr. Chamberlain then became the warden. I did guard duty at first; then did ex-keeper's duty. I was discharged by General Chamberlain; I never knew what for. Deputy Peck was my first deputy and Fox the last.

I never made any sworn statement in this matter, neither have I been a witness before anybody in a matter of this kind. the Carpenter investigation; also that mat-ters had been happening right along. FRANCIS MULLEN TESTIFIES My name is Francis Mullen. I live in Hartford. I am thirty-two years of age. I was employed at the prison from July 23. 1889, until April 6, 1893. I was a soldier in the regular army before I went to the prison. I had an honorable dis charge from the army, and on the strength of my discharge I got a job at the prison. Senator Root—Personally, I will say General, that I was appointed by the state, as I understand it, to investigate the prison don't care to mention. I got a written discharge. The warden told me there was a letter for me in the box. I read it and found it was my discharge.

I was never reprimanded while in the prison.

I took no part in any investigations while out without guard.

I saw Andrews punished. He was in sane. I saw him taken from the chapel by Martin and Watrous and confined in the cell.

One night I was called to the guard room, where I found Martin and Chamber-

I heard Mr. Carpenter call the general a bastard. That was all I heard. Mr. Carpenter was an instructor for Massey Brothers in No. 6 shop. I do not know where he is now.

The general discharged Mrs. Carpenter, and would not let Mr. Carpenter go into the shop. This was shortly before I was discharged.

I was not asked to testify at that investigation by anyone. I always had respect for Mrs. Carpenter and thought her a lady.

I never had anything to do with the solitaries but know that a German was confined there. The solitaries those days were not the dungeons. The latter were called the coolers. The man was practically an idiot. He was in good physical condition when he came there, but he constantly run down. He was filthy, and

The witness continuing said that he had kept a diary and had made a note of the Andrews affair, as he considered it an exraordinary cruel occurrence.

I have also talked with Officers Hugher and Ross on this Andrews case. Mr. Hughes described to me the manner in which Andrews was dragged to the dungeon with twisters. I have had no con-

After the death of Collon I made up my mind that I was going to bring the state of affairs at the state prison to the public ot analis as the state prison to the public notice, if possible.

I made a note of the paper which had been drawn up by the officer exonerating the warden from the charges made by Sweetland. I signed that paper sithough I knew it to be false, because I knew if I did otherwise I should be discharged immediately.

The paper came to be drawn up in this way. Warden Chamberlain called us all into the club room, and read this first article in the Bristol Press, signed by Sweetland, and said, "men, I leave this to you, do you think it true!" A week later Warden Baleden said there was a letter in the club room for us to sign. The letter was in the hand writing of Warden Hughes, stating that the warden was a kind warden, a good man and not ornel. I signed it to hold my position and for no other reason.

The first-class officers discharged while I was there were Messrs. Powers, Jacques, Gordon, Pomeroy.

In one month fourteen new officers came and went.

The warden changed the duty of the men, but never put anything up in the shape of rules so that the men could do their duty. I do net know why Powers was discharged, but only knew that he and the warden were having disputes for two years, off and on.

As regards these men being allowed outside, one man, a painter named Horner, escaped and, as far as I have known, was never caught. This matter was investigated it for the same reason.

I have heard Officer Martin say that he slighed it for the same reason.

Epps's Cocoa BREAKFAST—SUPPER.

"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fins properties of well selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavored beverage which may gave us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a property nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette.

DEATH OF CHARLES E. PECK uccumbs to Bright's Disease After a zen and a Faithful Friend.

After lingering at death's door for sev eral days, Charles E Peck died at his late residence, 113 Bristol street, at 11:15 yeserday morning. The direct cause of death was Bright's disease. For a few days prior to Wednesday, April 19, he felt ill. He complained of pains in his side. Mr. Peck then went home from big side. Mr. Peck then Bright's disease developed and it was not then thought that he could live later than midnight.

He lingered along until yesterday morning, at times raising hopes that he would recover. His physicians Drs. Sanford and Converse have at no time, however, be-leved that he would live.

Mr. Peck was thirty-eight years old and was born in Philadelphia. His father is Horace H. Peck, who still lives in this city. When still a boy he came to New Haven and has since made his home here.

He attended Webster school and did not go to the High school. He began and ended his business career at the book store, which has been conducted by the Peck family for & Co., 321 East street. He was a member of Hiram lodge, F. and A. M., Phoenix lodge, O. U. A. M., and Hammonassett Tribe of the Improved Order of Red Men

Mr. Peck entered the store with his brother, Henry H. Peck, in 1870, and remained there until his last illness. He was thoroughly conversant with the details of the business, possessed a valuable knowledge concerning the various books that had been published in recent years, and was a very valuable assistant to his brother. Mr. Peck possessed rare good nature and had hosts of friends. There were, in fact, few men of his age in New Haven who were favorably and more better known. His death will be learned with known. His death will be learned with great regret. He leaves a widow and two nildren, a boy of about nine years and a girl of six year. No arrangements in ref-erence to the funeral have yet been made.

Bennett for the defendant.

In his reply to the complaint Mr. Carroll says that the language he is quoted as using is incorrect, and he never intended to hint that Blakeslee & Sons had appropriated property of the city without paying for it.

The Mesers. Blakeslee testified that these words were spoken by Mr. Carroll as appears in their complaint, and Maxey Hiller, who was also called to the stand to testify, that he heard the identical language that has been imputed to Mr. Carroll. An effort was made to introduce newspaper reports of the language, but the court ruled them out. The case will be resumed next Tuesday morning.

NEW YORK PRESS CLUB FAIR. Every Indication That It Will be a Magnificent Success.

The men and women who have been working assiduously and unselfishly for months to make the Press Club fair a nemorable success and to put the noble harities of the Press club forever beyond the necessity of asking outside assistan are filled with hope over the prospect which are highly encouraging. The fair is bound to be a magnificent success. The Grand Central Palace is the scene of ceaseless activity day and night in making the final preparations, and it is hoped that by Monday afternoon everything will be in readiness for the opening at 7 o'clock in the evening. The formal opening of the fair will be preceded by a grand concert on fair will be preceded by a grand concers on Sunday evening, the first of a series of six Sunday evening concerts. The opening concert will be given by Sousa's Marine band, assisted by Signor Campanini, Mme. Furech-Madl, Mme. Van Canteron, M. Guille and Miss Lenora Von Stosch, the violinist. The program is of exceptional interest, and a large attendance is ex-pected.

the fair is an Indian exhibit under the direction of Miss Emma C. Sickels, the famous heroine who once saved General Giles' life, who put an end to the Pine Ridge Indian war, and who is, beyond question, the most popular woman in America among the various tribes of the frontier. Miss Sickels is the chairman of the committee of the Indian congress at the world's fair at Chicago. She has arranged for an Indfan village on the sixth floor of the Grand Central Palace, where families of Cherokees, Sioux and Zunis will show their home life and where there will be a their home life and where there will be a marvelous collection of Indian trophies and relics.

The secretary of the interior has just sent the following sentiment to the managers of the fair, which will be published in fac-simile: Public offices should be created and conducted exclusively for the benefit of these who do not fill them.

Court Notes.

In consequence of Judge Townsend's absence from the city no seasion of the United States court was held yesterday. The court will resume its sessions this morning.

Porter, died yesterday noon at the residence of his daughter, Mrs. Eliza Murphy, on East Main street, Bridgeport. His age was eighty-four, and death resulted from a general breaking down, due to his advanced years. He was born in Charleston, S. C., where his father carried on the saddery business, a trade which the decaded learned. Early in life he removed to Phi'adelphia where he remained until 1850, when he came to Bridgeport. Mr. Porter was an ardent democrat, a devont Methodist, and was formerly an active Odd Fellow. His wife died in 1876. He leaves two sons, William and Samuel, both of whom are in the employ of the Wheeler & Wilson company, and one daughter. to This Country in 1893. "On coming to America it has been my ntention, after absorbing all that was possible of the Columbian exposition, to visit versity towns of this great country, especially those of which I had read and heard much. On leaving Chicago therefore, I started according to this purpose and directed my course to New York. It was with great pleasure that I found myself on the first of October in the old New England city of New Haven-the home of the far-famed Yale university. anticipated much pleasure in making the acquaintance of this classical old town, for had heard it pronounced to tourists of extended travel, one of the most beautiful cities in the world, and had also read much of its leadership in culture, philanthropy and learning. I was therefore prepared to admire all I saw. I am compelled, however, to record this visit the greatest disappointment of my trip thus far.

The observation which struck me most forcibly on this first walk was the absence of all appliances for quelling the dust, which filled the atmosphere and made talking impossible, and breathing very nearly so. In all other cities I had visited strict attention was given to the careful watering of the streets, which is especially needful here, as the town is situated upon a sand flat, and even after rainfall the porous soil is dried in a few hours and flae in all directions at the elightest agitation of cities in the world, and had also read much said: "It is the usual custom of New Haven ladies to wear rich and varied toilettes, but the dust, so destructive to lungs, throat, clothes and complexion, has compelled them to this uniformity of costume during the past summer. Hundreds of modistes and mantus makers have given up business in consequence, and multitudes of seamstresses and work women are thrown out of employment, thus occasioning added misery.

The next day, King the Christian's holyday, I resolved to visit their temples, for I expected to see in this religious New England the highest type of spiritual worship. However, on passing from one to another I found them shut and barred, without exception. A loiterer upon the steps answered my surprised interrogations.
